SEIZE YOUTH IN NEWARK FOR MURDER IN NEW HAMPSHIRE

NEW YORK, Feb. 21.—Wilfred Lord, twenty-four years old of Nashua, N. H., was arrested in Newark, N.J., as a fugitive from justice. According to Detective Halisley of Nashua, who assisted in the arrest. Lord is wanted in his home town on charge of murdering his wife, Ora, December 18 last.

According to the Nashua detective, Mrs. Lord's body was found in a closet in flat that had been occupied and furnished by Lord a few days before the shooting. They had been separated for six months because Lord was alleged to have been jealous.

REMIT by Dominion Express Money Order. If lost or stolen, you get your money back.

Sneers are the weapons of helpless fools.

It is easier to recover lost money than lost time.

Sound sleep is usually the result of soundless sleep.

A Stubborn Cough Loosens Right Up

This home-made remedy is a wonder for quick results. Easily and cheaply made.

Here is a home-made syrup which millions of people have found to be the most dependable means of breaking up stubborn coughs. It is cheap and simple, but very prompt in action. Under its healing, soothing influence, chest soreness goes, phlegm loosens, breathing becomes easier, tickling in throat stops and you get a good night's restful sleep. The usual throat and chest colds are conquered by it in 24 hours or less. Nothing better for bronchitis, hoarseness, croup, whooping cough, bronchial asthma or winter coughs.

To make this splendid cough syrup, pour 2½ ounces of Pinex (50 cents worth), into a 16-oz. bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup and shake thoroughly. If you prefer, use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, you get 16 ounces—a family supply—of much better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made for $2.50. Keeps perfectly and children love its pleasant taste.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, known the world over for its prompt healing effect upon the membranes.

To avoid disappointment ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

An Embargo On Hogs By the United States is Not Unlikely

Ottawa Has No Official Notification of it Yet, However—Situation May Soon Clear Up—English Market May Be Secured for Canadian Exporter.

OTTAWA, Feb. 21.—The Agriculture Department has received no notification from the United States Government of the reported embargo on Canadian cattle. Hon. T. D. Crerar is making inquiries, and is also making an investigation as to the effect on the Canadian live stock if such an embargo is put into effect. Some of the regulations as announced are no more severe than similar Canadian regulations in regard to the export of American cattle.

There is also no official report as to an American embargo on hogs from Canada as intimated. Ottawa would not be surprised if such an embargo was put into effect. The United States has a surplus of hogs. In addition there is a guaranteed high price, guaranteed by the Food Controller to the packers on the understanding they keep up the price to the farmer. The United States naturally feels under no obligation to pay this price to Canada. If such an embargo is put in force it will still further muddle the situation in regard to the market for hogs.

However, the officials believe the situation will soon clear. Sir Robert Borden, Lloyd Harris, Chairman of the War Trade Mission, and Dr. Robertson, the representative of the Agriculture Department, have been carrying on negotiations with the Allies overseas, in regard to the sale of Canadian bacon, and there is good reason to believe announcement will be made shorty of large bacon orders sufficient to clear up all stocks of packers in Canada. This will clear the situation and assure the hog growers of a future market.

The English Market.

The chief difficulty is that England has large stores of American bacon. The Englishman is a fastidious eater, and much prefers the Canadian bacon. The American bacon stored in Great Britain before the close of the war may be sold to the Balkans, and this will give an opportunity for Canada to secure the market. The beef situation also promises to clear shortly.

The situation in regard to wheat is much more complicated. Arrangements have been completed for the sale of the remainder of last year's crop at the guaranteed price. As to this coming year's crop the situation is not yet cleared. A deputation of the Council of Agriculture, headed by F. H. Maharg, M.P., President of the Saskatchewan Grain Growers' Association, went to England in an endeavour to arrange in advance a sale of this year's crop at a price as high as that guaranteed by the United States. There is as yet no report as to the result of their mission, but it is feared it has not been very successful. Mr. Maharg is back to attend the convention at Regina of the Saskatchewan Grain Growers and will make some statement then.

Fixed Price Unlikely

The Manitoba and Alberta Grain Growers have not asked for a fixed price, as in the United States, but there has been a strong agitation for such from Saskatchewan. Whether Mr. Maharg will support it remains to be seen. It would not surprise Ottawa if the United States Government loses a billion dollars by its guaranteed price. The Canadian Government does not feel it would be justified in fixing a price with a possible loss of three hundred million dollars, a sum which would have to be paid out of the Treasury to the farmers. The country cannot afford such a risk; it would be unfair to the consumer. There is no likelihood of a fixed price.

Regular Meeting of the Otonabee Township Council

Township Defers Appointment of Roadmaster Pending Action of County Council Regarding County Road System.

The Otonabee Council met pursuant to adjournment. All the members were present.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed.

A communication was read from the secretary of the local Board of Health of the City of Peterboro requesting the Township Council to have representatives meet the Board at its meeting on Tuesday evening, April 15th, to discuss with the Board the proposal to make the Isolation Hospital free for scarlet fever and diphtheria patients from the township of Otonabee and adjoining municipalities.

Moved by Mr. Eason, seconded by Mr. O'Leary, that the Reeve and Mr. Sargent be a committee to meet the Board.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. Eason, seconded by Mr. Lawrie, that this council defer the apponting of roadoverseers pending the action of the county council in the matter of a county road system; and in the event of the County of Peterboro or four adjoining townships of the county not organizing a county road system, the reeve and deputy reeve be authorized to confer with the Highways Department to have a system established comprising less than four adjoining townships of the county.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. Eason, seconded by Mr. O'Leary that Mr. Anderson, Mr. Eason and Mr. Lawrie, be empowered to deal with certain trees on the highways.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. Lawrie, seconded by Mr. Sargent, that the following accounts be passed:

John Kelly, gravel and damages $5.00
D. McFarlane, ladder for hall.. 12.00
Kingan Hardware Co., oil 2.20

Council then adjourned to Monday, March 17, 1919.

J. J. Moore, Clerk.

Sixth Annual Meeting of Local Council of Women Held Thursday Afternoon

Reports Received Show Satisfactory Progress—Objectionable Posters Left to the Committee for the Suppression of Objectionable Matter.

Secretary's Report.

I beg to present the report of the Peterborough Local Council of Women for the year 18-19 as follows:

The first work undertaken was to launch a campaign for the conservation and production of food. A deputation waited on the Board of Education to enlist its support, which was promised. The Horticultural Society offered seeds for distribution among children having gardens. A garden committee was formed to list the available vacant lots in the city and also to enlist the help of any girls who were willing to work. The problem of providing help for market gardeners was also dealt with. A representative from the Council visited as many meetings as possible throughout the city giving a short talk on the food situation. In this way many people were reached who otherwise might not have been interested. The Agricultural Society offered prizes for produce grown under the supervision of the Local Council. (As a result there were a great many exhibits at the annual exhibition.)

In February Miss Hatton as our representative attended the annual convention for the care of the feebleminded held in Toronto and at the March meeting gave a very interesting report.

Owing to the President's inability to be present, Mrs. Morris represented the Local Council at the National Executive meeting held in Ottawa March 20-22.

At the March meeting, it was decided to arrange for a Lyceum course for the coming winter. Mrs. Booker was present on this occasion and spoke in the interests of Woman's Century.

A very instructive series of papers was read at the monthly meetings by Mrs. Morris, Mrs. Boucher and Miss Lancaster on Citizenship. Later Mrs. Mowat began similar ones on Immigration. It was continued by Miss Lancaster and next year we shall hear more on the same subject by Miss Parker and others.

In response to a resolution sent by the Y.M.C.A. Mothers' Club, the Council decided to have two representatives at the police court every time a woman or girl was on trial. This was done in each case where notice was given. Mrs. McElhiney spoke to the Council as to the great necessity for for such action. In compliance with a request from the National Council, a largely attended service of prayer and intercession was held on Saturday, March 30th in Murray street church.

As it was impossible to obtain carnations, the sale on Mothers' Day in aid of the Supervised Playgrounds Fund, had to be discontinued.

In June when the National Executive met at Brantford, Mrs. Harstone, Mrs. Morris and Mrs. Matthews were our representatives, very interesting reports were given on their return at the June meeting.

No meetings were held during July and August and the Influenza epidemic prevented us having one in October. During this time the Council as a unit was unable to give very much assistance in relief, but individually, splendid work was done. Efforts during this time were being made to sell tickets for the Lyceum course with excellent results.

In December the Council endorsed the candidature of Mrs. Morris for the Board of Education. Unfortunately this venture was not successful, but all are hoping that next year's results will be different.

When the National Executive met in Kingston in January our President attended and at the monthly meeting gave a very complete report.

In response to a communication from Mrs. Hannington, Chief Superintendent of the Victorian Order of Nurses, the Council agreed to lend its co-operation and to assist Miss Gibbs in any way during her proposed visit in the city.

Three of the Lyceum attractions have been given with satisfaction to the subscribers. Ex-President Taft was particularly enjoyable and it was considered a great privilege to entertain such a distinguished guest.

Owing to Mrs. McElhiney leaving the city the position of Police Matron became vacant. The Local Council asked that they be allowed to recommend someone to fill the place. Mrs. Buntin has since been appointed.

Respectfully submitted.

Report of Committee on Equal Moral Standards.

As convenor of this committee I have never asked any person to be a member of it, relying entirely upon volunteer aid and it has never failed.

During the past year the town has lost the services of Mrs. Elheney as Police Matron, her position being left vacant for some months. Our Secretary wrote the Police Commission urging that a woman be appointed, who could devote her whole time to the work. An answer has not yet been received though the letter was written some months ago. We see, however by the papers, that Mrs. Buntin of the Salvation Army, has been appointed, Police Matron, at a salary of $400 per annum. We do not wish to detract in any way from Mrs. Buntin's capabilities or her usefulness, but we are still of the opinion that the small extra expenditure necessary to procure some one who could give all their time to the work would be money well spent in a city the size of Peterborough and where every day instances are coming to our notice which emphasize the great need for prevention of crime. We feel assured that Mrs. Buntin, herself, whose knowledge along this line must be extensive, is entirely with us in this opinion.

We wish to pay a very sincere tribute to the good work of Mrs. McElheney, who in spite of ill health and many duties was able to accomplish so much.

This committee would like to endorse the recommendation of Board of the Children's Aid Society, that a Children's Court be established in Peterboro, and we would be gratified if this meeting would forward to that body a resolution assuring them of our hearty support.

We wish to bring before this meeting the matter of censorship of moving pictures and plays, most of which depict a very undesirable phase of society. If these pictures and plays are placed before the public for the purpose of teaching a moral they entirely fail in their object. They familiarize the subject to such an extent that it fails to shock. A few days ago a certain play came to town and one newspaper reported that the heads of several women's organizations were present and approved. I personally was present and I wish to state that I did not approve and no woman with any moral responsibility could approve for the play itself displayed no moral responsibility. We would ask that this local Council send a resolution to the National executive urging them to press the Government in the matter of better censorship with regard to both pictures and plays. That at least we may occasionally go to the theatre and see a picture or play that is not over burdened with the unseemly side of life.

We have all hoped most earnestly that the world would emerge from this great war with higher moral standards. This cannot be looked for unless each one of us works for it. We have learned by sad experience what propaganda means and the power it possesses. Let us turn this lesson into a better channel and make it serve our own purpose. Let each one of us set forth on a porpaganda of moderation.

Moderation in entertainment; moderation in late hours; Moderation in dress.

We appeal to the representatives of Societies, ever remembering that this work of the local Council is to create a strong moral force in the community, to return to those bodies and in their reports preach the gospel of moderation and perhaps in this way we may do our part in preventing the pendulum of society swinging too far towards exaggeration, indifference and demoralization.

Helping Nature,—the Key to Good Health

Watch for these Symptoms

Kidney or Bladder affections don't develop seriously until Nature has given you plenty of warning that the trouble has commenced.

Constant headaches, dizziness, pains in the back or sides, swollen joints and ankles, brick dust deposits, or painful urination should make you realize positively and beyond doubt that your kidneys are out of order and need assistance.

Nature is wise and never sends out unnecessary or foolish warnings. Her call is for help, and you must do your part by bringing relief to those overburdened kidneys, or suffer the consequences.

Rheumatism, Lumbago, Sciatica, Gravel, Stone in the Bladder, Neuralgia, etc., are all caused by inflamed or congested kidneys and the consequent deranged kidney action. Don't suffer the agonies produced by these diseases. Help Nature to relieve the congestion—to heal these inflamed kidneys and to make them strong once more—by taking Gin Pills.

Gin Pills are the best remedy for Kidney and Bladder troubles on the market to-day. This is a fact proven by hundreds of testimonials. Try them and be sure of instant relief. For sale everywhere at 50c a box. A sample box free if you write to—

THE WIFE

BY JANE PHELPS

Brian Is Pleased That He Has a Son

CHAPTER CXXVI

What Brian had said in his letter about Mollie King made no impression on Ruth—at the time There was a sinister meaning, to her, in the message concerning his chum It was ominous, or seemed so to her. that he should say he had made arrangements for her to know in case he was hurt Perhaps he had already been wounded, she thought, and the letter was simply to prepare her

She smiled as she read again his request for chocolate, and then frowned as she reread the part refetring to Mollie King (this time more carefully). Brian surely praised her unstintedly—well, perhaps she deserved it But down in her heart was the unspoken wish that Brian and Mollie weren't where they could see each other

He had said he was O.K. and loving her. That part of his letter gave her joy, altho she mistrusted his "O.K." But that he said he was loving her, thrilled her and she pressed her lips to the words, as she murmured her love for him

Then, after a day or two of anxious waiting, came another letter. The reply to the one she had written telling of her boy—their son

Once more her hands trembled as she opened the envelope in her haste; once more her eyes dimmed as she read; yet this time with happy tears. Brian had written:

"Dear Wife: Scarcely yet do I realize what you have written, altho I have read your dear letter half a dozen times. Each time the news it contains seems more wonderful; more sweet. And to think you were alone. Alone at a time when you perhaps wanted, if you did not need me, more than ever before I feel choked with gratitude tha you came thru safely; and that you have the child to comfort you, should anything hapepn to me

"Not that there is going to! not now I have to look out for myself so that I may come back to you and our son. How strange it seems, almost hard to believe that I am father to a kiddie. I must behave myself even better than I ever have considered at all necessary. He must have no bad example for a dad. You say he looks like me. Poor little chap. When he had so handsome a mother, it is a shame to inflict him with a copy of my phiz. Yet I can't help being a little glad that it is so; and that you will have something to constantly remind you of me. Kiss him for me, not once, but as often as you do for yourself. I shall be sure then that he is getting his share from me.

"I am more glad than I can express, Ruth dear, that your aunt could be with you It was very sweet and unselfish to let me go without carrying the anxiety I certainly should have had, if I had known of what was to come to you To think that, even at the last, you kept up so bravely with such a secret".

Ruth laid the letter in her lap for a moment and her eyes took on a retrospective look She had not been brave, she had not been unselfish Yet, after all, it would do no harm to let Brian think so—it might do good she thought, as she remembered, with just a touch of bitterness, that Brian had spent that last hour with Mollie King. But she could not long feel bitter with his letter before her—the nearest a love letter he had written since their marriage. The letters she had received when away on her business trips, had never been more than cold little notes, breathing in every line his disapproval. And since he had been overseas ,the few he had sent her had been filled with talk of war, the strange country, and Mollie King. Finally, with a little twisted smile, she resumed her reading:

"I shall fight all the better, all the harder, because of him. The sooner the Huns are downed, the sooner can I come back and make his acquaintance. So you may be sure I shall go gunning them in earnest — that isn't intended as a joke.

"I told Mollie about the boy, and she was delighted. Really I don't know what I should have done, had I not been able to tell some one—some woman. She asked many questions, and wanted to be remembered to you. She teased me a little because I acted so proud and happy. She is still working day and sight, and as I wrote you the soldiers adore her.

"Well, I must stop and go to chow. At times it becomes the most important thing we have to do. And by the way, Ruth, while our cooks aren't quite in Rachels class, we are fed very well indeed. Uncle Sam's men haven't any kicks ming. Good-bye little mother, I wish I might see you to-night and tell you how happy I am, and many other things I don't really care to have a censor read—even if he is a good fellow. Lovingly, Brian,"

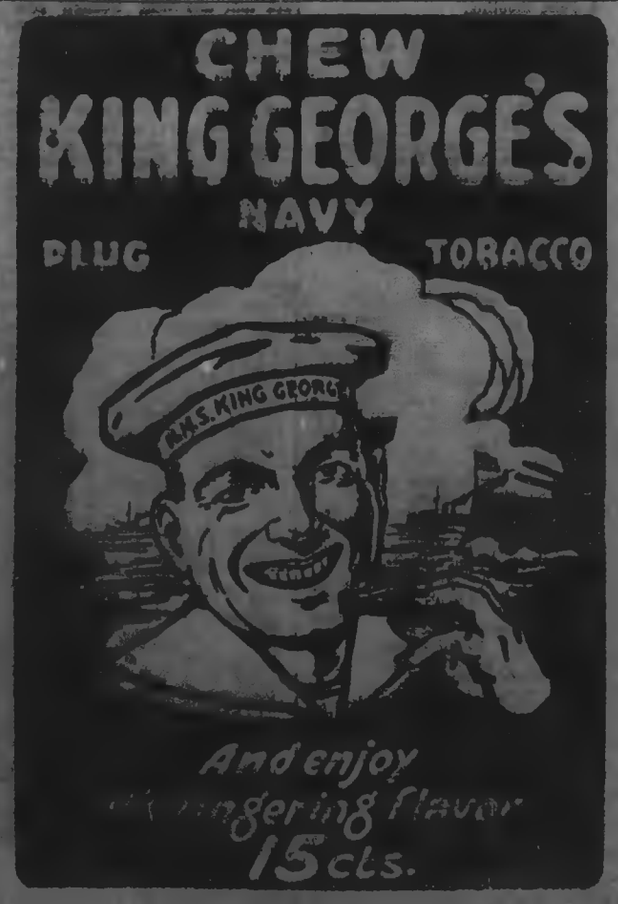
GERMANS WITHDRAWING THE OUT-OF-WORK PAY

LONDON, Feb. 20.—A despatch from Amsterdam to Reuters quotes the Berlin Vorwaerts, the German Socialist organ, as saying that the German Minister of the Interior has issued a statement in which municipalities are compelled to withdraw relief from and refuse further aid to unemployed persons who refuse work for which they are physically fit.



GOWN FOR AFTERNOON WEAR

Terra cotta satin forms this extremely attractive gown for afternoon wear. A touch of medieval days is seen in the peasant-like waist with its lacing at the neck. The skirt is plain with two fine and graceful ruffles.

AMONG NEW VEILS AND HATS

Close Face Covering Is Invariably Worn by Majority of Well-Dressed American Women.

Volumes could be written about the veil of the well-dressed American woman of today. Without the invariable close veil she never ventures abroad in the daylight hours. One sees scarcely three smart flowing veils—if, of course, one excepts the motor veil—during the entire season. All the possibilities of a veil are only realized by one who has experimented with various kinds and colors. It was to the veil that accompanied it that might be ascribed much of the effectiveness of the little hat of henna-brown satin recently seen, says Vogue. A wisp of darker brown feathers shot almost directly back from the left side of the brim, and a dark-brown tracery veil gave wonderful tints to the wearer's delicately bronzed skin. A sable cape thrown over the shoulders completed this harmony of warm brown.

There is a distinct predominance of small hats in the smart autumn millinery. Satin, velvet and beaver are among the most popular materials, and these assume soft dark tones, such as dull blue, gray, taupe and brown. The new henna brown, which is a shade bordering on terra cotta, while considerably in evidence in autumn costumes, has not to any important degree invaded the field of millinery.

WHEN ONE SITS UP IN BED

Knitted Nightingale Most Useful Garment When Ill or Reading in Bed.

The knitted nightingale is one of the most useful garments a sick person can possess, and it is certainly acceptable to anyone who likes to read in bed. Moreover, it is very easy to make and goes quickly. Any light-colored wool is nice for it, especially the silk and wool mixtures that can be purchased in pink, blue and lavender, or, better yet, the fluffed cotton that looks like wool.

The scarf itself it straight, with a purled cuff of 40 stitches done on very thin needles for two inches, and then increased to about 60 stitches on very large needles, and continued until the whole measures somewhere between 50 and 60 inches, depending on the length of the arms of the person for whom it is intended. It usually takes about four balls of wool for one. When it is finished the cuffs are sewed up and part of one edge is turned back with ribbon through to make a collar, and give something to fasten it together. The whole is something like a big shawl, with a place at each end for the arms, and it surely is a joy to the person in bed who doesn't want to catch cold and who hates to keep the arms under the cover.

STYLE SUGGESTIONS

Pockets are shirred at the top so as to appear very full.

Dark tailored dresses are relieved by colored silk piping.

Capes may have small fur-bound slits to act as armholes.

A striking scarf is of black tulle faced with metal tissue.

Tunics which droop in points at the side are very graceful.

Transparent material panels a heavy dress with much effect.

One side of a skirt may be very much draped and the other not at all.

A charming frock is of rose georgette and is sashed with brown velvet.

Rows of military braid form a high choker collar of a blue serge dress.

Three-inch buckles of gun metal give a costume of serge a military effect.

2,200 SAIL FOR EUROPE

The France Carries 847 Poles, Going to Join the Army.

The French liner France sailed for Havre with 300 cabin and 2,000 steerage passengers, which includes 847 Polish soldiers. The rest were Italians and Greeks.

Among the cabin passengers were twenty-two Serbian officers, belonging to the recruiting mission which has been in this country for thirteen months and which has sent 20,000 Serbs, Croatians, and Slavs to join the Jugo-Slav Army in Europe.

William H. Hart, an engineer, from Hartford, Conn., sailed on the France to try to find the grave of his son, Louis F. Hart, who was killed at Chateau-Thierry. He was a member of the 101st Machine Gun Battalion of the 26th Division.

There were also a number of Y.M.C.A. workers on board, including former Charities Commissioner John A. Kingsbury and his Deputy, John H. Dougherty.

SICK HEADACHE and CONSTIPATION CURED BY Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills.

When your liver becomes sluggish and inactive, the bowels become constipated, the tongue becomes coated, the breath bad, and the stomach all out of order.

Then come those terrible sick headaches. They take out every bit of life and ambition, bring on depression, and often end in complete mental and physical prostration.

To keep the liver active, and your bowels moving regularly, is the only way to get rid of the constipation and the distressing sick headaches. Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills will do this for you by stimulating the sluggish liver into manufacturing sufficient bile to act properly on the bowels, thus making them active and regular.

Mrs. Winslow McKay, Jordan Branch, N.S., writes: "I have been sick for a number of years with sick headache and constipation. I tried all kinds of doctors' medicines, but none did me any good. I tried Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills, and after using four vials I am completely cured. I would heartily recommend them to all sufferers."

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills are small and easy to take; and do not gripe, weaken or sicken as so many pills do. Price 25c a vial at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

How Lieut. Beverley Robinson Made His Escape From The Huns

ONLY CANADIAN OFFICER TO ACCOMPLISH THE FEAT—KNEW HE WAS IN HOLLAND WHEN CHURCH CLOCK STRUCK AN HOUR SLOW—PRISONERS IN GERMANY WERE ALWAYS TRYING TO ESCAPE.

The following article is from the well-known pen of Lieut. A. A. Milne, formerly assistant editor of Punch, and perhaps the best known and best loved of all Mr. Punch's contributors.

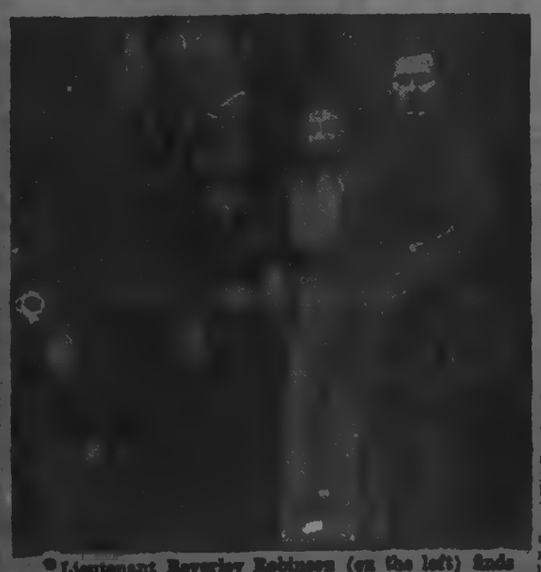
What makes the story that we print here of especial interest to Canadians is that the "X" referred to is Lieut. John Beverley Robinson, R.A.F., of Toronto, who has the unique distinction of being the only Canadian-born officer to escape from Germany during the whole war. He is a son of the late Christopher Robinson, K.C., a grandson of the late Sir John Beverley Robinson, Bart., Chief Justice of Upper Canada, and a nephew of the late Hon. John Beverley Robinson, at one time Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario.

Lieut. Beverley Robinson is arranging to give a series of lectures on his experiences in Germany and escape, under the patronage of His Grace the Duke of Devonshire, and Canada will shortly have an opportunity of hearing some of his extraordinary adventures.

A group of Russian, Belgian and British officers—prisoners of war in Germany—on the extreme right is Lt. Beverley Robinson, R.A.F., the only Canadian camp officer who escaped from Germany during the war.

Crefeld—the show prison camp of Germany. This was the camp to which all visiting neutrals were taken. They never saw the inside of the real thing.

Toys made by Russian officers while prisoners of war in Germany.



Lieutenant Beverley Robinson (on the left) finds some friends.

MORE than two years ago my friend "X," landed quite unintentionally in the German lines. They took his aeroplane away from him (what was left of it), loaded him with chains, and cast him into a dungeon. Or if they didn't do that, anyhow they made him a prisoner. I heard about him from time to time through his mother. We sent each other little messages. One of mine, I remember, arranged a dinner party after the war, which I had fixed then for November, 1916. Lastly I had lost touch of him., I had mislaid his mother's address; and his own, which changed every six months, and was at all times full of long German words quite unpronounceable, were easy to forget.

The other day I was walking, a grumpy soldier, as it might be like this. It was a cold, dull morning, and nowhere seemed many miles away. Then the door opened, and he walked "X," looking as casually and easily charming as ever. Of course, I didn't believe it. I gasped at him, and said: "Good heavens! What are you doing here? You're supposed to be in Germany." He smiled and said: "Yes, I've just escaped."

Adventures—I mean real romantic adventures—do not come my way much. One may be in France for a long time without meeting any; and in London, if I heard that a friend had been nearly run over by a motor omnibus, that is all I do hear. To have a friend who has escaped from prison is to be at least on speaking terms with romance. And if you have always had, as I have had, a special fondness for stories of tame rats, and files concealed in loaves of bread, and disguises, and ropes made from tarmac bedclothes, and all the usual paraphernalia of escape, you will understand how exciting is the world in which I have been living lately.

BIGGEST PART OF PROBLEM.

Of course I don't suppose that escaping from Germany to-day is like escaping from a dungeon in mediaeval times. The file and the tame rat, and perhaps even the torn bedclothes, are unnecessary. On the other hand, once you had escaped from your dungeon you were free, whereas nowadays to get out of prison is I imagine the least part of the problem. It is getting out of Germany which is the trouble. "X" had got out of prison once before. There were five of them and they kept together until the sentries scattered them. Three were caught very quickly, and though "X" had an eighty-mile run for his money on the fourth day, he, too, was brought unwillingly back. The fifth man lay in a di[illegible] at the first alarm. Only the tip of his nose appeared above the mud. He heard the sentries returning and peeped out. It was almost too dark to see anything, but they seemed to him to be empty-handed. So he went on alone. . . . back to England. He and "X" met again at the Carlton Hotel in London six months later. What things they must have had to say to each other!

My friend gave me one little piece of news detail which fits in very well with all the romantic things I had imagined. It is pitched in just the right key of adventure. It appears that he and his companions—there were two of them—had approached the frontier as it was getting daylight. For some time they had been struggling through a nightmare column of barbed wire hedges, and they knew that they must be nearly across, but a single yard might make all the difference. They discussed whether to make a dash for it at once, in the hope of doing the little distance that remained before they were seen, or lie up for the day and go on again when night came. They decided to wait for night. So they found themselves a hiding place, lay there, and I daresay slept. It was broad day when they awoke, and I like to feel that the sun was shining and that the country round them looked very peaceful in the sun. And then, from somewhere behind them, a church clock struck—and they knew that they were safe. For the time was different from the daylight saving German time, and this clock was, by their watches, an hour slow. They were in neutral territory.

From the little "X" said I got a wonderful impression of our prisoners in Germany. Whoever else had his tail down, they had not. You pictured them as sitting miserably there wondering if the war would ever end? Oh, no. England beckoned them with a much more insistent hand than that. Give them but half a chance and they took it. I heard of one heavenly child barely nineteen who made ten attempts to escape. From what I can gather, an ordinary escape never did appeal to him much, and he got more fastidious with each attempt. His friends had an uneasy feeling that for his eleventh effort he would try to bring the Kaiser or Hindenburg, or somebody equally reluctant with him. And his stately mother sat calmly at home, and after telling you of his latest exploits, would say, apologetically: "You see, Cecil is so headstrong." And if Cecil had walked into her drawing-room one day dragging the Kaiser after him, she would have merely said: "Oh, Cecil so you really have come at last! How nice of you, dear! Who is your friend?"

WHEN THE STOMACH IS WRONG LIFE SEEMS TO BE A BURDEN

Indigestion Comes With a Debilitated and Run-down Condition of the System and Can be Cured Through Enriching the Blood.

There are many symptoms of indigestion, such as acute pain after eating, belching of wind, nausea and vomiting, bloating and pains in the region of the heart, a dread of food for the misery it causes. Dieting and the use of pre-digested foods may give ease, but can't cure—they only further weaken the stomach. The work of digestion depends upon the blood and the nerves, and the only way to cure indigestion is to tone up the stomach through the blood to do the work nature intended it should do. The very best way to cure indigestion is through a course of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, which renew the blood, strengthen the nerves and enable the stomach to do its work with ease and comfort. Neglected indigestion means prolonged misery, and a more difficult cure. If you have any of the symptoms of this trouble try the tonic treatment with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills at once, and you will be gratified with the results.

APPETITE FAILED.

Dr. Daniel Dexter, Liverpool, N. S., says: "For years I was a great sufferer from indigestion. I was troubled with gas on the stomach, which caused disagreeable sensations. I was also frequently troubled with nausea and vomiting, which were very distressing. As a result of my trouble my appetite almost completely failed, and what I did eat caused me constant pain. I was continually doctoring but did not get any benefit, and had about made up my mind that I would suffer for life. One day a friend asked me why I did not try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and while I had not much hope of a cure I decided to do so. I had only taken a few boxes, however, when I found they were helping me. Very gladly, then, I continued the use of the pills and in less than three months was as well as ever I had been, able to eat a hearty meal and to feel that life was again worth living. I had also been troubled from time to time with attacks of rheumatism, and the use of the pills cured this as well as the indigestion. It is now over a year since I took the pills, and in that time I have had no return of the trouble.

FOOD TURNED SOUR.

Mrs. J. Harris, Gerrard street, Toronto, says: "About threeyears ago I was seized with a severe attack of indigestion and vomiting. My food seemed to turn sour as soon as I ate it, and I would turn so deathly sick that sometimes I would fall on the floor after vomiting. I tried home remedies, but they did not help me. Then I went to a doctor who gave me some powders, but they seemed to make me worse. This went on for nearly two months and by that time my stomach was in such a state that I could not keep down a drink of water and I was wasted to a skeleton and felt that life was not worth living. I was not married at this time and one Sunday evening on the way to church with my intended husband I was taken with a bad spell on the street. He took me to a drug-store where the clerk fixed me up something to take, and my intended got me a box of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. By the end of the first week I could feel some improvement from the use of the pills, and I gladly continued taking them until every symptom of the trouble was gone, and I was again enjoying the best of health. These pills are now my standby and I tell all my friends what they did for me."

SUFFERED GREAT DISTRESS

Mrs. Albert Hall, Sonya, Ont., says: "I have used Dr. Williams' Pink Pills with wonderful results. For two years I was a great sufferer from indigestion which almost made me a physical wreck. At times my sufferings were so great that I was unable to attend to my household duties. I had smothering spells at times and was afraid to lie down to rest. After every meal, no matter how sparingly I ate I suffered great distress. I tried several doctors but their medicine did not seem to help me in the least. I saw Dr. Williams' Pink Pills advertised to cure this trouble and decided to try them. I had not been taking them long when I felt somewhat improved. This improvement continued and after taking ten boxes I could eat and digest all kinds of food and felt better than I had done for years. You may be sure that I am very grateful for the wonderful relief these pills have given me. I know that they are also a cure for anæmic sufferers, as an intimate friend of mine was badly affected with this trouble, and after taking several boxes she was entirely cured.'

If you are suffering from any form of stomach trouble, or any of the many ailments due to weak, watery blood, do not waste time and money experimenting with other remedies, but begin Dr. Williams' Pink Pills at once. These pills have proved a cure in thousands of cases, and should do so in yours. Sold by all dealers in medicines or by mail at 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50, from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Sixth Annual Meeting of Local Council of Women

the Equal Moral Standards committee, a lively discussion of the billboards for the plays which come to the city arose. One member reported that recently a number of the girls from the Electric Works had come to her with a complaint about the pictures advertising "A Little Mother," which they said caused them considerable embarrassment by way of the comments made by the men as they waited for the car. It was conceded that the pictures were broad in the extreme. Another member said that she objected to a great number of the advertisements, particularly those posted so near to the Collegiate Institute, where her children, like hundreds of others, passed daily. The matter was left to the committee for the suppression of objectionable matter.

Monthly Meetings.

It was decided that the meetings for the coming year should be open to all women this year as they were last and that the routine business should be taken up at executive meetings as far as possible, thus leaving more time for discussion at the regular meetings.

A Resolution.

A resolution concerning the civil re-establishment was read by Mrs. James Kendry, which, after discussion in executive, will be taken up at the regular meeting.

GRAIN MARKET

Cash grain markets weakened slightly yesterday all down the list. There are not wanting plenty of bull argument for keeping the market up, but the bears were very persistent and succeeded in lowering the options, the cash markets following suit. To-day most of the exchanges will be closed in Canada out of respect to the memory of Sir Wilfrid Laurier and in the States on account of Mr. Washington's Birthday holiday.

CATTLE MARKET

A heavy run of cattle on Monday of this week, including a large proportion of heavy, but rough and unfinished steers and butchers steers and heifers of poor quality, caused a halt in the brisk trading which had characterized that of the week before. For the first half of the day there were scarcely any transactions of consequence. Prospective buyers were very deliberate in looking over the offerings, and dealers came to the conclusion that a sharp cut in prices was in prospect. This apprehension was strengthened by reports coming over the wire which seemed to indicate that Buffalo and other United States markets were opening weaker and that lower prices were in order. These surmises proved in part correct, for when trade really opened up in the last hours of the market it was found that prices were in fact lower. The decline was chiefly on the rough unfinished steers, weighty, but coarse, and averaging about 1,200 lbs. These suffered a decline of anywhere from 75c. to a dollar. The general run of butcher cattle also went down to 25c. to 50c. lower than the previous Monday's prices. Fat cows and bulls were the exception and held quite firm and steady at previous week's prices.

The market steadied for Tuesday, with a good clean up of all offerings. Wednesday there was a light run, and the former high prices for practically all grades of cattle came back with a spring, and were fully up to the highest levels of the week before. There was a good demand for both the weak and export trade. All prices held firm for the week end market. Calves were strong.

Sheep and lambs 25 to 50 cents higher.

Hogs closed strong at $18 fed and watered.

BRITISH FOOD PRICES FALL.

Roberts Preparing to Free Important Articles from Control.

LONDON, Feb. 21.—George H. Robertson, the Food Controller, in a statement on the food situation, said:

"During the last three months, from Nov. 1, 1918, to Feb. 1, 1919, prices decline certainly is continuing, and it may safely be anticipated that the next month will show an appreciable fall in food prices as a whole.

"It is recognized that the system of controlled prices, based upon costs, though it was the best and, indeed, the only plan for the prevention of profiteering in the past time of scarcity, is by no means of the same value in time of abundance, and may not in some cases now secure such distribution of food to the public as would be secured by free competition.

"When circumstances permit, the food controller is prepared to free articles of food from control and to trust to competition instead of to costs to reduce the expense of distribution to the lowest possible point. He has already taken this action in the case of tea and margarine. He has the same measure under consideration in respect of bacon, lard, condensed milk, dried fruits, and meat, about which announcement of a substantial reduction in prices will be made immediately.

"There are, at present in England a four weeks' supply of frozen meat, a six and one-half weeks' supply of bacon, seven weeks' of cheese, two months' of butter, eleven weeks' of sugar, and five months' of tea."

A teaspoonful of salad oil will stop a throat tickling cough at nights.

Thirty Firemen Overcome; Blaze May Burn 5 Days

New York, Feb. 20.—New York's famous "smoke eaters" unwittingly became hashish eaters Tuesday at a fire that began early in the morning and, according to Chief John Kenlon will continue to burn for several days in the five-story brick building at Forty-eight street and the East River, formerly the home of the New York City Milling Company, now used by the government as a storage warehouse.

The East Indian drug was formed in great quantities, according to Dr. Archer, Fire Department physician by the burning of hundreds of pounds of jute, or the plant "cannabis indica" from which hashish is derived as well ordinary rope. Combined with the suffocating fumes of burning sulphur, which also were in the building, the intoxicating fumes of the burning drug overcame at various times more than thirty firemen and even made useless the gas masks of the Rescue Squad.

Five firemen were so overcome by the fumes that they were removed to Belleveue Hospital for treatment and many others were sent back to their fire houses after resuscitation. Those removed during the day were Patrick Gaffney and George J. Kennedy, of Engine Company No. 8, Frank Fieffer of Truck No. 2; James Smith of the Rescue Squad and Walter Adams of Engine Company No. 21. It was Gaffney's first big fire, he being a probationary fireman only at work seven days.

The fire started on the second floor from spontaneous combustion, it is thought. Eight men were on ladders seeking entrance to the building when an explosion blew out the second story shutters and the first gas cloud enveloped them. They dropped or fell twenty-five feet to the street. For a time shifts of three men working for a period of seven minutes each was tried. But by four o'clock flames burst from the windows of the third and fourth floors and all attempts to fight the fire from the inside were abandoned. It was expected momentarily that the walls and floors would cave in.

Among the men treated for more serious cuts by falling glass were James Reilly, of Engine Company No. 65 and Charles Yunhold, of Hook and Ladder No. 5.

TORTURING, ITCHING ECZEMA

Mrs. J. B. Forth, Pespebiac, Bonaventure Co., Que., writes:—"Thanks to Dr Chase's Ointment I have been completely cured of that horrible disease eczema. I was held as if in prison from going among other people, for I was ashamed of the raw, flaming sores. Doctors could do nothing for me and I was almost desperate with suffering when I began to use Dr. Chase's Ointment. In one month I was completely cured and think that this was little short of a miracle."

NO LOVE, BASIS OF WIFE'S DIVORCE SUIT

NEW YORK, Feb. 21.—Avowed lack of love for his wife is alleged by Mrs. Rose Walker in suing Harvey Walker, a broker, of No. 25 Broad street, for a divorce. She caused his arrest upon the plea that he was about to leave the jurisdiction of the court. With an order signed by Justice Bijur, of the Supreme Court, Deputy Sheriffs Murphy and Eisenstein took the broker into custody at his office. He immediately obtained his release by providing a bond of $500. In her complaint Mrs. Walker says her husband declared he had not excuse for leaving her except she no longer attracted him.

WOMEN STOWAWAYS ORDERED DEPORTED

NEW YORK, Feb. 20.—Giving vague answers to a Board of Inquiry regarding their reasons for coming to the United States, the two young women who had stowed away on board the United States cruiser Louisville, which arrived with troops at Hoboken on Sunday, were ordered deported.

They had been taken to Ellis Island by a naval officer and were taken in charge by Byron H. Uhl, acting Commissioner of Immigration. To a special Board of Inquiry they described themselves as Margaret Smith and Bowie Bell, clerks, in Liverpool. At the close of the hearing it was announced that they would be deported, as they were "likely to become public charges." The finding of the Board was forwarded to the Commissioner General at Washington for final action.

Another hearing is going on in the Navy Department to determine how the young women got on board the transport. One commissioned officer and two petty officers, it is understood, are charged with arranging of the young women's presence on board.

ADMIRAL JELLICOE TO LAND IN SAN FRANCISCO ON OCT.

LONDON, Feb. 21.—(via Montreal) —The proposed itinerary of Vice Admiral Viscount Jellicoe, formerly commander in chief of the British Grand Fleet, who will leave Portsmouth aboard the H. M. S. New Zealand on February 20 on a trip to the Far East and the Pacific coast of North America, will bring him to San Francisco on October 20, 1919.

The announcement says the dates should be regarded as tentative, as they depend mainly on whether the Admiral's work in the various countries can be accomplished in the allotted time. The Admiral probably will disembark at San Francisco and go to Ottawa by train.

HAD SEVERE COLD AND TICKLING SENSATION IN THE THROAT.

This trouble is most distressing and is caused from a cold that has settled in the throat.

How many people have lost a night's sleep by that nasty, tickling irritating sensation in the throat!

The dry, hard cough keeps you awake, and when you get up in the morning you feel as if you had had no rest at all.

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup which is composed of the most soothing and healing expectorant herbs and barks, combined with the lung healing virtues of the world-famous Norway pine tree, will give almost instant relief in all cases of this nature.

Mrs. G. C. Routley, Bright, Ont., writes: — "I take great pleasure in writing you of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup.

For several weeks I was troubled with a severe cold, and a tickling in the throat. I tried numerous remedies, but found no relief until I used Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, which I had heard so much about, and on taking one bottle got instant relief. I highly recommend it to those who need a quick cure."

So great has been the success of "Dr. Wood's" in curing coughs, colds, bronchitis, etc., it is only natural that many imitations have been placed on the market. The genuine is put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; price 25c. and 50c. Manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co. Limited, Toronto, Ont.

LONDON DENIES REPORT PRINCE OF WALES WILL WED

LONDON, Feb. 21.—The Official Press Bureau says a report from Paris of the impending announcement of the engagement of Princess Yolando, daughter of the King of Italy and the Prince of Wales is unfounded.

The report from Paris says the French press is discussing the simultaneous presence in the French capital of Queen Helena and Princess Yolando and the Prince of Wales. The French newspapers go on further to say the object of the Queen's visit is to fix a date for the formal announcement of the Princess and the Prince of Wales. The newspapers declare the engagement may be expected immediately after the signing of the peace treaty and that the wedding will take place early next spring.

WINTER HARD ON BABY

The winter season is a hard one on the baby. He is more or less confined to stuffy, badly ventilated rooms. It is so often stormy that mother does not get him out in the fresh air as often and she should. He catches colds which rack his little system; his stomach and bowels get out of order and he becomes peevish and cross. To guard against this every mother should keep a box of Baby's Own Tablets in the house. They regulate the stomach and bowels and break up colds. They are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Tells How Colonel Bolling Saved Life, Then Died Fighting

Chauffeur Who Was Trapped With Officer, But Escaped, Describes Battle With Germans

GREENWICH, Conn., Feb. 19.—The heroic manner in which Colonel Raynol C. Bolling, of the Twenty-second aero squadron, met his death near Amiens in the Great German drive last spring, was told accurately for the first time here by Charles D. Lanier, of this city. Mr. Lanier has first hand the story of Paul L. Holder, Colonel Bolling's military chauffeur, who was driving the Colonel when they were trapped and where life the dead officer saved.

Recently, in Paris, Holder, who has been held prisoner by the Germans, made a deposition before his commanding officer in which he gave all of the incidents and details leading up to Colonel Bolling's death. His statement has been read by Colonel Bolling's son and close friends.

Colonel Bolling had been relieved of his work of organization in France just a few weeks before his death. He had been preparing for the aeronautical activities of the American army. His work of organization had been highly successful, such men as Lord Northcliffe, Lord Rothmere and Carl B. Cravath placing Colonel Bolling in the front ranks of the Americans who crossed the Atlantic to make possible the wonderful showing of the American forces in France.

General Pershing had given Colonel Bolling a fighting command in the American aero forces, and had assigned him to the British Royal Flying Corps for a short period of observation. He had expressed his delight, and was on his way to the front when the end came. The statement of Holder reads as follows:—

"The daily gains of the enemy were so unprecedented that the first day of the drive the British were not aware that the Germans were so near. On March 26, I was driving Colonel Bolling in the direction of St. Quentin and the German lines. He had with him his bed roll and valise and was prepared to stay on the firing-line.

"At a point some twenty-six kilometers east of Amiens we met a group of British officers, and Colonel Bolling asked about the enemy positions. He was informed that the German line was three miles to the east and not near him. We drove on and with in a few minutes came to a slight rise, from the top of which the old Somme battle field could be seen.

"We were approaching the summit when from both sides of theroad concealed German machine guns opened fire upon us. I attempted to race the engine to avoid having it sall, but machine gun bullets penetrated the radiator and we were trapped. Colonel Bolling ordered me to jump and seek cover, and I leaped into a shell hole.

"I could see Colonel Bolling loading his automatic in a manner as cool as though he were at target practice. I was unarmed. Suddenly there appeared on the rim of the shell hole where I was hiding a German officer. He began firing at me point blank the bullets coming close to my head. He had probably fired three times when Colonel Bolling, an expert pistol shot, took deliberate aim and shot him dead.

"About this time a second German officer came over the rise and opened fire on Colonel Bolling, who was still in the automobile. He fired twice the second bullet passing through Colonel Bolling's heart, and he fell dead. I tried to play dead, but was made prisoner and taken back of the German lines. I saw the Germans ransack the Colonel's valise and examine his papers. I was later sent to a German hospital, where I was to work until the armistice was signed."

Colonel Bolling was the first American officer of his rank to give his life for his country. The aero field at Washington, D. C., completed last wear, has been named Bolling Field in memory of him. The dead officer lived part of the time in this city and the rest in New York city.

Predicts Terrible Massacre if Allied Troops Quit Russia

Returned American Expresses Surprise at Demands for Withdrawal of the Army.

WASHINGTON, D.C., Feb. 20.—Roger E. Simmons, who recently returned from a mission to Russia for the Bureau of Commerce, told the Senate committee investigating lawless agitation in this country that if the American and allied forces were withdrawn from Russia the Bolsheviki would engage in one of the most terrible massacres the world had ever seen.

The witness said he was surprised at the demands being made for the withdrawal of the American forces and told the committee that every time the American and allied soldiers had found it necessary to give up ground in Northern Russia the Bolsheviki had swept in and inaugurated an orgy of murder of peaceful citizens. He said that before leaving Archangel on November 3, he had found that the American troops were well supplied and had performed great acts of heroism which yet remain to be told. All the Russians in the northern district were sympathetic with the allied forces, he said, and were praying that they would not be removed.

Evidence which he said showed that Germany was responsible for the outbreak of Boshevism in Russia was presented to the committee by Mr. Simmons. It included a sworn statement of a Russian that just before the Tsar's government was overthrown he was sent by the German Imperial Chancellor to Switzerland to determine which of the Russian socialist schools ther, was the most radical and to offer the leader 5,000,000 marks if he would send his men into Russia to spread their propaganda. After going to Switzerland the Russian reported that the school headed by Lenine was the most radical, but he recommended that the services of Lenine be not engaged, as the result, if successful, would mean a terrible catastrophe for Russia.

Fireman Killed, Ten Overcome in Steamship Blaze

Battalion Chief Lost Diamond Studded Badge and $350 in Cash.

Battalion Chief Loses Diamond Badge, Watch and Cash at Brooklyn Fire.

NEW YORK, Feb. 20.—One fireman was killed and ten were overcome at a fire on board the steamship K. I. Luckenbach, moored at the Bush docks, foot of Fiftieth street, Brooklyn. The dead:—

Kundie, Alfred, twenty-nine years old, of No. 427 Fifty-sixth street, Brooklyn, attached to Truck No. 114

Those overcome were James J. Langan, chief of the Fortieth Battalion; Leonard Gebhard, captain of Engine Company No. 223; Richard Collins, captain of Hook and Ladder No. 100; John J. Cashman, captain of Engine Company No. 278 and six firemen of Engine Company No. 228. All were overcome by smoke when seeking to rescue Fireman Kundie, who feel forty feet through a hatchway to his death.

Battalion Chief Langan, who was revived by a pulmotor, discovered that a diamond studded badge presented to him by his associates for twenty years' service, $50 in cash, a $350 diamond stickpin and a gold watch and chain valued at $150 had disappeared from a pocket of his blouse. He declared to Police Captain James Gillen, of the Fourth avenue station, that he had been robbed, but the police were inclined to believe that they had fallen into the hold.

The fire was discovered about seven o'clock in hold No. 3, which was loaded with hay. It started, it is believed, from spontaneous combustion, as the hatch had been battered down for several days preparatory to leaving on Friday. For half an hour the local fire department of the Bush Terminal fought the smoldering blaze, aided by the crew of the big freighter before summoning the city department.

As soon as Battalion Chief Langan arrived and learned that in other holds the vessel carried gasolene and crude oil he sent in a second alarm and gave orders to flood the hatch. He also sent for the rescue squad from Manhattan.

Kundie was one of a group manning a nozzle on the edge of the hold, when the smoke overcame him and he tumbled in. Chief Langan called for volunteers to go in with him and the captains responded. They succeeded in finding Kundie's body and sending it aloft, but by that time the rescuers were overcome themselves.

The six firemen from Engine Company No. 228, led by Lieutenant Hugh Kelly, then went in after the officers. They had carried their bodies up a ladder when they, too, were made unconscious by burning hay. By that time the rescue squad was on hand with oxygen helmets and brought out the six firemen.

Police Captain Gillen summoned his reserves and ambulances were called from the Methodist Episcopal and Holy Family hospitals. The prostrated men were resuscitated in the street outside and returned to work.

The K. I. Luckenbach has been in the army transport service as a freight carrier ever since this country entered the war.

Don't Hawk, Blow, Sneeze or Cough, Use "Catarrhozone"

When germs attack the lining of the nose, make you sneeze and gag—when later on they infest the bronchial tubes—how can you follow them with a cough syrup?

You can't do it—that's all. Cough syrups go to the stomach—that's why they fail.

But Catarrhozone goes everywhere—gets right after the germs — kills them—heals the soreness—cures the inflammation—makes Catarrh disappear. Not difficult for Catarrhozone to cure, because it contains the essences of pine balsams and other antiseptics that simply mean death to catarrh. Large size costs $1.00 and contains two months' treatment; smaller sizes 25c and 50c, all druggists and storekeepers.

REFERENDUMS IN 14 STATES TO BE ASKED ON DRY AMENDMENT

CINCINNATI, Feb. 21.—Referendum elections will be sought in fourteen States of the Union on the federal prohibition amendment, according to an announcement made by the National Association of Distillers and Wholesale Liquor Dealers here. The States are Arkansas, California, Colorado, Idaho, Maine, Michigan, Missouri, Nebraska, Nevada, New Mexico, Ohio, Oregon, Utah and Washington.

Leading distillers say they believe at least thirteen of these fourteen States will reject the amendment and thus defeat national prohibition.

Thousands Present at the Funeral of Sir Wilfrid Laurier Which Was Held This Morning

The Old Chief Made His Last Journey This Morning Accompanied by a Representative Multitude—Stream of Floral Tributes.

AMONG THOSE PRESENT

(Special to The Examiner.)

OTTAWA, Ont., Feb. 22. — Sir Wilfrid Laurier has made his last journey.

Accompanied by the greatest and most representative multitude which has ever done honour to a Canadian public man, the old chieftain was this morning borne to his grave.

No man can calculate the number of those who followed the dead statesman, much less the multitudes which lined the way. When the head of the cortege had reached the Basilica, in which prayers for the repose of his spirit and orations upon his greatness were delivered, the end of the long procession was not far from the starting point.

And, the funeral of Canada's old statesman literally forced its way for the entire distance through the massed crowds which lined the way. It was more than a tribute to the honoured dead; it was a spontaneous expression of the feelings of a people. There is something perfunctory and formal about the ordinary funeral; this was majestic in the widespread depth of sincerity that prevaded the vast assembly which gathered to see the old chief carried to his last resting place.

A Mourning Public.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier died six days ago. Since that time a mourning public has offered him tribute as never was paid to any Canadian public man. He died as he lived, beloved. He was buried as he died, beloved. Ten thousand people passed before his bier when it lay in the warm drawing-room of his home. The door which has ever been open to his friends in life was even wider open to those who came to see him in death. The beautiful old room was massed with flower offerings until it seemed as though they must encroach upon the space left for the passers-by. Since that time and during the two days when Sir Wilfrid hald the floor for the last time in the Commons, thirty thousand people, young and old, rich and poor, men and women of every creed, race, political affiliation and walk in life represented in this broad Dominion of Canada, passed before him and did him reverence.

When he left it was an avalanche of bloom which massed the walls and hid the pallors and suged against the bier itself. For days after the burial the stream of floral tributes will continue to come to the capital.

The Pallbearers.

At 10 o'clock the old Chief left the Commons, the heavy bronze casket being borne by eight stalwart members of the Dominion Police, followed by old friends of the dead statesman who had been chosen as honourary pallbearers. Sir Thomas White, Acting Premier, and Sir James Lougheed, Government leader in the Senate, were there; those represented political opponents, but not enemies, for he had none. Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux, Hon. Charles Murphy, Jacques Bureau and James A. Robb, seat-mates in the Commons were included among them. Sir William Mulock, Hon. Sidney Fisher and Sir Allen Aylesworth, members of the old "Cabinet of the talents," which Sir Wilfrid formed in 1896, were among them. Hon. Senator Belcourt, David, Dandurand and Edwards, old friends in the Upper House, and Sir Lomer Gouin, Premier of the dead statesman's province, and Mayor Lavigueur, of the city he represented for two score years and more, was also included, and last, but not least, Hon. Frank Oliver, who so staunchly fought beside his chief in the dark days when others fell away from him, and who went down to defeat fighting for him, completed the complement of the honourary pallbearers.

As the hearse moved forward, there dropped in behind in order of their precedence, those who followed him to the Cathedral and thence to his last resting place those who were chosen, or who chose to form the procession.

Floral Offerings.

Before the hearse moved car after car laden with the thousand of floral offerings. Behind it came the honourary pallbearers and the mourners, whose grief was most intimate. The Governor-General and his staff and representatives of the former Governor-General, the Duke of Connaught, a warm personal friend of Sir Wilfrid came next. Lieutenant-Governors, archbishops, and the heads of churches, members of the Cabinet and the Speaker of the Senate, the

STATE OF SIEGE IS PROCLAIMED

(Special to Examiner.)

PARIS, Feb. 22. — A state of siege has been proclaimed in Budapest, following a communist riot there Thursday evening according to a Zurich despatch to the "Matin" to-day. The insurgents are said to have stormed the offices of the Socialist newspaper, "Nepzava," occupied the principal railway station and the post office. Government troops recaptured the station.

Naval Losses Were Heavy

German Account of the Battle of Jutland—Many Vessels Sunk

(Canadian Press.)

LONDON, Feb. 22. — There is no reason to doubt the substantial accuracy of the German official account of the losses suffered by the German fleet in the Jutland naval battle, May 31, 1916. It is learned officially by Reuters that the German figures published June 16, 1916, showed the casualties to the fleet's personnel were officers killed or missing 172; wounded, 41; other ranks killed or missing 2,414; wounded 440; total 3,076.

Among the German battle ships or battle cruisers, one was sunk, one beached, five put out of action but repaired months afterwards. Four light cruisers and five torpedo boats were sunk, and many put out of action.

A complete record of the British forces engaged in battle shows 24 dreadnoughts, eight battle cruisers, 18 cruisers, 18 light cruisers, and 78 destroyers.

The German forces included 21 battle ships, 16 cruisers, 77 destroyers. It is clearly established however that of ships which actually came into action the perponderance of force was held by the Germans.

ANTICIPATE UNION

(United Press.)

BERNE, Feb 22. — With Premier Eisner, Interior Minister Auer and Deputy Osel of Bavaria, dead from assassins' bullets, the victims' friends have begun to take revenge into their own hands, according to the despatches received from Munich to-day.

Deputy Autel, author of a violent press campaign against Eisner, is said to have been killed. His body was riddled with revolver bullets fired by a number of identified men. Several other attacks are reported to have been made on the enemies of the present government.

Union with Austria.

The Berlin Vossische Zeitung says that hereafter German-Austria will be represented in the German government.

That indicates that the Germans are anticipating union with Austria, which was practically assured in the latter country's recent national elections.

A Great Play At the Grand

Original New York Production of "The Man Who Came Back" Will Be Seen To-night.

Peterborough theatre-goers have an unique opportunity to-night of seeing a real metropolitan production in the appearance at the Grand of the famous play, "The Man Who Came Back." Many local people who saw this production in Toronto earlier in the season are most enthusiastically advising their friends not to miss this chance. To-night's presentation will be even more striking than that seen in Toronto, for the company visiting here is the original New York cast direct from the Play House, who are on their way to Indianapolis to commence a western run. The offering to-night promises to be the theatrical event of the season and no local theatre-goer can afford to let this opportunity slip.

Getting Ready For Convention

Well-Known Speakers Will Visit Peterborough.

Those in charge of the arrangements for the Sunday School Convention, to be held in Peterborough on Sunday and Monday, March 2nd and 3rd, are leaving no stone unturned to make it absolutely the premier convention, both from point of interest and profit to teacher, scholar and parent.

The representatives of the various churches have been meeting regularly and the enthusiasm is like a rolling snowball, gradually increasing in size and importance. At 4.15 p.m. on Sunday, February 23rd, the representatives of the churches and Sunday Schools will meet in Murray Street Sunday School parlour to complete arrangements. It is hoped by the committee that each Sunday School superintendent will personally see to it that his school is fully represented at this meeting. That their interests may not be overlooked a full representation is imperative next Sunday they say.

There will be here from Toronto Messrs. Halpenny, representing the Methodists; Dayfoot, representing the Baptists; Hiltz, representing the Anglicans, and Meyers, representing the Presbyterians, who will speak in the interests of Sunday School work, its ethics and importance in the community.

SPECIAL SERVICES AT ST. ANDREW'S.

The Rev. Mr. Rowand will begin to-morrow night the following series of sermons on David:

February 23rd—"David and Samuel."

March 2nd—"David and Goliath."

March 9th—"David and Jonathan."

March 16th—"David and Bethsheba."

March 23rd—"David and Absalom."

March 30th—"David the Poet."

David is easily the chief of all Biblical heroes for no fewer than 91 chapters of Scripture are given to him, and the story is full of stirring incidents. More space is given to him than to any other man of the Old Testament. David was evidently a fascinating character.

Special music will be provided at all these services. The pews in the church are all free and the public is cordially invited.

The Annual Commencement Exercises Held at Collegiate Institute Last Evening

"Our Unreturning Brave" Was the Subject of An Interesting Address by Mr. H. R. H. Kenner—List of Prizewinners—Diplomas Presented to Successful Scholars.

A REPRESENTATIVE GATHERING

Last evening the large and commodious Assembly Hall at the Collegiate Institute was crowded to overflowing on the occasion of the annual commencement exercises. Besides the pupils, their friends and relations, members of the legal and medical professions and local ministers were present in large numbers. Most of the members of the Board of Education were also present. Mr. Roland Denne, chairman of the Board of Education, was the chairman of the evening, while associated with him on the platform were Mr. H. R. H. Kenner, Principal of the Collegiate Institute, and Mr. Joseph Wearing, M.A.

Mr. Denne, in his opening remarks, referred to the work of the different departments of the Institute, which had been entirely satisfactory to the Board.

The Music.

The music played by some of the pupils of the school was a revelation, and especially well received was the "Prelude," played by Mr. Otto Gliddon. The instrumental, which was composed by a Russian, represents the hum of the serfs and criminals in Siberia working in the vicinity of a river. The sharp crack of the taskmaster's whip can be heard as some dilatory or worn-out prisoner fails ti keep up to his fellow-convicts in the work upon which they are working. Then the drone of a mighty host talking in their natural tone can be gradually heard rising and falling, quietly and then more loudly as a different phase of the work is entered upon by the convicts. The playing of Miss Isabel Donnelley and Miss Jean Elliot was also thoroughly appreciated.

The Diplomas.

Mr. Joseph Wearing, before presenting the Departmental Diplomas, gave a brief address on "The Benefits of Education." He reiterated his statement that the benefits of education could not be estimated in dollars and cents. A good education, coupled with ambition and plugging, will open up any position in the land to a person. In order to get a good education, application must be the motto of the student. Only through unflinching application could a good, thorough, present-day education be obtained.

The following pupils were then presented with their diplomas by Mr. Wearing:

Miss Gretchen Gladman was awarded the Second Edward Blake Scholarship in Moderns at Toronto University. Miss Gladman also won the William Dickson Scholarship in Moderns at Trinity College, Toronto.

Faculty Entrance, Part I.

Isabel Baird (honours), Margaret Conal, Maida Conner, Ruth Denike, Mary Eastwood, Wilhelmine Perrin, Rita Robb, Elizabeth Hardwicke.

Faculty Entrance, Part II.

Helen Halsted (honours), Olive Armstrong, Teresa Moloney, Ethel Steele.

Middle School Normal Entrance

Florence Pammett (honours), Ralph Meserve (honours), Jean Anderson, Violet Buckham, Minto Brownscombe, Mary Campbell, John Carlisle, Ralph Cowan, Kathleen Dunbar, Gordon Ego, Gladstone Finnie, George Green, Aloha Horn, Scott Hutchison, Quinnie Johnston, May McNevan, Audrey Miller, Ethel Morrison, Elizabeth Mowat, Agnes Neill, Russell Pogue, Vera Porteous, Grace Pulvis, Ethel Rowe, Janet Sanderson, Florence Staunton, George Munro.

Lower School Normal Entrance.

Madeline Stinson (honours), Katie Anderson, Edna Conner, Marion Clark, Sophrona Craig, John Hardill, Verda Huston, Mabel Hutchison, Alberta Hunter, Marjorie Ketcheson, Annie Matchett, Gertrude Middleton, Donald Munro, Jessie Pollard, Allan Robinson, Georgina Shearer, Donald Sanderson, Daisy Webber.

Junior Matriculation.

Jean Anderson, Earl Barrie, Minto Brownscombe, Violet Buckham, Mary Campbell, John Carlisle, Ralph Cowan, Gordon Ego, Gladstone Finnie, George Green, Aloha Horn, Quinnie Johnston, Claire Mason, May McNevan, Ralph Meserve, Elizabeth Mowat, Florence Pammett, Russell Pogue, Vera Porteous, George Munro.

Partial Matriculation.

Charles Elliott, Bernard Park, Donald Fitzgerald.

Honour Matriculation.

Daisy Bergoine—1st Class Honours in German, 2nd Class in French, and 3rd Class in English, Latin and Mathematics.

Stanley Braund—3rd Class Honours in French.

Mr. Carl Browne, M.A., mathematics master, presented the athletic prizes and medals to the athletic prize-winners for 1918. He spoke of the great need of a gymnasium in connection with the school, and that they couldn't get along without it much longer. The athletics this year, as every year, were on a creditable plan, in spite of the disasters of the Rugby team, which was downed by the Belleville team twice. The epidemic of influenza also contributed to curtailing athletics last year.

Staff Cup—Mr. Donald Fitzgerald.

Senior Championship Medal — Mr. Donald Fitzgerald.

H. S. Macdonald Cup — Jack Porteous.

Junior Championship Medal—Jack Porteous.

Winners of Medals—Charles Elliott, Bernard Park, Graham Eastwood, John Fanning, Amess Conway, James Pogue, Karl Kirn, Gordon Veeman, Madeline Pulkinghorn, Miss F. Adams, Miss D. Mills, Miss Ada Shelton, Miss M. Connal, Miss F. Auston, Miss Doris Cowan, Miss D. Clegg, Miss A. Milburn.

The A.O.B.B.

Mr. G. O. Cameron, a member of the Board of Education, presented the humorous side of school life and his experience while a youngster were not particularly harmonious, especially regards the teacher. He explained that he was Grand Master of the A.O. B.B., a very select club, which every year is growing in membership. It is generally known as the Ancient Order of Bad Boys.

The Nicholls Scholarships were then presented. The Scholarship winners were:

Honour Matriculation—Miss Gretchen Gladman, $20.

Faculty Entrance, Part 2—Miss Helen Halstead, $20.

Faculty Entrance, Part 1—Miss Isabel Baird, $20.

Junior Matriculation—Miss Claire Mason, $15.

Middle School Normal Entrance — Ralph Meserve, $15.

Lower School Normal Entrance — Miss Madeline Stinson, $10.

"Our Unreturning Brave."

Mr. H. R. H. Kenner gave an eloquent and stirring speech on the "Unreturning Brave," those Canadians who have died in France and Flanders in order that civilization might be saved. It was a tribute of respect which held the vast audience spellbound by its very eloquence. He spoke of the relatives of the fallen men at home; those whose hearts were bowed in sorrow. One proposal was that to commemorate the memory of the Canadian dead that avenues of maple trees be planted along that part of the line that the Canadian corps held for so long. Similarly the national emblems of other countries would be planted to honour their "Unreturning Brave," the emblem of the Anzacs. The Lancastrian and York roses of England, the thistle of Scotland, and the Shamrock of Ireland. Each distinguishing emblem would tell where the nations best had fought their last fight. They died in defence of the weak, and to-day they are being payed homage. It was a vast crusade to keep the land of chivalry and, indeed, civilization, from the hand of the spoiler. No distance of ocean waters or time can separate us from the "Unreturned Brave." The earth may still run red with other wars, but they are at rest, sleeping.

On the screen were flashed the pictures of the members of the Peterborough Collegiate Institute who had given their life for the cause of liberty. The first picture was that of Major George Bennett, one of the first Peterborough boys to fall in the Great War, and the only one in the long list of fifty-seven who had not attended the Collegiate while Mr. Kenner was on the staff.

UNEMPLOYED IN HUNLAND

War Lessens Desire to Work in a Great Number of Cases.

INVADED BY MOB

Canadian Press:

BERLIN, Feb. 22.—German troops defending the Posen front against the Poles at Birnbaum, have addressed a communication to National Assemblyman Ohler, protesting against an official order to evacuate territory held by them, in accordance with conditions laid down by Marshal Foch, in which the line of demarcation between the Germans and Poles was defined. The National Ministry of Economic Demobilization estimates the number of unemployed men in Germany at present to be a million. It is declared that the extent to which the war lessened men's desire to work must be under-estimated. One officer is quoted as saying, "We have lost the war as thoroughly as it could have been lost, but it is time to quit complaining. Let us grin and bear it."

Streets adjacent to the Parliamentary Buildings were thronged with crowds during the day, and the chamber where the Diet was in session, was invaded by a mob.

Troubles In Munich

Violent Firing Heard in the Suburbs—Shops Are Plundered

Canadian Press:

LONDON, Feb. 22. — Troubles in Munich took a still more serious turn yesterday afternoon, according to a Copenhagen despatch. Church bells began ringing, ten thousand workmen from the suburbs marched into the city and a short time later violent firing was heard. The mob is reported to have begun plundering shops. The Bavarian Minister of Interior Auer was shot [illegible] He is desperately wounded, however, the bullet having grazed the heart. The assassination of Kurt Eisner, Bavarian Premier, caused a tremendous riot.

Bells Rung.

(United Press Service.)

COPENHAGEN, Feb. 22.—Civil war broke out in Munich at two o'clock yesterday afternoon, it was reported in despatches received here to-day.

At that hour the church bells were rung and 10,000 workmen marched from the suburbs into the city. Shortly afterward violent fighting broke out. The mobs plundered shops and residences. Hundreds of civilians fled from the city. Others were prevented after the Spartacans seized the railway stations.

According to the latest reports workmen's dictatorships have been proclaimed and Spartacans in armed automobiles were rusing through the streets.

Many anarchists were said to have joined them.

War Minister Rosshaupter, wounded during the shooting in the Diet Chamber was reported to have been arrested later by the Spartacans. (A Zurich despatch, by way of Paris, said Rosshaupter had died from his wounds).

HEARST GOVERNMENT IS LOSING CONFIDENCE

Says a Quebec Organ—Agricultural Districts are Winning.

(Special to Examiner.)

MONTREAL, Feb. 22. — "Le Canada" says editorially that the victory of the candidate in North Ontario is not an accident. It follows other similar victories, proving that the Hearst government has lost popular confidence, at least in the agricultural counties, and that the Farmers' Union is perfectly decided to break all the Hearst candidates as they present themselves. Then it refers to the reduction of the government majority from 55 to 45, and says: "This was caused by successive defeats which are proof of the sentiment of the electors, who are dissatisfied with the government programme. Mr. Hearst cannot have one of his candidates elected in the country, and when he succeeds in the cities, as in the last election at St. Catharines, his candidates have such a small majority that it is almost a defeat. This shows the power of the Conservatives is diminishing in a successive fashion."

RAILWAYS DESTROYED

Special Mission of the Inter-Allied Commission Failed to Complete Task.

TRAINS FIRED ON

(Special to Examiner.)

WARSAW, Feb. 22. — Destruction of the railways by the Ruthenian army has prevented the special mission of the inter-allied commission, which left on Monday to bring about a cessation of hostilities between the Poles and the Ruthenians in Eastern Galicia, from proceeding beyond Prezeryal, according to advices received here to-day. The Ruthenians were also said to have fired on passenger trains regarding general conditions.

Opera House Changes Hands

Mr. A. J. Small, of Toronto, is the Purchaser.

An important theatrical deal was consumated this week when Mr. A. J. Small, of Toronto, purchased the Grand Opera House in this city from J. J. Turner & Sons. Mr. Small is owner of theatres in Toronto, Hamilton, London, Ottawa and Kingston, and is also booking agent for all the theatres in Ontario. The new management will take possession on March the first, and it is understood that for the present the local theatre will be conducted along similar lines as under the present management. Pictures and vaudeville will be shown, also all the available road attractions.

The Grand Opera House has been under the management of J. J. Turner & Sons for over twelve years and in that time has earned the respect and appreciation of their patrons for its capability and high class service.

Brock Street Rink To-night! To-night!

A Double Sized Band From the Great War Veterans.

To-night will see the biggest night of the season at Brock St. Rink. There will be a full band from the Great War Veterans of twenty pieces, giving continuous music and skating until eleven o'clock. There will be a big crowd on hand to-night, and is the skating season is almost over, you should make it a point to attend.

PETERBOROUGH MEN RETURNING TO-DAY.

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 22ND, 1919.

A LIVELY SESSION

The speech from the Throne at the opening of Parliament and the notice of motion on the order paper, indicate that the present session of the House will develop some lively times. Mr. Bickle's resolution asking Parliament to send an address to His Majesty the King, praying him "graciously to refrain from inflicting any titles upon your subjects residing or living in Canada," is one that is almost sure to develop an interesting situation, while General Sam Hughes' motion in relation to an investigation into the case of the Guelph novitiate will re-open a subject that for the sake of the country that is needed in Canada at the present time might better have been let alone.

One of the most important features of the speech from the Throne is the announcement that a measure will be introduced validating the Order-in-council in regard to provincial and that legislation will be introduced to confer the franchise upon them and to allow them the privilege of sitting in Parliament. Another step is more advanced than action of the Ontario Legislature which while granting the vote to women, has not yet got to the point where the Government is willing to allow the fair sex to be candidates for the Legislature.

The session promises to be a most interesting one.

SHOULD NOT BE TOGETHER?

The Board of Trade and the Trades and Labour Council should be able to work together on a common footing in securing the maximum results for Peterboro. There does not appear any logical reason why the two bodies cannot work in the closest harmony and co-operation and it is to be hoped that there should be no misunderstanding or distrust such as unfortunately exists at the present time. Both organizations have ideals which if realized would be of the greatest benefit to the community and for the welfare of Peterboro an effort should be made to reach an entente that will help the two bodies to accomplish their plans. They are banded together for the purpose of making Peterboro a better place in which to live and with this common goal there should be no difficulty in reaching an understanding if the right methods are adopted.

Organizations like the Trades and Labour Council, the Board of Trade and the War Veterans Association should in turn prove valuable Auxiliaries to the city council. They are all citizens of Peterboro and as citizens are interested in all that pertains to the bettermen of heir home city. There is no necessity for these organizations to be working at criss purposes with each other or with the city council and the heads of the different bodies should make an effort to see that a closer co-operation is arrived at. It would mean much to Peterboro.

THE UNRETURNING BRAVE

The long corridors of the Collegiate Institute, with the wall lined with photograph after photograph of graduates from the Institute who have perished in the Great War, and Principle Kenner's earnest and eloquent references to the gallant lads who will return to us no more—these are things that make us understand what the war has cost Peterboro. When one gazes at picture after picture and realizes that the smiling faces and manly forms will never more be among us—that these young men, some of whom dropped their text books and rushed to the recruiting offices and others who had completed their education and had launched out on what had promised to be a brilliant career, but who did not hesitate to sacrifice their prospects of success, are now sleeping under the wooden crosses and the smiling poppies of Flanders, the realization of what the war has meant strikes home. It was a happy sentiment on the part of the Collegiate authorities to honor the memory of their unreturning brave by hanging their photographs in the corridors. Long years from now the boys and girls of Peterboro will see these pictures, and, gazing at them, will understand that the liberty and freedom they are enjoying was purchased by the valor and sacrifice of young Canadians.

WAR HISTORIES

Just now as might be expected Canada is flooded with histories of the Great War. Canvassers everywhere are beseeching people to buy volumes and are meeting with considerable success in their efforts. It is natural that Canadians should desire to have in their homes a record of the great struggle in which this country played so important a part, but they should be careful in their selection. Many of the histories now being offered to the public are American productions. They are written by United States writers almost entirely from the American standpoint and do not do justice to the efforts made by the other allies. Histories of this kind should receive a poor welcome from Canadians, for it seems little justice to our army to purchase a war record which gives a secondary place to the efforts and accomplishments of the British army in the war. No one who appreciates the assistance the United States rendered will refuse to give due credit to the Americans, but certainly they are not entitled to dominate the situation in the minds of the Canadian public and the generations of Canadians that are to come. It is generally felt that the basis of the allies' victory rests upon the successful work of the British Navy and mercantile marine, so that there is neither accuracy or patriotism in the circulating in Canada of histories which give the place of honor to the United States.

Canadian in purchasing a work on the war should be careful to know that it is written from a British or a Canadian viewpoint. Histories published by other countries, while possibly true as to the main facts, are inclined to be colored by natural pride, which is revealed by laying stress on certain situations and minimizing the importance of others. A history compiled by their own countrymen, giving them the proper perspective and interest, would seem to be the logical record for Canadians to purchase.

THE CONVINCING FOCH

The Germans seem at last to be waking up to some of the facts of their position. Their army was beaten in the field and they are at the mercy of the victors; but in spite of all that has happened since they seem to have persisted in the belief that they could negotiate with those victors on even terms. Not even their exclusion from the Peace conference has availed to cure them of this strange delusion. It took Marshal Foch to do it, in so far as it has been done at all.

When Erzeberger protested against the "harshness" of the revised terms, on the ground that they would imperil the success of the new German Government, Marshal Foch does not seem to have made any elaborate argument to let the light into that darkened mind. He merely replied, "so our correspondent reports, "I know only peace and war. We have not peace, therefore we have war." It had nothing to do with Erzerberger's delusion that the stability of the new German Government is a matter dear to the hearts of the Allies, but it seems actually to have opened Erzberger's eyes to the true situation in which he stood better than a 500-page thesis could have done. In other words he got the idea.

In the same despatch we read that the German Armistice Commission were greatly opposed to allowing Marshal Foch to decide all disputed points on the application of the armistice conditions; that they asked convincingly, "What is the use of our commission? You might as well have a dictator and be done with it." This is indeed the true state of the case. The commission had nothing to do except to sign on the dotted line, which was carefully pointed out to them by Marshal Foch. He might as well have been a dictator. This is the truth which the Allies, with unwearied patience, have been trying vainly bore into some crack in the German skull. At last, although it is difficult to see how, they got the idea. It is impossible that this revelation came through a singular circumstance, which was that, when they waited upon the Marshal as usual to tell him that they had yet received no authority to sign the terms, the Marshal said "that he was going away at 6 o'clock and that Germany had better make up her mind by that time."

When the Spanish-American Peace Commission was at work ending the war of 1898, some of the Spaniards, it is said, objected to some of the terms as inadmissible, whereupon William R. Day, one of the American Commissioners, informed them that "a peace treaty can contain anything that the visitors choose to put in it." Bismark, too, managed to convey the same idea to the French in 1871, so that the idea is not new to the Germans, however much they may have forgotten of Bismarck and his ways. Apparently, however, they had got the notion that it does not apply to Germans, or perhaps that it applies to peace treaties only and no to armistice conventions. Foch, though famous as a man who brought the war to an end, has an additional title to fame; he seems to be the only man who can make a German understand things.—New York Times.

THE BY-ELECTIONS

A state of active hostilities could not well inflict more losses on the Hearst government than it is suffering under the truce that has existed for some time between the Conservative and Liberal parties. There have been four by-elections under the truce and while there has not been a regular Liberal candidate in any, the net result has been an addition of three members to the opposition, and only one to the government side of the legislature. At least two of the new members were formerly identified with the Liberal party. In North Ontario, yesterday, J. W. Widdifield, the candidate of the United Farmers of Ontario, was elected, defeating Major Harry Cameron, a returned soldier and the candidate of the government. Mr. Widdifield, running as a straight Liberal candidate in the general elections of 1914, was defeated by the late W. H. Hoyle, the Hearst candidate. Another of the trio of the opposition members elected in the recent by-elections is W. H. Fraser, a Liberal and a member of the United Farmer organization, who won the North Huron seat, although not endorsed by the Ontario Liberal leader or backed by the provincial Liberal organization. The third is Beniah Brown as another United Farmer who was elected in Manitoulin. There is little doubt that all three can be classed as United Farmers.

The United Farmers' party in the legislature is therefore making rapid strides when it can carry three out of four seats. In the next general election, which cannot be long delayed, it looks as though they would be a formidable factor. Some twenty-five years ago, the farmers organized under the title of Patrons of Industry, elected a number of members, but that organization, which like the new body, the United Farmers had commercial and co-operative branches in addition to the political organization soon died out. Whether the United Farmers' party will have a longer life only the future can tell. They will, undoubtedly, enter the federal political arena.

While no one can quarrel with the right of the farmers to organize and select their own representatives, it does seem rather remarkable that the movement should be born and attain such strength at this time, when they would seem to have less reason than in the past to complain of governments. They were called upon to shoulder fewer of the burdens of war than almost any other class in the country and with big prices for everything they produce, they never before enjoyed such prosperity.—Hamilton Herald.

A Treatment For Pneumonia

A reader of the Examiner has suggested that the following excerpt from a letter in the Los Angeles Examiner, recommending a treatment for pneumonia, might be of some interest:

"Some years ago I noticed a brief article in the San Francisco "Examiner," which claimed to be an extract from a medical journal, which said: An old German professor in Bavaria, in a practice of over forty years, had never lost a patient with pneumonia; his treatment gave immediate and permanent relief, and was so simple as to be within the reach of all without calling a physician. It was as follows: Make a ball of cotton about the size of a small marble, saturate it thoroughly with alcohol, then drop about six drops of chloroform on it; then cover it lightly with dry cotton, hold to the mouth and inhale the fumes, inflate the lungs, and it will open and expand every lung cell instantaneously.

I have tried it successfully many times and have also given it to hundreds of others and have never known it to fail."

BACHELORS AND BENEDICTS DANCE

Lovers of good dancing will be pleased to learn that the "Bachelors and Benedicts," whose annual dance held last year was one of the most successful events of the season, will hold their second annual "At Home" on March 3rd, Monday. Mr. Al. Linton's full orchestra has been engaged to supply the music.

The patronesses this year are: Mrs. Roland Denne, Mrs. (Dr.) J. V. Gallivan, Mrs. (Dr.) Buchanan, and Mrs. Reginald Turner.

A Clergyman's Wife Wants Women to Know Advantages of Internal Bathing

If women could only see the thousands of letters Dr. Tyrrell has received from grateful women in all parts of the world thanking him for his wonderful invention for Internal Bathing, they would soon discard the medicine bottle and look to the cause of their trouble. 95 per cent. of all human ills are due to accumulated waste in the Colon or Large Intestine. Warm water, properly used with the 'J. B. L. Cascade' will relieve the cause of your troubles and perfect health will follow.

A Winnipeg clergyman writes: "My wife is naturally sensitive about having her name appear in public print, yet is anxious that others should known what the 'J.B.L. Cascade' has done for her. It has really given her a new lease of life. For years she had been doctoring for Constipation which became worse each year. Since using the 'J.B.L. Cascade,' first about four years ago, she has not been sick a day, and has become robust and strong again Should any person wish this letter confirmed you are at liberty to give my name in private."

The "J.B.L. Cascade" is an invention perfected by Dr. Chas. A. Tyrrell of New York and has done much during the past four years to restore health and lessen disease than all other means combined.

The "J. B. L. Cascade" is shown and explained at the Warne Drug Store. Ask for Booklet explaining all about Internal Bathing and what it has done for others. It is free.

A PRESENT DAY COMPARISON

(By F. H. Dobbin.)

These be the times of our municipal planning and of the making of estimates for the year. Estimates are often as not a form of guess as to what a certain thing or proposed work will cost. But to the infinite credit of the municipal councils of our city, they have looked carefully at the future of the year's expenditure, and rigidly decline to exceed the estimates. That is not never, but hardly ever.

So it may be interesting if we turn back the clock to the end of the year 1858, and see an account of stewardship, as given by the town council of those days in its detailed statement of receipts and expenditures for the whole year. In making ends meet there had been some high and lofty tumbling, feats of financial agility that were commendable. For the town was only eight years old, quite an infant, hardly out of leading strings, so to speak. And pounds, shillings and pence giving way to dollars and cents, with the statement made up in a pleasing mixture of both fiscal figures. Furthermore it may be admitted that the town had never had the status of a village, but on incorporation was taken bodily out of the north-west corner of North Monaghan, and set on its municipal feet with much hurrah and acclaim. Told by the township to go its way and be blessed. That was Peterborough, or in words to that effect.

The Total Revenue.

The total revenue from all sources where the people could find money was $12,755.00, hardly enough to plug up a hole in our fire service expenses to-day. True to form, the town had contracted in a precocious way the habit of issuing debentures, which shows an appreciation of opportunity. We must never neglect our opportunities, and faith the habit sticks to us yet. So something over $19,000 was spent on railroads, but with good sense, $4,000 on schools. A hefty sum came from licenses. The total taxes were only a trifle over $9,000. Everybody seems to have been a year behind, for $6,372 of 1857 tax came in during 1858, and only a small sum from the taxes of that year. The entire receipts from rentals of the town hall made up $66. Ground rentals from the lands of the market block gave as a total $243. Wm. Lundy paid as ground rent for one-half of the present Neill store, about $76. The corner (now covered by the Dominion Bank) gave $170. The rentals to-day are easily ten to fifteen times as much.

Sale of Meat.

All meats were sold, under a strict by-law, by the butchers, occupying stalls in the ground floor of the town hall. There they were hived, ten of them, selling good meats, and in quiet hours tying tin cans to the tails of sundry dogs and turning the dogs loose to scare the pedestrians on the sidewalks. Public opinion rushed to the store doors when the dog was in flight and made bets on the speed and endurance of the dog. It was a great day for Ireland. Among the vendors of meats were the once familiar names of Richard Winch, D Hopkins, Jas. Howden, C. Boyd, John Wilson, C. Cochrane and Chas. Brannin. The total revenue extracted from the dealers was $434.00. It may be well to record that the market tolls sold for $124.00 the year.

The Licenses.

Licenses came under two heads, that is two classifications. Licenses to sell things to drink and to do certain public acts. Sundry licenses are set out as concerning the avails. The once familiar names of Alex. McNeil, Chas. Stapleton and R. G. Henthorn appear for $10.00 each as auctioneers. Alex. McNeil did a shouting business, while no funeral was considered complete unless Mr. McNeil and his white horse brought up the end of the procession. Three livery stables contributed $36.00, while a stray circus was mulcted to the tune of $80. Not so slow, eh! Police court fines brought in $161,00 found money, but showing when the perfectly profuse number of fights that took place is considered, that there was a shameful prevarication of justice. Anyway, no gentleman would halt an opponent to the halls of wisdom for fear of a repetition of the maltreatment. The casualties, it will be observed, while numerous, were not costly. A billiard license to Leon Caisse cost $20.00.

Taverns Plentiful.

But as to the liquor licenses. These were defined under the heads of tavern, saloon, shop and beer licenses. Forty-seven in all. The batch netted in all $1,544.00. Nothing was done to discourage the traffic as the cost of a license was individually small. There were seven tavern licenses issued, a tavern being practically a hotel. Many of the older residents of the town, and now living, will scan with interest the names, as recalling the years that have gone. The tavern licenses were held by Geo. Allen, E. Sullivan, Ed. Phelan, Wm. Lannin, Leon Caisse, and Lewis McGregor, at $40.00 each license, for the year.

Saloon licenses cost also $40.00, and were held by Madore Lavioe, M. Moloney, J. Wilson, Ed. McCormick, Ben Reynolds, Malcolm McKeller, T. Beatty, Jas. Carrahan, John Sullivan, James Bovah, Mrs. Ann Mulligan, Mrs. Savoy, C. R. Dearnalley, James Wilson and Wm. O'Donnell.

Shop licenses were also at the democratic price of $40.00 each, and were assigned to stores, largely grocery stores, owned by John Moloney, John Harty, McKeller & Cameron, Coupar & Ogilvie, Glover & Robinson, A. Cadotte, and Curry & Co.

Beer licenses were held by John Williamson, W. Arnott, W. B. Ward, Glover & Robinson, Edward Greene, M. McGuire, G. H. Marshall, Pat McDonald, and John Ellis. It may be noted that several of the above mentioned carried on saloon licenses as well.

On the side of expenditures are presented figures that show how far we have strayed from the narrow path of economy in our municipal financing and outgo. The largest expenditure in the year as mentioned was for streets and bridges, $3,908.00. This is made up almost entirely of wages paid, with the exception of $908.00 for materials. It is noted that all gravel required was had for the teaming of it away. No mention is made of the specific points improved or work done, but as the needs of the young municipality were great the improvements were fairly distributed.

Public Property.

Public property had its cares. Jas. Navin was paid $66.50 for digging and stoning a well on the market square, which same well was in after years filled in as a public nuisance. Stray animals fell into it and it was continually getting out of repair. A scale was purchased for market use, as there seemed to have been some doubt as to the accuracy of the stated weights in meats and provisions. This cost $70.00. For grating the market windows, a precaution against burglars, Jos. H. Cobb was paid $178.00, and money well earned.

Total salaries reached the sum of $1,390.00; not a serious matter, surely. The entire list was not so much as now paid to one official, of the reasonable salaried class. John Kennedy, as assessor, was paid $60.00 the year. And he waited a year to be paid in full. The town clerk was munificently rewarded with a salary of $400.00. The Chief and only constable undertook to enforce peace of the town for $380.00, which was cheap, considering the personal risk he ran of being smote or smitten early and often in the many street ructions. The Officer of Health, one Sergt. Jas. Litice, an old Waterloo veteran, was handed $30.00 per year for his efforts in behalf of a safe and sane town, while the license inspector, one R. B. Palmer, discharged the dignified duties for the small sum of $20.00 the year. But then his duties were largely perfunctory, and refreshments were free of cost.

The School Board.

The Board of Education of those days was a peach. It ordered things under the title of "The Union Grammar and Common Schools of Peterborough." The one school was housed in the old church that had been erected by the Free Methodists at the corner of Hunter and Sheridan streets. A rather pretentious structure of some size, built with timber frame and rough-cast exterior. The denomination came on days that failed to raise sufficient revenue, and the building was sold to the town, and with an extra floor in the auditorium, converted into a fairly capacious schoolhouse. All branches of study were carried on in the one building, with the sexes separated. It cost a hiding for a boy to climb on the division fence in the yard and look at the girls. The total salary list stood at $1,841.00. About one salary nowadays.

Fire Department.

When we come to the Fire Department we fairly shine in the way of economy. The engine was a second-hand concern, that in times of stress was manned by volunteers from the assembled citizens, for a fire brought out everyone that was not bed-ridden. As the entire town was built of wood, with few exceptions, when a fire took hold it played havoc. The principal reliance to stop it was the pail brigade. A line was formed from the nearest well and pails passed from hand to hand, just as they did in Welland week before last. The total fire expense was summed up as $118.00, but of this $60.00 was expended for pails and paid to Glen & Coupar, for the same pails were bought for each fire, and when the fire had been wrestled with and either subdued or given up as a bad job, each man with a pail in his hand took it home with him so as to, he would say, have it handy for the next fire. There was one section of the volunteer fire brigade that was essentially active and popular, known as the Hook and Ladder Company, jocularly referred to as the Ladder Hooking Co. It was the function of this enterprising and valorous section to pull down anything it would get its hooks into and so cheat the fire of more combustible material. When this action left a house on which it had expended its best efforts the premises looked like a dwelling in Belgium after the Huns got through. With, today, an estimate of $36,000 for fire department upkeep and details, it can be seen how far we have outgrown the old primitive way of doing things.

General Expenses.

Among general expenses are several items that are interesting. A grant of $100.00 to the newly organized brass band, the Rifle Co. Band, just blossoming out into active membership, under the leadership of Mr. A. H. Padgett. This band was the parent band from which afterwards came the 57th Regt. Band, and in one shape and another it survived in the early days the storms and stress of poverty, an unsympathetic public and various difficulties. Mayor went to Port Hope at an expense of $15.00. The total municipal insurance carried is represented by a charge of $15.00 for insurance on the town hall. A cheap and inexpensive security.

Taken by and large the days were strenuous for the young town. But with the standard wage of $1.00 per day people lived and kept house, and supported the church and did a whole lot of things, just as we do to-day. The cost of high living did not trouble, for beef could be had at five cents a pound, and butter was 10 cents, and eggs 5 cents the dozen. A suit of the old hand loom woven fulled-cloth, the popular working garb, cost about $6.50 complete. The cloth would turn water, mud, snow, verbal abuse, and anything that was not fired from a gun. Those were the days when life, while primitive, was a fairly contented state. No merchant delivered goods. Factory-made products were unknown. The trade or handicraft was pursued and was profitable. There was no unemployment for things had to be made and house-building was a thing of moderate cost, with lumber and scantling at $7.00 per thousand feet, board measure. Possibly we are better off now. Who knows and who will tell?

WAR-SAVINGS Societies need leaders—organizers—men and women with initiative. Who will start a War-Savings Society? Who will lead the way?

War-Savings Societies
Help Thousands To Save

War-Savings Societies have been, and are, a tremendous success in Great Britain. Thousands who were never able to save their money have accumulated Government certificates worth hundreds of dollars.

In the United States, millions of people are members of War-Savings Societies, which are organized in factories, offices, stores, farming communities, sections of towns and villages, schools, and clubs.

Everywhere throughout Canada, War-Savings Societies are in process of formation. Everyone who can save an occasional quarter should belong to a society; first, for his or her own direct benefit; second, because Canada can use the money to excellent advantage, as in the case of the War Loans.

For details of the organizing of War-Savings Societies and particulars regarding War-Savings Stamps or Thrift Stamps, address:

xecutors Obtained For Mrs. O'Conner All That Law Allowed

l Mr. J. E. A. Fitzgerald Loaned Her Money She Needed Pending Disposal of the Action Plaintiff Had Instituted—The Evidence for Defense.

Mr. John R. Corkery, solicitor for executors of the estate of the late phen H. O'Connor, who were de-dants in the action brought by Mrs. Connor to obtain dower, has written Examiner that the report of the e in Thursday's issue was of a isleading nature" in that it omit-the evidence educed in his cross-mination of the plaintiff and also testimony of the defence. The re-t was confined to the story told by plaintiff in her examination by H. H. Davis, her solicitor, but es demands prevented the presence a reporter at the resumption of the aring after the noon adjournment. Mr. Corkery's letter on this part of

"I might at great length recite e of the material evidence brought in the cross-examination of the intiff and in the examination of the witnesses for the defence, but I nk the purpose of my letter to you ll be fulfilled by giving the follow-brief summary:

he two executors, my clients, from time of the death of the plaintiff's sband, down to the present time, al-ys recognised the paltry benefits en her under her husband's will, being in sympathy with her, they the commencement of their admin-ration of the estate, took steps to ain for her everything that the law uld allow her. In fact, on the ap-cation made to the court for main-nance for her infant children, they ed for maintenance at the rate of ,000 a year for ten years, but the rt, looking at the interests of the ldren, granted this annual sum for years only; not only that, but executors gave her the farm and plements for the purpose of carrying her farming operations, this being roved of by the court, and it was only when she gave up her possession of the farm that these were sold in accordance with the terms of the Order made by the court.

"The executors also having from the first recognised that the widow might not be satisfied with the advice being given her by the Solicitor for the Estate, suggested to her that she seek independent advice as to her rights to dower, and any other interest she might have in the esatt in her personal capacity, and further than that, when the plaintiff brought her action for dower, and the executors on the advice of their solicitor, temporarily withheld from her any estate moneys until the action was disposed of. Mr. Fitzgerald offered to loan her such money as she might require, and actually did loan her a considerable sum of money, the only money that she had asked for. In giving you this summary of the evidence, which was withheld by the plaintiff on her examination, let me explain that not only was it adduced in the examination of the two witnesses for the defence, but it was all admitted by the plaintiff herself, in her cross-examination."

Mr. Corkery also affirms that it was the executors and not himself and Mr. Fitzgerald that Mrs. Davis said he had threatened for contempt of court for having withheld the payment of the maintenance moneys that had been obtained for the care of Mrs. O'Connor's children.

"As a matter of fact, he never made such a threat," Mr. Corkery writes; but Mr. Davis certainly said in court that he had made it."

In publishing the summary of the evidence of the defence, the comment seems unnecessary that readers of the report of Mrs. O'Connor's evidence understood that the executors of the estate and their solicitor were simply carrying out the provisions of the will, and that any hardship the plaintiff suffered was not due to any personal act or intervention of theirs.

The witnesses for the defence were the executors, Mr. O'Connor and Mr. Fitzgerald.

The Labour Appeal Board Reverses Higher Wage Award

Board Asks Labour and Capital to Get Together and for the Present Recommends Neither Increase or Reduction in Wages.

The Labour Appeal Board, of which Mr. Justice Maclennan is chairman, has just reversed a decision of the Board of Conciliation which recently judged the wage dispute between Toronto patternmakers and their employers. The Appeal Board consists, in addition to the chairman, of Messrs. G. H. Duggan and S. R. Parsons as manufacturers' representatives, and Messrs. John W. Bruce and Gustave Francq as representatives of labour. The Board of Conciliation had awarded an increase in wages, but a majority of the Appeal Board maintained that at any rate until peace is definitely concluded the present rate should be retained.

In submitting their report they express the following view of the general industrial situation:

"The signing of the armistice, to be followed by peace at an early date, has changed the whole face of the industrial situation, and it appears to the majority of the Board of Appeal that the Board of Conciliation did not give this feature of the question the consideration which it deserved.

"The discontinuance to a large extent of war production, the release of many workmen in Canada, and the return of skilled workmen who have been in the Canadian army overseas, has had a disturbing influence on industry. When to this is added the uncertainty of employers obtaining new contracts, the offers of labour in some instances at reduced rates, and the views of some manufacturers that, particularly in order to compete for foreign trade, there should be a general reduction in wages, it appears to the board that the granting of an increase to the patternmakers was not justified and would tend to augment the unrest which is inseparable from the period of reconstruction through which not only our own country, but the whole world, is now passing.

"Ten per cent. of the patternmakers who were at work a month ago in Toronto are now without employment. The wages paid in Toronto at the beginning of November compared favourably with those paid in the neighbouring towns and cities in Ontario.

"Employers and workmen, for a few months at least, and until the future trend of industrial activities is determined with some degree of definiteness, should endeavour to work together and create a feeling of confidence in the future which is of vital importance, both to labour and capital.

"For the foregoing reasons the majority of the Board of Appeal, after very full consideration, and having regard not only to this dispute, but to the general industrial situation throughout Canada, and with a view to maintaining confidence in the future and promoting goodwill between employers and employees, are strongly of opinion that for the present wages should not be either increased or reduced.

Heavy Burden.

"This is as heavy a burden as, in our judgment, should be placed upon employers, temporarily, when they are to some extent marking time, and we believe should be considered fair and reasonable by the workers."

This sane and temperate explanation of the present labour situation should strike the keynote for employers and workmen in all industries to follow, and should enable them to work out better and more harmonious relations than ever exisited before. Movements based on these principles will do more than any other single factor to ensure the successful bridging of the reconstruction gap and to maintain prosperity in Canada.

Emphasizing strongly this point of view comes the recent statement of Senator G. D. Robertson, the Minister of Labour, to the delegates appointed by the trade unions to consider the unemployment situation. "In pointing out what is believed should be the policy of labour, the Senator recalled that 90 per cent. of the strikes in Canada in past years had been called owing to the failure of employers and labour to get together. So his suggestion was that the employers should organize, by industries, within given territories; that labour should organize, by industries, within the same territories, and that the two organizations should get together, along the British lines, and arrive at some standards of hours and wages. That, he believed, would bring about a stability of affairs which would avoid all misunderstanding. It would be desirable for the employer, because it would protect him from the danger of being undercut by other employers in his own line of business.

"With a surplus of labour and a falling off in the market, is this a time to make too drastic demands upon industry?" he asked. "I fear the results may be directly the opposite to what you are trying to bring about. You must remember that by reducing the working hours per week and maintaining the weekly wage at the former figure you are increasing the cost of production, and therefore your action will tend to keep prices up instead of allowing them to drop; whereas if you continue on the present basis prices may drop 25 per cent. this year, and therefore the purchasing power of your wage will increase to that extent."

Veal is better in late winter and spring, while pork and fowls are better in autumn and winter.

A Milk By-law Needed

Pasteurization of all Raw Milk delivered in Peterborough should be compulsory. Municipal Control of the Milk delivery system is highly necessary.

If the City Councils of Toronto, Ottawa, Brantford and other places demand that all milk shall be Pasteurized, why should not Peterborough Council demand the same?

The Safeguarding of the Municipal Milk Supply is as important, if not more so, than the safeguarding of the Water Supply.

When water is impure the public demand that it be filtered and Sterilized. In like manner, the Raw Milk Supply calls for similar strict protection.

WE INVITE ANY ONE WHO QUESTIONS FOR A MOMENT THE VALUE OF CLARIFYING AND PASTEURIZING ALL RAW MILK, IN SAVING LIVES AND PREVENTING SICKNESS, TO CALL AT OUR CREAMERY. OUR BACTERIOLOGIST WILL FURNISH ABUNDANT PROOF IN SAMPLES OF DIRT STRAINED OUT OF RAW MILK BY THE USE OF SMALL COTTON DISCS, SHOWING A VERY DIRTY MILK AND A VERY CLEAN CLARIFIED AND PASTEURIZE MILK.

A milk pasteurised at twelve cents a quart has the highest possible public value, because of its Safety, Decency, and Price.

WHAT THE MANUFACTURERS THINK OF THE INDUSTRIAL OUTLOOK

"Business men all over Canada are planning for a big future ahead."
—Mr. W. R. Gibson, Assistant Managing Director, Gurney-Oxford Company, Toronto.

"We are continually refusing orders for boats from all parts of the world for the reason that we can't get the labour."
—Mr. Dahlgren, Manager, Dominion Shipbuilding Company, Toronto.

"Speaking for my firm the outlook for the future is very bright and we are looking for greatly increased business in our regular lines, while we are contemplating the introduction of new products."
—Mr. G. W. McKnight, Business Manager, The Tallman Brass and Metal Limited of Hamilton.

"One firm is planning for greater business. On the whole the prospects for the future look very bright to me."
—Mr. H. H. McCrae, Managing Director of the Steel and Radiation Company, Toronto.

"I do not wish to be regarded as pessimistic, as there is bound to be a wide development of business in the near future."
—Mr. Gordon F. Perry, General Manager, National Iron Corporation, Toronto.

"Speaking generally, the outlook for the future is most assuring."
—Mr. H. L. Frost, of the Frost Steel Wire Company, Hamilton.

"We are looking for increased business in all parts of the world and just now we are making big shipments to South America and South Africa."
—Mr. A. C. Dann, Manager of the Oliver Chilled Plow Company, Hamilton.

"The enormous opportunities which will be given to Canadian manufacturers in the work of rebuilding France and Belgium will keep all the plants busy for a long period. . . . . If there is any pessimistic feeling regarding the future, I fail to see the reason."
—Mr. C. J. Pooke, Works Manager, Canadian Westinghouse.

"We are going to have very prosperous times in Canada, I look for a tremendous increase in our export business."
Mr. W. G. Harris, Jr., of the Canada Metal Company, Toronto.

"We will be able to handle more orders than we did previous to the war, and expect to operate the plant to the fullest capacity in the very near future."
—Mr. Williams Inglis, of the John Inglis Company, Toronto.

"In the next four or five years Canada will experience the greatest shipbuilding boom in its history. At present we are engaged on large contracts for France, and expect more to follow."
—Col. J. B. Miller, Head of Polson Iron Works, Toronto.

"If ever there was a time when Canada needed industries, and all that industries mean, it would be in the next ten or twelve years."
—Mr. Thomas Findley, General Manager, Massey-Harris Co.

"We are looking for a great expansion of trade in Canada and at the present time we are shipping extensively to Europe. We expect, in the near future, to ship three times as much as we have done previously."
—Mr. H. H. Biggart, Manager of The International Harvesting Company of Canada.

"We are going to have a great period of prosperity in Canada just as soon as peace conditions are arranged."
—Mr. Robert Hobson, President, The Steel Company of Canada.

CANON TUCKER SAYS FEEBLE-MINDED ARE 40,000 IN NUMBER.

TORONTO, Feb. 22.—That there are 40,000 to 50,000 feeble-minded persons in Canada was the statement made to Mr. Justice Hodgins in tribunal by Canon Tucker, of St. Paul's Cathedral, London, Ont. He pledged the support of the Church in any well-devised scheme the Government might devise to solve the problem.

Hens are supplied by nature with 1,200 to 4,000 rudimentary yolks. But a yolk is only half an egg, and a hen won't lay half an egg—it's the whole egg or nothing with her. To lay a whole egg, the hen must have a "white" for a "yolk." If she is to lay 1,000 eggs her food must supply 1,000 whites as well as 1,000 yolks—she must get "whites" just as she gets meat, bones and feathers—from her food. Ordinary grain foods and "mill-mixtures," will fatten a hen and produce yolks, but do not produce enough "whites" to make her lay any more eggs than usual. Only the feeding of Purina Scratch Feed and Purina Chicken Chowder will supply enough elements to make "a white for every yolk," and make a hen LAY MORE EGGS—plenty and cackle—we guarantee it. The price of Purina Scratch Feed and Purina Chicken Chowder is very little more than ordinary feed, but they make a hen lay so many more eggs that there is no comparison of values. THE PROPOSED HUNTER STREET BRIDGE

It has not been made public why it is necessary to erect a long costly [illegible] the river from one bank to the other in order to erect Hunter Street bridge.

There are certainly no natural obstacles to overcome to make it necessary to do so.

There is not a quick sand bottom in the bed of the river making it impossible to get foundation for piers.

The discharging area of the river at this point is amply sufficient to take care of the greatest flow of water that has ever come down.

There is a first-class rock foundation in the bed of the river for the erection of two piers upon which two short spans of the bridge could be erected.

The bridge could be erected on the flat construction principle—similar to the C.P.R. bridges across British Columbia mountain ravines and elsewhere. They ARE MORE economical to erect, and more durable, less costly to maintain, and are stronger than the long-arched bridge, with its many costly arches and supports.

What the taxpayers of this City want is a strong, safe, and efficient bridge that will meet the necessities of the City for many years.

I am advsied by experienced contractors and engineers that such a bridge as I have indicated can be erected for $100,000.00 cheaper than the costly monument it is intended to erect.

I notice that Mr. Barber proposes to REVISE his plans and hopes to save the City $50,000.00 by so doing.

What the Council should do is to instruct him to burn his plans and get up entirely new ones and build the new high-level bridge on the flat construction principle and have it supported in the centre of the river on two piers.

Mr. Barber in effect says: "I will erect for you a bridge and a monument and let the taxpayers grunt and sweat to pay for its cost."

What the Council representing the taxpayers should do is to instruct Mr. Barber to prepare plans for a bridge and not a bridge and a monument combined.

Let them take him up to Smith Street bridge that is erected on piers and show him the A.B.C. of what is wanted, even though the approaches to the Hunter Street bridge are on a different scale.

I am glad to see that the Dominion Government are endeavouring to carry out the plain understanding that I negotiated over ten years ago, in giving a grant of $50,000.00 toward the cost of the construction of this bridge, but I should be very sorry to see it wasted on a fantastic and unnecessary monument.

Contend That Main Roads Are Used More By Automobile Owners Than By the Farmer

The Road Question as Applied to Peterboro County—There Was a Time When Farmers of This County Hauled the Greater Part of Their Produce to Port Hope and Cobourg.

To the Editor:

In the early days of Ontario, or what is now Ontario, the settler provided his own ingress and egress to his place of abode. Then the statute labour system was adopted, the farmer maintaining all rural roads without any outside assistance save in the lumbering districts, where as per obligation entered into by Act of Parliament, in lieu of the vast area of such districts, and the immense revenue derived by the government from the lumbering industry, the government assumed certain obligations, and are under the same obligations to-day, and any invasion in such territory with county, county provincial, or other jointly maintained roads by municipalities and government, is an extra burden to the farmers at large, at the same time assuming part of the obligation of the government for the special benefit of the tourist, both Canadian and foreign, in order to reach summer resorts and fishing grounds where little if any agricultural activity obtains.

At one time the farmers of this county hauled the greater part of their produce to Port Hope and Cobourg and subsequently to the town of Peterborough. In those days the man from the town used the country roads mainly for the purpose of trade and commerce, but to-day he uses the main roads of the county ten times as much as the farmer, for not more than 25 per cent. of the farmers use the main roads continually, when practically all of the driving done by the citizens from the cities is done on the main roads and with heavy, speedily driven automobiles, that are responsible for the rapid deterioration of the road.

The Successful Farmer.

The successful farmer of to-day in Ontario places his product on the market as a finished product, thereby lessening the hauling to a minimum, and to-day shipping is not done over main highways, the railways running right through farm properties, the farmer cheerfully submitting to his property being cut up in the interests of the developing of Ontario by bringing shipping facilities to his door, doing away with long and slow highway hauling as you find to-day, that almost all of the farmers load their produce at the nearest station generally from one to six miles from his farm, and such station would not in one instance in twenty, be on a county road, nor once in a 100 times be on a county provincial road, and the same ratio of travelling done over such roads for the purpose.

Main roads of the country are used very many times more (taking the farmers as a whole) by the wealthy autoist, the commercial traveller, and agents representing large institutions in the city, and it matters not what expense you undertake to provide for outsiders to invade your county to sell their goods to you, you pay the freight to your nearest station and then you have to haul it home. If it were, that the farmer did all of his hauling by motor power he would deliver his produce to the nearest station and, as stated before, at a distance of from three to six miles, not once in ten cases touching a main road. The main roads will be used principally by the wealthy motorist, the tourist, the pleasure seeker, the commercial traveller and other agents representing the large wholesale houses in the cities (with about 25 per cent of the farmers of the county.)

Then why should the auto fees of the city and county be withheld by the government until the farmers pay sixty per cent. on construction and eighty per cent. on maintenance to obtain the same for the upkeep of a county system of main roads?

Substantial Main Roads.

Railways do the transportation business and will continue to do so, consequently, so far as farmers are concerned, they will use such main roads as a whole very much less than the Urbanite.

Substantial main roads are what the farmers would appreciate and it stands to reason that he should be relieved of part of such burden.

Substantial through roads maintained by the government (not elaborate double track speedways) are what is required, and the same money would maintain very much more roads.

County provincial roads are maintained by sixty per cent. from the government for both construction and maintenance but the regulations call for extra wide culverts and double track driveways and most of the sixty per cent. is gone in providing speedways.

The cost of such roads would be more to the farmer than the proposed county roads and would answer his purposes no better.

With the auto fees (less cost of collection, etc) and forty per cent. from the government for both construction and maintenance of country roads under a system with modern machinery utilized, the roads could be very materially improved and also in a manner of equity with regard to defraying the expense.

Co-operation is certainly necessary in the conduct of the agricultural industry. The position of Canadian cheese in the world market it a direct result of co-operation of the farmers. The placing upon the market of the finished product, thereby lessening the hauling, at the same time retaining fertility on the farm is a result of co-operation, following the disseminating of ideas at co-operative Farmers' Institute gatherings, Agricultural Boards and Farmers' Clubs. The price of the agricultural product is partially determined as a result of supply and demand. Overstocking of markets at any one time can be materially averted by co-operation of the farmers. Exposing of their products for sale in a systematic manner similar to the Western Fruit Growers' Association would lessen the opportunities of those so disposed, to take advantage at the stock yards and other places where such products are offered for sale.

As a result of co-operation, the professions, the manufacturers, the wholesale interests are protected, largely due to a strong representation in Parliament. Tariffs and fees are legalized, over which supply and demand have no control.

Co-operation.

No doubt co-operation in the linking up of counties and county towns with provincial roads will be advanced by the wealthy motorists or politician who may be afforded an opportunity of so doing at a co-operative gathering of farmers. County provincial roads are maintained by sixty per cent. from the government and forty per cent. from the farmer.

The regulations call for 28 feet culverts and double track driveway on such roads, consequently the greater part of the sixty per cent. is absorbed in providing speedways for the wealthy motorists, the commercial traveller and the representatives of the large wholesale houses in the cities. Sixty per cent. expended on a substantial farmers' county or other road would answer the farmers' purpose as well and maintain more miles.

The building of county provincial roads will not bring his shipping station any closer, nor in one case in twenty lessen his cost of hauling. The farmers are prepared to co-operate with all comers in the maintenance of main county roads, although not more than twenty-five per cent. of the farmers of this county would use the proposed county roads continually, and all of the travellers from city and town use these roads for ninety per cent. of their country driving.

Reference has been made to Victoria county levying 3 million the dollar for county road purposes, or in other words about $50,000, the government to pay $20,000 which is not much in excess of the auto fees collected in that county, if any.

A Remedy.

If the following were carried into effect it would be a means of doing away with much of the opposition that now exists. It would also furnish employment that is now so badly needed.

Auto fees collected in city and county	$20,000.00
60 per cent. from county on county roads	30,000.00
20 per cent. from county on suburban area	6,000.00
80 per cent from city on suburban area	6,000.00
40 per cent. from government on county roads	20,000.00
40 per cent, from government on suburban area	8,000.00
Total	$90,000.00

The above means 4 mills on the dollar from the farmer and less than 1-2 a mill on the dollar to the ratepayer in the city.

It appears that the financing is all done by taxing the consumer. Is it not a fact that there are a number of automobile manufacturers rapidly becoming millionaires. Is it not a fact that there are numerous automobile agents enjoying immense percentages and as a result accumualting considerable wealth.

Knowing all those facts would the government not be justified in fixing the licenses on all automobiles over one and a half ton weight at $75.00, which would add to the above road maintenance very materially?

By adopting a less extravagant system of selling autos and being compelled to be satisfied with reasonable profits, the manufacturer and his agents could easily furnish the buyer with an auto that would leave him $50.00 a year to pay to the upkeep of the main highways that now goes to abnormal manufacturer's profits and high percentage agents.

At present all duties on imported automobiles, and all license fees go to the government's treasurys and is not available for road maintenance unless the farmer pays 80 per cent. to get it, and for road construction he must pay 80 per cent. to get it, that is the license fees. The duty is used for the country at large, yet the automobile is responsible for the rapid deterioration of the main country roads, and, as stated before, the heavy, rapidly-driven automobile does it.

Respectfully yours,
ED. M. ELLIOTT.

LOOK AT CHILD'S TONGUE IF SICK, CROSS, FEVERISH

Hurry, Mother! Remove poisons From Little Stomach, Liver, Bowels.

Give "California Syrup of Figs" at Once if Bilious or Constipated

Look at the tongue, Mother! If coated, it is a sure sign that your little one's stomach, liver and bowels need a gentle, thorough cleansing at once.

When peevish, cross, listless, pale, doesn't sleep, doesn't eat or act naturally, or is feverish, stomach sour, breath bad; has stomach-ache, sore throat, diarrhoea, full of cold, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the foul, constipated waste, undigested food and sour bile gently moves out of its little bowels without griping, and you have a well, playful child again.

You needn't coax sick children to take this harmless 'fruit laxative;' they love its delicious taste, and it always makes them feel splendid.

Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on the bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here. To be sure you get the genuine, ask to see that it is made by "California Fig Syrup Company." Refuse any other kind with contempt.

Voice of The People

To the Editor of the Examiner.

Sir:—Can you offer any answer to the question why the Government or those responsible, don't get a better move on in delivering the Bonds for the last Victory Loan?

They were pretty expert in showing people why they should subscribe, but rather slow now in showing them how to get along without either money they subscribed or the chance to earn more money to live on. According to the reasons given for raising the money, was to purchase grains, foodstuffs, and other supplies for war purposes only. We are not going to accuse the government, just yet, of obtaining money under false pretenses, although the opinion was pretty general that the 1917 loan was used largely to buy support of the Union Government, but as the need for war supplies has largely disappeared, likewise the need for the men to provide them, so that a good many must dispose of the bonds to get something to live on; but until they get the the bonds cannot do so,

Unusual Demand For Hats Is Reported By Peterboro Milliners

The Mild Weather is Given as One Reason for the Demand—What the Stores Are Showing.

During the past month the milliners in Peterborough have sold more hats than in any February previous in the history of hat making in the city. Already case after case of the latest creations imported from New York has been sold, and the demand for more grows daily. Asked this morning the reason of the unusual demand, some of the milliners said that they could only explain it by the unusually early season, and, perhaps, one suggested, the return of the boys from overseas has had its effect. Some of the girls practically ceased buying anything so frivolous as hat during the war, and remade what they had, while now they have a definite reason for dressing up.

The Hats.

But the milliners as usual are ready for the demand, and have a really stunning array of New York and Paris models on hand. In these, to a great extent, the Occident has borrowed ideas from the Orient, and the result is the most alluring display of Chinese turbans, finished mostly in dough straw brims. In other hats the most striking designs and beautiful shades have been brought out to allure the feminine fancy. Gay colours predominate and flowers are shown in profusion for all the dress hats. Features otherwise than a few touches of ostrich are practically absent in the samples so far imported by the Canadian milliners. Henna is the shade being shown in the spring hats, while navy runs it a close second for popularity. Turquoise blue is vieing with the two shades mentioned and holding its own.

Shapes and Styles.

As regards shapes and styles, there is no distinct style or shape that one can point out and say this is the note of the season. There has scarcely been a time when models have been so diversified as they are now. There are long sided brims, short backs and pole fronts, brims that turn up at the front or back or side—in fact, every sort of shape is used so long as it has the attribute of smartness. Ribbons are also having a tremendous vogue. A good deal of the henna or rust shades are being shown in these also.

The Veils.

Even among the veils many novelties are being shown. Possibly the newest is the trench veil which hangs loose from the face. It is a square mesh in the taupe or clay shades with an exquisite pattern worked which is not unlike some irregular design which so many ants might have traced in the sand. Another veil is the lattice veil with a heavy border and the new soutache borders. Spots both large and small and combined are also good.

New Storey Play Grips and Thrills

Edith Storey's Latest Screen Offering to be the Big Feature at The Grand.

Edith Storey's Latest Screen Offering to Be the Big Feature at "The Grand."

"The Silent Woman," a story of the Great Northwest, is the latest of the forceful Metro plays in which Edith Storey, the great dramatic star, will be seen. This picture will be shown at "The Grand" Theatre Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday next week, with a cast of supporting players of corresponding prominence.

The screen play was adapted from the story written by Lois Zellner and was directed by the noted Frenchman, Herbert Blache. It shows the happy, care-free Nan McDonald, "the idol of the lumberjacks," in her quiet life as a clerk in a Hudson Bay Trading Post. Here her existence is one of simple pleasures and helpfulness to others. Then tragedy comes to her. A family from the east arrive in town, and by her goodness to their little child she is drawn into the home life of the strangers. Here she learns many things—the telling of which would wreck a woman's honour and a man's life. Against her own happiness she keeps what she has learned to herself. How death intervenes—and how the ungoverned passions of an unscrupulous man eventually bring about her happiness is graphically shown in this enthralling play in which the popular star is seen at her best.

The well known leading man, Frank Mills, enacts the role of John Lowry, while Joseph Kilgour is the unscrupulous Clifford Beresford. Among other players of note are Lilie Leslie, Mrs. Mathilde Brundage, George Stevens, T. Tamamoto, Augusta Perry, Harry Lindson, Ben Walker and John Cohill. Baby Ivy Ward, the youngest of the Metro emotional actresses, is seen as little Billy, around whom much of the story centres.

Colonel Carl Boyd, Principal Aid to General Pershing, Dies of Pneumonia

Paris, Feb. 19.—Colonel Carl Boyd, principle aid de camp to General J. J. Pershing, is dead of pneumonia. His home was at Adamsville, Ga., and for several years he was Military Attachee of the American Embassy here. He resigned his post as attached in August, 1917, and was then assignes from the staff of General Pershing

The death of Colonel Boyd removes from the staff of General Pershing one of its best known members. As personal aid to General Pershing ever since the General came to France, Colonel Boyd has many friends in his travels. He was present at all the great councils and conferences with the allied commanders in chief and enjoyed General Pershing's confidence and friendship to the highest degree. His fluent knowledge of French made him invaluable as a personal aid. In April, 1918, he received the Cross of the Officers of Leopold from the King of Belgium.

Colonel Bod has many friends in the French army, some of them new, but many dating from his previous residence in France as Military attachee. Only recently Colonel Boyd was made a member of the Legion of Honor. He was forty years old and a graduate of West Point.

Honoured Its Dead.

Canadian Press:

OTTAWA, Feb. 22.—Canada's Capital to-day honoured its great dead in worthy fashion. There was tremendous dignity and solemnity in funeral cortege of the late Sir Wilfrid Laurier, which formed a fitting climax to a life which would have been noble in any of the great nations of the world, ancient or modern. This dignity made itself manifest, not so much in the formal arrangements which had been made for the state funeral, but in the grand spontaneity with which the people flocked in thousands to pay the last tribute. Unquestionably this was the largest funeral, grandest and noblest, that Canada has ever seen.

INFLAMMATORY RHEUMATISM PERMANENTLY CURED

New Brunswick Lady Given Full Particulars of Her Recovery.

There are many types of rheumatism, but none worse than inflammatory.

To just this kind that almost killed Mrs. Edw. Warman, of Kent Jct., New Brunswick.

Every known remedy she tried, different doctors gave their advice, but the disease increased.

Weak and despairing, she was at her wits' end when the remarkable cure of Thos. Cullen was published This gentleman was cured of rheumatism by "Ferrozone." Consequently Mrs. Warman used the same remedy. Here is her statement:

"For five years I have been rheumatic. I tried various forms of relief without success. The disease increased, settled in my joints and muscles; these swelled, caused excruciating pain and kept me from sleeping. My limbs and arms stiffened, my shoulders were lame and prevented me from working. Week by week I was losing strength and despaired of finding a cure. It was a happy day I heard of Ferrozone. Every day I took Ferrozone I felt better; it eased the painful joints, gave me energy and a feeling of new life. Ferrozone cured my rheumatism cured it so that not an ache has ever returned. Even damp weather no longer affects me."

Ferrozone has power to destroy Uric Acid, neutralize and enrich the blood, and therefore does cure the worst cases. Mr. Warman's statement proves this.

By removing the cause of the disease and building up a reserve of energy, Ferrozone is certain to cure. Sufferer, isn't it about time to stop experimenting? Ferrozone is a CURE order to-day, 50c. per box, or six for $2.50, sold by all dealers or direct from The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont.

Victor Murdock Assails Power of Five Big Packers

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 19. — Victor Murdock, member of the Federal Trade Commission, told the House Interstate Commerce Committee he feared that the five big packers had acquired so much power that even the United States government might not be strong enough to combat it.

"Even Food Administrator Hoover," Mr. Murdock said, "could not reach into Chicago and take the license of a great malefactor, although he could rescind the license of one of the little fellows."

The testimony of the Trade Commissioner followed his statements that facts gathered during the commission's investigaton of the meat packing industry had been turned over to the Department of Justice, and that he had no doubt that proceedings under the Anti-Trust law would result.

Asks for Strong Legislation.

Mr. Murdock expressed fear that the legislative branch of the government would deal weakly instead of vigorously with the packers. His statement that the packers were well aware where their case would be considered and that they would try to see to it that "their friends" got on these committees as vacancies occurred, brought sharp questioning from members of the committee.

Mr. Murdock strongly urged enactment of legislation before the committee for government control and regulation of the meat industry.

The committee closed its hearing with the examination of Mr. Murdock who devoted considerable time to the discussion of the so-called international meat pool, which was sharply criticized in the commission's report to the President last summer

Tells of International Pool.

"The packers," he said, "have come before this committee to testify, but where they did not evade entirely the subject of the international meat pool they answered erroneously. This is a combination of American packers which has for one of its purposes among other things the allotment of space for meat shipments from South America to the United States, as well as to Europe.

"They say that the restriction and apportionment of space was sanctioned by the British government, in whose ships the meat from South America was carried. They have said that the British government as a war measure to insure the feeding of civilian populations abroad, and the armies of the Allies, arranged the percentage these packers were to have of cargo space. However it is a fact that a meeting was held in Chicago at which these very percentages were agreed upon by the representatives of the packers, and that meeting took place two years before the outbreak of the war in Europe."

New Rooms For Board of Trade

Will Move Into Dominion Bank Building About March 1st.

The Board of Trade expect to move into their new quarters over the Dominion Bank on the first of March. The new rooms, which are the ones used by the Masons before the fire last winter comprise a suite of four, one large board room with three business rooms adjoining. At present the new furniture for the new quarters is being installed.

HARDWARE AND METAL MARKETS

Sharp Decline in Wire Nail Prices And There Were Other Declines.

A sharp decline has been recorded this week in the price of wire nails, prices sagging 55c per 100 pounds, says Hardware and Metal. It is indicated this is largely on account of competition creeping in, and whether the basis will be maintained is a question just at present. Some sources feel that prices may go still lower and then react, while others seem to think bottom has been reached, and that 25c may be tacked on prices almost immediately.

Lower prices have been named on smooth steel wire as base for kindred lines, the drop amounting to 50c per 100 pounds. Smooth steel wire, hay wire in coils, and oiled and annealed wire are affected. No change has been made in wire bale ties.

Ingot metals show some variation this week in the various markets. Lead has sagged ½c per pound, and tin has come in for revision to lower levels also. Solder is unchanged this week, but lead pipe and lead waste are down 1c per pound in Eastern markets and 3c out West.

Will Build 100 Homes as a Commencement

enty-Five-Foot Lots Likely to Be Provided by Housing Commission.

TORONTO, Feb. 20.—"There are ly my private views and I am one five," said Mr. H. H. Williams, of oronto's new Housing Commission hen he gave the following outline the procedure of the commission: Houses will be built to sell, not rent.

2. The commission itself will not uild the houses, but an incorporat- company will be formed.

3. Stock in the new company will t be confined to a few holders. he amount of $150,000, which is re- uired if the Government accepts nds for the remaining $850,000, is ily in sight and the commission ll go right ahead.

4. The commission will likely start with 100 houses and end up with 0.

5. The houses will not be all built in e place, but in different parts of e city, so that people of every sec- n will have a chance to buy.

6. The semi-detached type will obably find favor, and Mr. Wil- ms has in mind a 25-foot lot for ch.

7. The cost to the buyer will be 000.

8. The city has offered its own ant lands to the commission for nsideration as sites for houses.

9. The exteriors of the houses will fer in appearance.

Mr. Williams stated that he could say yet who the directors of company would be. "Might com- sioners be on its board?" he was ed. "That condition might ob- ," he said, "but the commission's iness is to get things under way to safeguard the city and re- ve it of responsibility."

sked why houses would be built sale only, he said: "The man who s a home is more valuable to the than the man who rents. We going to try to encourage home- ning by offering real bargains in derate sized homes. We will be to do by building a hundred at me. The outside appearance will er, but the inside construction will similar. The saving in this is evi- t by considering the cost of doors . A company buying thousands he one pattern can get them very p. And so it will be with much he indoor material."

inks Bourbonism Caused Bolshevism

ernor Frazier of North Dakota Sees as Great a Menace in One as the Other.

MARCK, N.D., Deb. 22.—Bour- not Bolshevism, is the r in this country, says Lynn J. Frazier in response gram from Clyde P. Steene York City, President of the Association of City Editors, the Governor that he had ited to the Board of Gov- r a nation-wide campaign narchy in general and Bol- particular. The Governor :

your telegram notifying me ve been appointed on the Governors for a nation-wide to be launched against ination of anarchy and to American liberties, Ameri- American homes, and ations, and wish to assure in hearty sympathy nounced aims of your or-you are aware that North taken the initiative in and is the first State in to propose and enact into rammes which not only safe- American labour and Ameri- , but extends democracy ustry and promises to relieve ucers and consumers of this from the systematic exploitation by the monopolists who control our markets.

"Here in North Dakota we believe the best protection against revolution is to assist rather than retard evolution, and in this State it is the intention of the Administration to remove discontent and prevent disorder by remedying the legitimate economic complaints of the people instead of trying to stamp out just grievances. As a consequence we have a contented citizenry in North Dakota, which believes in upholding our Government and achieving political progress by orderly and constitutional methods.

"As I stated before, I am in hearty sympathy with the announced aims of your association and will cordially co-operate with you to the end that American liberties, American homes, American labour, and American schools be built up and bettered, but in all candor I want to warn you against the danger of allowing this move to be misdirected into a camouflaged campaign against those liberal forces in America which stand for the improvement of industrial and political conditions.

"Personally, I feel that Bolshevism is not the only peril to this country. In my opinion the spirit of Bourbonism is even more threatening to the security of our institutions, for, scanning back through history, it seems to me that Bourbonism always precedes and is the cause of Bolshevism."

No Evils Shown in Packing Industry, Says L. F. Swift

Doesn't Object to Being Relieved of Cars and Stock Yards but Doubts Wisdom of Move.

NEW YORK, Feb. 2.—L. F. Swift, president of Swift & Co., made the following comments with regard to Mr. Hoover's letter to the President on the packing industry.

"The principal issue seems to be whether or not there is a monopoly and I believe it was clearly demonstrated at the recent Congressional hearings that the large packers are in active competition with each other. There are absolutely no agreements among the five largest packers to control prices, and they together handle less than forty per cent. of the meat supply of the country. The largest company handles only about twelve per cent. of the total meat supply and less than twenty-five per cent. of even the output of houses that under United States inspection

"I have publicly stated that we have no serious objection to being relieved of our interest in refrigerator cars and stock yards. But we have pointed out that it is decidedly questionable whether any efficiency or benefit can be gained by such procedure. We would also call attention to the fact that during the recent hearings no evils needing correction have been brought to light in connection with packer ownership of these facilities.

"I quite agree with Mr. Hoover that there is no reason for the government to take over the branch houses of the packers, but I do not feel that sufficient consideration has been given to the question of handling other products than meats. Swift & Co. handles only a few such products, and are distinctly related to our business either as by-products of the packing houses or as goods which can be economically handled through our extensive distributing organization.

"I hardly think that the government should assume authority to dictate what products any business concern may or may not handle. There is not only no need for such a step in connection with the packing house business, but it would act as a dangerous precedent which might be extended to all other industries.

"It is a little difficult for me to reconcile Mr. Hoover's criticism of the fact that the large packers have eliminated middlemen and gone direct to the retailers with the general opinion that marketing should be as direct as possible from producer to consumer. I think it will be conceded that if we have eliminated unnecessary middlemen this has been to the advantage of the public."

48 Hour Air Mail Service to Pacific Termed Practical

Major Albert Smith Predicts Route will be in Regular Use within a Year.

SAN DIEGO, Cal., Feb. 22. — "The most practicable transcontinental airplane mail carrying route is from either San Francisco or San Diego through to Texas, and thence up the Atlantic coast to Philadelphia, Washington and New York. I believe that the flying time of this service between New York and California can be cut to forty eight hours, and that an uninterrupted service can be maintained every day in the year."

This statement was made here by Major Albert Smith, commander of the Transcontinental Air Mapping Squadron, who recently completed a successful flight from San Diego to New York and return.

Major Smith said that the San Francisco-New York transcontinental aerial mail service should include the following stops: Yuma, Phoenix and Tucson, Ariz.; El Paso, Big Springs, Dallas and Fort Worth, Texas; Montgomery, Ala.; Jacksonville, Fla.; Savannah, Ga., Raleigh, N. C.; Petersburg and Hampton, Va.; Washington, Philadelphia and New York. If necessary, the service could include Arcadia and St. Augustine, Fla., but this would add at least five hours to the flying time. These stops would give an average of two hundred miles to each landing place, where mail could be dropped and fuel and oil taken aboard.

Major Smith believes that the most suitable type of airplane for the transcontinental aerial service is a Martin bombing machine, equipped with twin Liberty motors of 400-horse power each. Should one of the motors develop trouble the air plane should reach its destination with the remaining motor, thereby insuring one hundred per cent. flying efficiency, said the major.

Major Smith flew a total of 8,000 miles. He was in the air exactly 110 hours and fifteen minutes on the eastbound flight. He covered 4,500 miles in fifty-five flying hours westbound from New York to San Diego, and omitting the stops at Florida cities, the Major covered 3,500 miles in forty-three hours and fifteen minutes. The longest day's flight was from El Paso to San Diego, a distance of 1,500 miles, in nine hours and thirty minutes. He had breakfast at Fort Bliss, luncheon at Yuma and dinner at his home in San Diego.

Major Smith said that an average altitude of 3,000 feet should be maintained, and that an average speed of 105 miles an hour easily could be made with the twin motored aircraft carrying a load of from one and one-half to two tons of first class mail.

The prevailing winds between Texas and California are westerly, which will enable the airplane to make much faster time on the westward trip. Major Smith declares that a letter placed aboard an airplane in New York at five o'clock on Sunday morning should be delivered at San Francisco before noon on Tuesday.

PRIZE PIG SELLS FOR ONLY $10,000

SPRINGFIELD, Feb. 22.—Sixty-five thousand, eight hundred dollars was the price paid for 54 hogs by breeders from all parts of the United States who attended the sale to-day of Duroc Jersey hogs, owned by Ira Jackson, breeder, near here. Jackson's Top King, a boar, brought a top price of $10,500, going to F. G. Goodlin, of Tennessee.

CHANGE OF VENUE IN NEUSTADT REEVE'S CASE REFUSED BY COURTS.

TORONTO, Feb. 22.—Chief Justice Mulock refused the motion of Daniel O'Connell on behalf of Reeve Weber, Neustadt, for a change of place of trial. He said that the court on the evidence presented could not hold that a fair jury could not be obtained in Grey County. The refusal does not prejudice a similar application to the trial judge.

SAYS LABOR REBELS AT BEING MACHINE

Economist Tells Engineers More Wages and Better Conditions Will Not Allay Unrest.

INTEREST MUST BE AROUSED

C. V. Corless of the Canadian Institute of Mining Engineers, addressing the American Institute of Mining Engineers, at their convention in New York, discussed the aims and trend of the Labour Movement as follows:

"When we regard the widespread unrest in Great Britain and America," he said, which centres chiefly around the antagonism between capital and labor, we find the real causes disguised by divers names. Those who have had experience know that to increase wages, to shorten hours, to improve now this working condition, and now that, or to concede any other of the varied demands of labor, never satisfies There are probably very few men who would not be willing to earn less, to work harder and for longer hours, and under worse conditions, or to get on with fewer holidays, if it were done for themselves in any undertaking in which they really felt a deep interest personally. But in modern industry they do not feel personally interested. They have no sense of ownership. They never begin or finish anything. They have little or no interest in the end product. They do not have the opportunity to think for themselves. They are generally required to perform certain definite work, or even mere mechanical movements without consultation, or in a way that does not call for reasonable exercise or recognition of their intelligence.

"They have little or no voice in governing themselves. They are parts of an organization, cogs in an economic machine which they do not fully understand, and in which they almost lose their identity—that is, their freedom for self-development. Somebody, somewhere, shapes the organization and sets it in motion, but the parts of the organization they see or the work they perform usually have little, if any, scientific or social meaning to them. Hence their spirit rebels. The human spirit, unless it has been utterly suppressed is fortunately so constituted that it always rebels against any form of external authority in which it has no share, and which it does not intelligently grasp.

"Industrial peace will never be attained as long as capital and management assume the right to a final say on matters intimately affecting the welfare and even the self-respecting existence of a very numerous class whose loyal co-operation is as essential to the success of every industrial enterprise as their own.

"Is it clearly recognized that we are at the beginning of a great transition period of industry? Do we realize that the autocracy of capital is coming to an end? Such periods of widespread, rapid social change are times of peculiar danger. It is in the power of the present members of society either to recognize the principle at work and to lend intelligent assistance to the movement or to increase the social danger by opposing it."

Mr. Corless advocated a comprehensive scheme of education among workers that they might be capable of intelligently solving the problems that will come with fuller recognition of industry. He said the greatest, if not the only, safeguard against Bolshevism and red revolution was widespread social, economical, and ethical education."

FOREST CITY ATTACKS CONSTITUTIONALITY OF ONTARIO HIGHWAY ACT.

TORONTO, Feb. 22. It is unofficially learned by the Department of Highways that the constitutionality of the Ontario Highway Act is challenged by London city and will be fought in the courts on the contention that a city municipality should not and legally may not be required to contribute funds for the upkeep of roads not within the corporation boundaries.

Department officials state that the law is common to many other provinces and states besides Ontario, and that by popular vote, Toronto contributes to the upkeep of York County Road. It is believed negotiations now in progress will result in a settlement.

SUES DIVORCED HUSBAND VALUE OF PLAYER PIANO

DENVER, Col.—Mrs. Margaret Holderness, divorced wife of Edward H. Holderness, has brought suit to recover from her former husband $1,358.75, which she names as the equivalent of a player piano and other property which he had given her at the time of their separation and later had taken into his possession and sold.

She says that in December, 1917, finding it impossible longer to live together, they separated by agreement, she storing in a Denver warehouse a player piano and other household goods that he had agreed should go to her on their parting. She says that she left Denver to make her home in Los Angeles and that while she was there he brought suit for divorce and after that was granted laid claims to the goods in the warehouse and sold them, converting the proceeds to his own use.

LOW Price has never been a consideration in designing and building the Gray-Dort. Our engineering department and our purchasing department have but one aim—to produce the finest light car.

That the price is reasonable is due to factory efficiency and large production.

Especially if you have owned or driven another light car, you will appreciate the refinements in the Gray-Dort—the smoothness, power and pick-up of its motor; the standard equipment; the comfort of riding and driving; the unblemished beauty of line and finish.

The touring car is $1245; the Gray-Dort Special—the car with added refinements and extra equipment—is $135 extra; there are also a coupe, and a sedan. All prices f.o.b. Chatham and are subject to change without notice.

IF KIDNEYS ACT BAD TAKE SALTS

SAY BACKACHE IS A SIGN YOU HAVE BEEN EATING TOO MUCH MEAT, WHICH FORMS URIC ACID

When you wake up with backache and dull misery in the kidney region it generally means you have been eating too much meat, says a wellknown authority Meat forms uric acid which overworks the kidneys in their effort to filter it from the blood and they become sort of paralyzed and loggy. When your kidneys get sluggish and clog you must relieve them, like you relieve your bowels; removing all the body's urinous waste, else you have backache, sick headache, dizzy spells; your stomach sours, tongue is coated and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment, channels often get sore, water scalds and you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night.

Either consult a good, reliable physician at once or get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is a life saver for regular meat eaters. It is inexpensive cannot injure, and makes a delightful, effervescent lithia-water drink.

LATE SIR WILFRID LAURIER'S FUNERAL

Line of Route.

Soon after eight o'clock great numbers of spectators had assembled along the line of route, taking advantage of every position which would give them an unobstructed view. The city had filled with visitors as if by magic overnight, special trains running from distant points and at times congesting the large railway station. Promptly at ten o'clock arrangements for the departure of the cortege were completed despite the complexity of having to make up the procession composed of horse drawn sleighs, for the streets in Ottawa are deep in snow, and of scores of dignitaries of State, National societies, returned soldiers, and political bodies closing with the vast unclassified stream of simple citizens from nearly all parts of the Dominion. The Governor-General and Staff, Gen. [illegible] representing H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught, Lieut.-Governor, Archbishops and Bishops, members of the House of Commons, with whom members of the Parliamentary press gallery walked. Prominent gentlemen acted as honorary pall bearers.

In the sanctuary were several Archbishops and Bishops, and representatives of all religious communities. A touching requiem mass, composed by Abbe Perosi, was rendered by the choir, and at the conclusion eloquent eulogies of the dead are to be pronounced in French by Archbishop Mathieu, of Regina, and in English by Rev. Father John Burke, Paulist of Toronto, son of the late Mr. Denis Burke, of Ottawa. After the final absolution the body was taken to its last resting place in Notre Dame cemetary. At the grave the last rites were performed by Father La Jeune of the Juniorate of the Sacred Heart.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

Mr. Walden wishes to announce that having disposed of his interests in the West, he expects to reside permanently in Peterborough, and give his time exclusively to his profession as a Teacher of Piano and Vocal Music, at 583 Bethune street.

Mr. Wm. Andrews left this morning to spend the week end in Toronto.

Mrs. Cooke, 64 Hunter Street, gave a dance last night in honour of her brother, Pte. W. J. Johnston, who has just returned from France, the guests numbering about fifty. Lunch was served in the dining-room. The house was prettily decorated with flags.

A pleasant and social evening was held at the home of Miss M. Nicholls, 547 George street, in honor of Mrs. A. Pappas, Sherbrooke street, who is leaving for New York.

A very enjoyable time was spent last night in the form of a basket social at School Section No. 8, Douro, where about one hundred and thirty young people met and spent the evening in dancing. During the evening the crowd was favored with a step-dance from Messrs. Thomas and Martin Sullivan, and James McAllister. The proceeds of the social, which were very generous, will be used for the purpose of laying a new floor in the school room, and other improvements.

Private M. J. Flaherty of Minneapolis, Minn., U.S., formerly of Peterboro, is spending a few days with his sister, Mrs. James S. Leek, of Toronto. Pte. Flaherty has just returned from France on the S. S. Baltic. Several theatre parties and dinner parties were given in his honor. He will leave for Minneapolis today.

Miss Marguerite Mulhall, of Toronto, is at her home, 736 Water Street, for the week-end. Last evening Miss Mulhall entertained a few of her friends.

Miss Marguerite McGregor, of Toronto, is the week-end guest of Miss Marguerite Mulhall, 736 Water Street.

Mr Frank Dobbin received word this morning that Pte. J. H. Foster 161 London street will probably arrive in the city to-day.

Miss Clare Mason, Toronto University, was in the city to attend the Commencement exercises at the Collegiate Institute last night.

Mrs. Harrington is in Toronto for the week end.

Mr. Ed. Moher was in Lindsay yesterday on business.

Mr. William Brown and Mr. and Mrs. Jos. Brown, Lindsay, are in the city to attend the funeral of the late Mrs. Aaron Comstock.

Mr. and Mrs. Alex. Flax, Lindsay, are in the city to-day to attend the funeral of the late Mrs. Aaron Comsock, which takes place this afternoon.

ARTISTIC BRIDGES TO COMMEMORATE DEAD

Fine Thing for Rural Communities, Declares Brig.-Gen. Gunn.

"Every municipality ought to have some distinctive way of commemorating the boys who went overseas, and who will never come back," was the opinion expressed by Brig.-Gen. J. A. Gunn.

"A system of memorial bridges constructed as needed throughout the country," continued the general, "would be a very useful way of honouring the brave boys who went from rural communities and fell in battle. These could be given a added attractiveness by spending a little more money at both entrances to the bridges and erecting tablets with the names of the boys from the county or township who lost their lives while serving overseas. In my opinion this would be a practical and constant reminder of the sacrifices made by the dead of each community, and would be a constant reminder of duty to the living."

Prices Were Higher To-day

Said to be a Shortage of Feed for Stock.

With the time worn excuse of the scarcity of feed for the stock, the farmers asked higher prices this morning at the market.

Butter sold at from 50c to 58c a pound.

Eggs at 40c to 42c a dozen.

Chicken from 30c to 35c a pound.

Turkeys at 45c a pound.

On the outside market beef sold at 19c a pound, pork at 27 and 28c and lamb at 32c.

Plenty of mixed wood was brought in and good cords of mixed maple and birch cut ready to burn sold at $9 and $9.50.

Apples sold at $2.50 a bag, potatoes at $1.35 a bag.

Price of Sugar is Still Higher

No Danger of Shortage—Thousands of Tons Bought Up.

Anxious housewives who look for a sudden drop in sugar are doomed to disappointment, it seems. Until October, anyhow, there is little chance of prices coming down. Investigation shows that the Canada Food Board has bought up 120,000 tons of the San Domingo crop and taken an option on the balance at fixed prices for delivery between January 1st and October 1st. It has bought 100,000 tons of British West Indian sugar also at fixed prices for delivery during about the same period.

If there should be a repetition of the San Domingo revolution of 1917, when the rebels burned a large acreage, prices might be influenced adversely. The natives, having been making all the money they want, are not eager for work. And the cotton used for the bags is still high in price.

Competition among the refiners is one of the few factors which might have a lowering effect on the price of this commodity, and then it would be probably only about 25c on the hundred pounds. Above all, everything depends on the progress of the Peace Conference. One consolation remains, however. The supply is plentiful.

Buys a La-Porta-Power Attachment

Mr. Donald Cameron, of Birdsall, has purchased from the Duffus Garage a La-Porta-Power Attachment. This attachment is adaptable for any make of car and by simply placing it under the rear wheels, it furnishes power for any purpose.

The price is only $45, and Mr. Cameron says he would rather have it than any gasoline engine. 1d-45-1w-9

WEDDING BELLS

CROUGH—BUCHAN.

A pretty wedding took place at St. Helen's Roman Catholic Church, Toronto, on Tuesday, February 18, at 8 a.m., when Miss Drucilla Mabel Buchan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alex. Buchan, No. 6 Langemark Ave., Toronto, became the bride of John Edw. Crough, of Toronto, formerly of Peterborough. The ceremony was performed by Rev. F. O'Connor. Mrs. James S. Leek, a recent bride, was Matron of Honour.

The happy couple were the recipients of numerous and costly wedding presents. After a wedding breakfast at the bride's parents' home, the happy couple left on the 1.15 C.P.R. train for Buffalo, New York and Allentown. On their return they will take up their residence in Toronto, where the groom has a responsible position. Mr. Crough is the well-known hockey and baseball player.

OBITUARY

WILFRID LAURIER CROUGH

The death occurred this morning after a short illness of pneumonia of Mr. Wilfrid Laurier Crough, the eighteen year old son, of Mr. Daniel Crough of Ennismore Township.

The funeral will take place on Monday morning at nine o'clock to St. Martin's Church and St. Martin's Cemetery, Ennismore.

Acquit Nearing After 30 Hours

Ex-Professor is Absolved of Attempting to Obstruct the Draft —His Publishers Guilty.

NEW YORK, Feb. 22. — Scott Nearing, ex-professor in the University of Pennsylvania and the University of Toledo, was acquitted by a jury in the Federal Court of a charge of attempting to obstruct the draft. The American Socialist Society, co-defendant and publishers of "The Great Madness," on which the indictments were chiefly based, was found guilty on the third and fourth counts.

On motion of Seymour Stedman, chief counsel for the defense, Judge Julius M. Mayer set aside the verdict on the third count, which alleged that the defendants had caused insubordination, mutiny and refusal to obey orders in the military forces of the Government. The court held that the jury's findings were inconsistent with the verdict rendered in Nearing's case. Judge Mayer fixed March 3 for argument to set aside the verdict against the American Socialist Society on the remaining count. This count alleged that Nearing and the American Socialist Society had obstructed recruiting and enlistments in the armed forces of the United States. The maximum fine for attempting to obstruct the draft is $10,000.

The jury, which was out about thirty hours, began its deliberations at 12:30 Tuesday afternoon, and did not reach an agreement until shortly after 6 o'clock. The trial lasted twelve days.

O'Leary Trial.

The defense at the continuation of the trial of Jeremiah A. O'Leary placed witnesses on the stand to show that the defendant was in the Adirondacks in September, 1917, instead of Long Beach, as testified to by Government witnesses. Instead of conspiring with German agents at the Hotel Nassau at Long Beach, the defense asserted he was seeking to restore his health in the mountains. Michael and Patrick H. Breen, cousins of the defendant, swore that O'Leary stayed at the Tahawus Club, near Elizabethtown. John E. Singletown of Glen Falls told Federal Judge A. N. Hand and the jury that the defendant had stopped at his home on September 1 and 2.

Major Michael F. O'Rourke, a veteran of the Spanish American War and a member of the Executive Committee of the Sons of Irish Freedom, testified that O'Leary, who is charged with violation of the Espionage Act, had never opposed the draft in any of the addresses he had heard him make. He characterized O'Leary as 100 per cent. American.

The defense called several witnesses to contravert testimony given by witnesses for the Government that O'Leary had urged an audience at a meeting at 715 Lexington avenue, after the passage of the Selective Service Act, to fight conscription. They all testified that the defendant confined his remarks to expressing thanks for the work they had done at the Irish Bazaar held several months previously in Madison Square Garden

Grocery Markets For the Week

Few Price Changes Recorded in the List.

Canadian Grocer this week says: Coffee continues to form one of the strongest points in the markets today, and were primary basis carried through to spot stocks a general advance of about 4c per pound would be made. The War Trade Board of the United States announces the removal of coffee from the export conservation list, effective February 14.

It is understood actual export business on canned goods for January amounted to 218 cars, principally peas, tomatoes and 4-lb. jam, with tomatoes forming a big total. It is further indicated that there is still business in sight for the present month. This heavy movement should tend to clean up stocks pretty well and steady the markets.

Cereals carry perhaps more changes than any other class of goods this week. Rolled oats are steady and show some slight advances. Cornmeal has sagged, however, and a 50c drop in linseed meal has been recorded. Barley flour, corn flour and oat flour are all lower, and prices on pearl hominy and hominy grits have been revised downward.

Brisk McLaughlin Sales

Yesterday the A. Brown & Co. Garage, Water street, sold two seven passenger McLaughlin cars and one "45 Special" McLaughlin Touring car, the prices paid amounting in the aggregate to $7,410. Pretty good sales for one day.

ANOTHER DEFAULTER IS IN CUSTODY.

Another defaulter appeared before Magistrate Dumble this mosning in the person of Edward Murphy, of Kirkfield, Ont. He was ordered to report to the 1. Depot Battalion at Kingston on May 15th but failed to do so. He pleaded guilty to the charge and was remanded to the afternoon of Thursday, Feb. 27th, until the Attorney-General's fiat arrives. In the meantime Murphy is trying to arrange bail.

RESTAURANTS WILL BE OPEN TO-MORROW.

In accordance with the action of the City Council on Thursday night, repealing the by-law restricting the opening of the restaurants to so limited a time on Sunday that they found it impossible to keep open, the restaurants will open to-morrow (Sunday) for the first time in several months.

STOPPANI FREED FROM SING SING

SING, SING, N.Y., Feb. 21.—Joseph Stoppani, one-time stock broker in New York city, and a score of other prisoners, were released here on parole by the Board of Parole. The meeting of the board was held in the prison and for the first time Charles T. Rattigan, recently appointed superintendent of prisons by Governor Smith, presided.

Stoppani, who began a two year sentence a year ago this month, was convicted in Brooklyn on a charge of having misappropriated $5,048 belonging to John F. Smith, retired merchant of No. 141 North Third street.

The Board also paroled George Hodson, Charles Partridge and "Bill" Magee. Hodson, formerly confidential man for Thomas Mott Osborne, when he was warden of Sing Sing served foruteen years of a twenty year sentence for a murder in Erie County. After Governor Whitman commuted his sentence, the Board at the close of last year refused to free him on parole.

Partridge was sent to Sing Sing for stealing $50,000 from the estate of a theatrical manager, and Magee had served nine years of a sentence for manslaughter.

FIRST WET SPUN YARNS.

GUELPH, Feb. 22.—The big plant of Flax Spinners, Limited, of this city, has commenced operations, and is producing wet spun line yarns as sixty les. The plant will eventually spin up to eighty les. These yarns, which are of a very superior quality, are being spun from Canadian flax, and are the first wet spun yarns produced in Canada, and so far as known the first in America. The mill will commence operations on both dry and wet spun tow yarns in the next ten days. When the balance of the equipment now being manufactured in Belfast and Leeds is installed the plant will have a capacity of approximately 1,000,000 pounds of finished yarn per annum. This company is a subsidiary of Dominion Linens, Limited, the plant adjoining its property.

Disarming Hun Army Treaty Will End War

So Effective in Precluding Possibility of Hostilities, That Permanent Armistice is Likely to Result—Military Document Highly Important

AND GEN. FOCH IS NOT "TAKING CHANCES"

PARIS, Feb. 24.—The Supreme War Council has completed the main details of the military treaty which Marshal Foch will soon present to the Germans.

It will be further perfected in detail at a meeting of the council on Monday, and then finally passed upon by the council of the great powers on Tuesday.

The document is a highly important one, being in its terms a permanent armistice, but in effect a military treaty, disarming and demobilizing the German forces down to a small police basis, understood to be between five and ten divisions of 10,000 men each, with a similar complete naval and aerial disarmament and the dismantlement of the frontier fortifications as well as Heligoland and the Kiel Canal.

The economic and boundary questions with Germany are left for later deliberation, but from the military and naval standpoint this treaty will be completely effective in terminating the war, making impossible any resumption of it. The treaty will also have the effect of releasing all the allied troops, except in the established areas to be occupied until the definite peace treaty is signed.

This military treaty will be so effective in ending the possibility of hostilities that is construed in some quarters as definitely ending the war, although there may still be the technical question whether the final ending of the war does not await the signing of the final treaty of peace.

A BIG SLUMP IN THE PRICE OF SOAPS IS EXPECTED ANY TIME NOW

Manufacturers Blame the Government for Loading Them Up for War Work—All the Ingredients Have Been Cut Practically in Half

Toilet and laundry soaps will probably take a big slump in price, as all the ingredients have been practically cut in half in the last few weeks. The situation among soap manufacturers is such that they seem to be prepared when the price drops for a big loss. That they are still trying to hold on to the old prices is evident from some of the explanations they are giving out. None has as yet put down the price and each is waiting for the other fellow to start seems to be the general attitude.

W. G. Sanderson, manager of the Ontario Soap and Oil Company, stated that tallow had dropped from 18 cents a pound to 8 cents about the beginning of December. "Only yesterday we were offered five carloads at 7 3-4 cents a pound," he said. "Silicate, another ingredient, is down in price at least 50 per cent. During the war it went up to 4 cents a pound and now it is down to 2 cents. Caustic soda has also decreased about 50 per cent. During the war it was 5 cents a pound and now it is 2 3-4 cents. Wyndotte soad went up to 5 cents. Its normal price is 1 1-2 cents, and now it is back to 3 cents. Palm olive oil and cocoanut oil, which was previously 20 and 25 cents, is now 15 cents. Therefore it is only reasonable to my way of thinking that both toilet and laundry soaps should drop in price.

Says Loss is Heavy.

"Of course, the difficulty is," he continued, "that soap manufacturers stocked up in these ingredients while the war was on and the prices were high, as it was necessary to fill war orders. Now that the war is over we have quantities of them on our hands, so that when we are forced to sell soap at lower prices we will probably lose heavily." Mr. Sanderson's company manufactures liquid and soft soaps.

When asked if prices would come down immediately, one of the managers of the John Taylor Co., Ltd., said: "No, he didn't think so. If soap takes a drop in price we will be forced to go out of business," he said, "and there will be others like us." He then explained his reasons.

"One of the by-products of soap is glycerine. While the war was on the Government demanded huge supplies of this from us to be used in explosives. Of course, the price of it went up in leaps and bounds until it reached 70 cents a pound. Now it is 15 cents. Because we were making such big profits on this we decided not to raise the price of our soap in accordance with the rapid advance of the prices of ingredients used in it. Since the armistice the United States and Britain have cancelled their orders, leaving us in the lurch with huge quantities of glycerine on our hands as well as soap, for we had to make an extra amount of soap to get the glycerine. Now we feel justified, even though the price of ingredients have gone down, in keeping to the old soap prices. If we can't we will have to go out of business or take tremendous losses. It means that our only support now is our soap."

The general manager of the Palm Olive Soap Co. blames the situation on the Government. He said that he had no idea at present of decreasing the price of soap. "The Government called soap manufacturers together in Ottawa and asked us to make as much glycerine as possible for war purposes. We did it and when the armistice was signed, of course the contracts were cancelled, and we had huge quantities of soap ingredients left on our hands which we bought at the high prices. We have not been able yet to buy at the lower prices on account of our huge amounts of stock. We have lines now which we are selling at a dead loss," he stated.

GRAIN MARKET

Cash grain markets weakened slightly Friday all down the list. There are not wanting plenty of bull argument for keeping the market up, but the bears were very persistent and succeeded in lowering the options, the cash markets following suit. Saturday most of the exchanges were closed in Canada out of respect to the memory of Sir Wilfrid Laurier and in the States on account of Mr. Washington's Birthday holiday.

Hydro-Electric Power For Norwood District Assured

Readjustment of Conditions Affecting Material and Labor Will Bring About Early Construction of Line

NORWOOD, Feb. 24. — A conference between representatives of the municipalities of Hastings, Havelock and Norwood, and Mr. L. J. Ireland, consulting engineer of the Hydro-Electric Commission took place here in the council chamber in reference to the prosposed line from Healey Falls.

There were present Reeve Hess and Councillor Charles B. Plant, of Hastings, Reeve Mathison, Councillor Joyce and Clerk Lancaster, of Havelock, Reeve Squire, Councillors Puffer, Montgomery and Elliott, and Clerk Laing, of Norwood, besides a number of ratepayers.

Mr. Ireland, in speaking to the representatives of the municipalities present, assured them that the construction of a power line from Healey Falls to Peterboro via Norwood, had been definitely decided upon but the construction work had been deferred on account of the present high cost of material and labor. He counselled the municipalities not to press the matter and assured them that the Commission were only waiting the readjustment of conditions to begin operations, which might be in two months, or it might be in six months or perhaps a year, but in any event unless there were very special reasons for immediate construction it would pay to wait.

After considering Mr. Ireland's recommendation and the reasons given therefor, it was conceded that it would be in the best interests of all to defer action for the time being. Mr. Ireland stated that he would be pleased to advise the municipalities as to future developments and possibilities.

In discussing details of the work, Mr. Ireland stated that the Commission would build the line and deliver power at the boundary line of each corporation. Also that power would be available for the farmers along the route.

One central sub-station would be constructed at Norwood from which low tension wires would be extended to each of the municipalities. This would be much more economical both as regards construction and maintenance than to build separate substations to supply each municipality.

British Controller of Food Predicts Decline in Prices

Price Fixing To Be Abandoned So Free Competition May Lower Values.

LONDON, Feb. 22. — George H. Roberts, the Food Controller, in a statement to representatives of the press on the food situation, said:

"During the last three months, from November 1, 1918, to February 1, 1919, prices declined slightly in this country. This decline certainly is continuing and it may safely be anticipated that the next month will show an appreciable fall in food prices as a whole. It is recognized that the system of controlled prices based upon costs, though it was the best and, indeed, the only plan for the prevention of profiteering in the past time of scarcity, is by no means of the same value in time of abundance and may not in some cases now secure distribution of food to the public as would be secured by free competition.

"When circumstances permit, the Food Controller is prepared to free articles of food from control and to trust to competition instead of to costs to reduce the expense of distribution to the lowest possible point. He has already taken this action in the case of tea and margarine. He has the same measure under consideration in respect to bacon, lard, condensed milk, dried fruits and meat, about which announcement of a substantial reduction in prices will be made almost immediately.

"There are at present in England a four weeks' supply of frozen meat, a six and one-half weeks' supply of bacon, seven weeks of cheese, two months of butter, eleven weeks of sugar and five months of tea."

Ruth Is Happy in Reviewing Brian's Letter

Chapter CXXVII.

Brian had said he would fight all the better, all the harder, because of the baby. That meant to Ruth that he would be in still more danger. But he also had said that now he must be extra careful of himself because of his desire to come back to her and the baby. How she was to reconcile his "going gunning for the Huns" and his care for himself, she didn't quite understand. Yet in a way, she was more than a little thrilled at the thought that Brian was not only fighting for his country; but for her and Brian, Jr.—the boy the father never had seen.

Ruth knew there were many such babies—babies born after the father had gone "over there" to do his utmost to save the world from the frightful slavery that a Hun triumph meant. Her heart went out in sympathy to the mother of those babies, the wives of the absent soldiers, and she determined to search some of them out and see if she could not help them in some way.

"They must need help—some of them," she said to her aunt.

"Of course. A great many of them are poor. It will be hard for them to get along on a soldier's pay. Especially those with very young babes. We will see what can be done about looking after a few of them, at least."

Ruth was happier than she had been in a long time. Brian knew about the baby and had not blamed her for hiding from him her coming motherhood. Yet before she slept, that night, after she had read again the letter which had so comforted her, she thought of Mollie King.

Brian had taken his joy directly to her. He had said he had to tell some one—some woman. That the woman happened to be Mollie was bitter to Ruth. She wondered if there were no other woman, older women, nurses perhaps, to whom Brian could have gone. It seems that Mollie was always in evidence when anything concerning Brian or his affairs were discussed. Almost feverishly she wished that Mollie King was somewhere away from Brian. That he had shared the news with her had the effect in some way of making them seem nearer together than ever.

Then she wondered what Brian would tell her that he wouldn't want the censor to read, and blushed in the dark. He had said he was happy. He had called her "little mother," and wished that he might see her. Surely it was to tell her he loved her—and she was foolishly making herself unhappy over Mollie King.

"Oh, dear! Why couldn't she have stayed at home," Ruth said aloud, then turned over and went to sleep.

Ruth knew of Mr. Mandel's war work—knew that he was interested in anything pertaining to it. So she had no hesitancy in speaking of her plan to him—the plan to help the mothers of babies born after their soldier-fathers had gone overseas.

"A case of a 'kindred feeling making you wondrous kind,' he said with a quizzical smile. Then seriously: "I shall help you all I can. I think there is a woman on one of my committees who knows and has aided several young mothers. I will speak to her and if I am right I will arrange for you to meet her. As I understand you want to do some personal work for them?"

"Yes—Aunt Louisa and I. She will furnish most of the money, of course. But I do want to do something and nothing has appealed to me like this."

"Naturally." Then: "If you need more money than Mrs. Clayborne gives you let me know. I should like to help also. It is a very necessary charity, I am sure. Perhaps one which has been overlooked in the many demands made upon us by the exigencies of war."

Ruth thanked him. The very next day but one he told her he had arranged a meeting with the woman he had spoken of; that she was interested in that work, and was delighted to have Ruth come to her for information. He also volunteered to take Ruth to the committee rooms. This offer Ruth refused. Somehow she felt that it would be better to go alone. Mandel seemed a little hurt but as was his way he said nothing, seemingly satisfied to allow Ruth to do as she pleased. That he longed to go with her, longed for the quiet fifteen or twenty minutes alone with her, she had no way of knowing. He had turned away his face so that she would not see how keenly he was disappointed.

When she left the shop he handed her a note of introduction to Mrs. Livingstone, the woman she was to see.

She said she would be at liberty between nine-thirty and ten o'clock in the morning—if I did not fetch you this afternoon. Go to her and remain as long as you wish. We will get along without you for the morning."

"You are too good to me," Ruth returned impulsively, holding out her hand—which he pressed firmly in his, then let go.

To-morrow—Ruth is Charmed with Mrs. Livingstone.

Stomach So Bad

THOUGHT HE WOULD DIE.

CAN EAT ANYTHING NOW.

But for indigestion and dyspepsia, many a life might be a pleasant one.

The misery which stomach troubles cause the sufferer knows only too well and any one who has suffered knows what joy it would give to be able to eat three good meals a day and not be punished for it after.

Nearly everything that enters a weak stomach acts as an irritant, and even the little that is eaten causes such torture and is digested so imperfectly that it does little good.

Before you can eat heartily, and not pick and choose your food, you must put your stomach right so that it will manufacture its own digestive ferments.

For forty years now Burdock Blood Bitters has been making weak stomachs strong, and permanently curing severe cases of indigestion and dyspepsia that other remedies were powerless to reach.

Mr. H. L. Fairweather, Cumberland Bay, N. B., writes:—"I was troubled with my stomach for two years, and sometimes was so bad I thought I would die. I tried everything I ever heard tell of, and had medicine from three doctors, but continued to grow worse. One day I read of some wonderful cures made with Burdock Blood Bitters. After taking two bottles I could eat any kind of food without any bad effects and by the time I had taken four I was in perfet health."

Is Bolshevism a Danger?

THERE is no danger of the spread of Bolshevism, in Canada, unless the capitalists attempt to take away the gains which labor has won through the war, and Bolshevism is not likely to become ascendant in Germany, as it has in Russia.

Prof. Ross, a well-known sociologist from the neighboring republic returned recently from a six months sojourn in Russia, during which he studied the background and conditions of the revolution.

"Socialism to be reached by dictatorship of the proletariat was the idea developed by Russian thinkers and it involves delegates from the working classes," says Prof. Ross. "They happened to be soldiers, and that they should seize the power and be the state, to the exclusion of all other people, was a later development.

"They planned at first to watch the provisional government in Russia. After months of development of opinion they, the Soviets, became the government. It was a gradual growth to prominence of the working people, because they felt they were being sacrificed.

"What occurs to a people when they first experience freedom in democracy. Everybody, including women, were to have the vote. The idea of monopoly of power by the working classes—that does not occur to people—it comes as a result of disappointment.

"That is why Bolshevism will not become ascendant in Germany. Consider how broad the difference is between the German and Russian situations. The war went on in Russia after the revolution; in Germany it is over before the revolution takes place.

"In Russia 70 per cent. of the adults are illiterate. In Germany but 1 per cent. are illiterate. In Russia there is little peasant proprietorship—it is widely prevalent in Germany. The German peasants will not go with the Bolsheviki as did the Russian peasants.

"In Russia the bourgeoisie were not numerous or organized or welled. In Germany they are more numerous and more capable. The masses hated the state in Russia, and there was a strong tendency toward disorganization and anarchy. The German masses have seen what they regard as a good side to the state, and they do not wish to see the state shattered. They want to keep the working-man's insurance, factory inspection, and so on.

"Bolshevism would not have triumphed in Russia if the Constituent Assembly had been convened in four months after the revolution. In Germany it will be convened, within three months after the revolution. For these reasons Bolshevism will not get the upper hand in Germany, in spite of the bitterness left by the ruinous defeat undergone by Germany in consequence of the leadership of the capitalist class.

In France and England all these things are true, but they are victors. They are good-natured because they are exultant. They were led not to destruction, but to victory, so that their bourgeoisie is not discredited.

Still more is this true of Canada. In this country, speaking broadly, labor trusts the Government. It does not regard the Government as the agent of capital. During the war labor has gained an eight-hour day, a big wage increase, and extension of its organization into the fields from which hitherto they have been excluded.

There is no indication that the people who desire socialism in this country exceed 5 per cent. of the population, and it may be that they are not more than 3 per cent. Therefore with the present situation in view, there is no reason to suppose that the country will be afflicted with a serious Bolshevist movement.

Still there is a problem in this country. From 1900 to the outbreak of the war, real wages went down; the money wage had in fact lost from 10 to 15 per cent. of the buying power it had in 1890. In the pre-war period, nearly half of the adult male workers in organized industry were earning less than $600 a year, while four-fifths received less than $750, which, according to the unanimous opinion of social workers, is the least on which a town family of normal size can be supported in health and decency. For some years, the proportion of the product of American industry going to earners of capital had increased, while the proportion going to labor had decreased.

Fortunately, there has been a rise in wages which more than exceeds the high cost of living, so that to-day labor can live better and gain a juster share of its product. But the movement among employers to restore the pre-war wage, allowing, however, for the high cost of living, the movement to set back the hands of the clock, and to concede labor no larger share of the product than it had five years ago, would encounter most determined resistance.

If employers take advantage of the demobilization of soldiers to restore the old order of low wages, the long day, and only 16 per cent. of the workers in organizations, we shall see Bolshevism spread among wage-earners like wildfire, and within a short period of years we may be in the presence of a full-fledged Canadian Bolshevist organization.

While the prospect is bright that such will never be the case, yet it is possible for Bolshevism to be evoked here—in case, that is to say, the capitalist is strong enough to reinstate the pre-war situation.

Over Four Hundred Perfumes.

It is interesting to note that 4,200 species of plants are gathered and used for commercial purposes in Europe. Of these 420 have a perfume that is pleasing, and enter largely into the manufacture of scents, soaps, and sachets.

There are more species of white flowers gathered than of any other colors—1,124. Of these 187 have an agreeable scent.

Next in order come yellow blossoms, with 851, 77 of them being perfumed. Red flowers number 823, of which 84 are scented. The blue flowers are of 594 varieties, 84 violet blossoms number 308, 13 of which are pleasantly odoriferous.

KEEP URIC ACID OUT OF JOINTS

Tells Rheumatism Sufferers to Eat Less Meat and Take Salts.

Rheumatism is easier to avoid than to cure, states a well-known authority. We are advised to dress warmly; keep the feet dry; avoid exposure; eat less meat, but drink plenty of good water.

Rheumatism is a direct result of eating too much meat and other rich foods that produce uric acid which is absorbed into the blood. It is the function of the kidneys to filter this acid from the blood and cast it out in the urine; the pores of the skin are also a means of freeing the blood of this impurity. In damp and chilly cold weather the skin pores are closed thus forcing the kidneys to do double work, they become weak and sluggish and fail to eliminate the uric acid which keeps accumulating and circulating through the system, eventually settling in the joints and muscles causing stiffness, soreness and pain called rheumatism.

At the first twinge of rheumatism get from any pharmacy about four ounces of Jad Salts; put a tablespoonful in a glass of water and drink before breakfast each morning for a week. This is said to eliminate uric acid by stimulating the kidneys to normal action, thus ridding the blood of these impurities.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, harmless and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and is used with excellent results by thousands of folks who are subject to rheumatism. Here you have a pleasant, effervescent lithia-water drink which will overcome uric acid and is beneficial to your kidneys as well.

BRITAIN CARRIED AMERICAN TROOPS ABROAD AT COST.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 20. — An agreement just reached between the United States and the British governments on the amount to be paid for the transportation of American troops to France during the war in British ships is based on the cost of transportation, with no margin for profit.

Brigadier General Hines, Chief of the embarkation service, went to Europe to work out the details of agreement with Lord Reading, the British ambassador to the United States, who arranged the project of employing British ships with Mr. Baker, Secretary of the Navy, when the Geramn drive last spring caused the American army to be rushed to France.

No figures were then discussed but when the Ambassador and General Hines met in London the Books of the British government showing the cost of operation were produced and the conferrees agreed as to the actual cost. Three classes of transportation are provided for, the first and second being for officers' accommodation and the third for the hundreds of thousands of enlisted men taken overseas in British bottoms.

Tom the Talker

By JANE OSBORN

(Copyright, 1918, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Associates who underestimated the actual ability of Tom Brattle said that the only reason why he had forged ahead from the post of least of all office boys in the sales department of the Universal Chopping Bowl company to the post of head of that department was not because of any superior knowledge of the psychology of people who wanted to buy chopping bowls wholesale or because of any personal magnetism, but because his tongue wagged like a woman's. Tom Brattle had the knack of talking fast and furious, but then Tom was one son among five daughters in a family that consisted of five or six maiden aunts and a grandmother and great-aunt and—well, Tom had learned that if he wanted to make himself heard to the end the only thing was to talk fast and leave no chinks in the conversational structure. If he did some one else would get a wedge in. And Tom had also noticed in those days when he filled the ink wells and bought sandwiches from the delicatessen for the "boss," Mr. Dawson, on busy days, that the salesmen who got the largest orders for chopping bowls from customers who came into the office were those who kept the possible buyer from raising any objection to the brand of chopping bowls that the Universal put out.

The Universal sales department, like every other department in every other concern, felt the effect of the increased demand for women to take the place of enlisted men, and the only solution seemed to be, when matters were at their worst, to enlist recruits from the number of wives and sisters and relatives of the well-to-do members of the concern who could not normally be gainfully employed. Tom's sisters were employed and so were his aunts, but when he wanted to get a new girl for the switchboard in the sales department he made his wants known to the heads of the concern, and the very recently acquired wife of one of the sons of the president of the concern was suggested as a candidate. She had caught the fever of general usefulness, and having no business asset but a pleasing voice, had been promised the first vacancy as telephone operator—which happened to be in Tom's department.

And this suited Tom immensely. Because Tom had a theory that a telephone operator was one of the most important personalities about any office, especially a sales office. She did more talking than any of the other girls employed, and talking, in Tom's estimation, was an important thing. And the girls in his office had rather looked down upon the post of telephone operating. When the regular girl for that job was on vacations or off at lunch they handled the wires condescendingly. To them it was a matter of minor consequence. So when the daughter-in-law of the president of the concern was coming to manage the switchboard, Tom felt that this would put a new light on the job of switchboard operating. It would lend it tone and show the girls just how important it was.

Then the morning that the young Mrs. Dawson was coming, Mr. Dawson phoned in to say that Mrs. Dawson had backed out. She had found that it would interefere with her "at homes." She hadn't realized that she would have to be there every day, and so—

Then Tom began to talk, and he talked fast and furiously, even though he was talking to the son of the president, and having hung up the receiver he sent to an agency for a telephone operator of the best type. He offered to pay her more than even he felt telephone operators were worth because he felt now that having assured the stenographers and other girls in the office that so important a personage as Mrs. Dawson was going to take the job, he could not retreat so far as to get the usual run of a half-hearted, listless girl for the work.

Tom seldom countenanced deception, but this time it was necessary; so when he found a nice-looking young woman in businesslike apparel waiting to see him in the outer office, and she began by saying that she believed they wanted a telephone operator, Tom let her get no further, but told her on the spot, in an undertone, that she looked as if she would do, but that she would have to bluff it out as the daughter of the president and consent to be called Miss Dawson, and conduct herself as nearly as it was possible for her to do as the daughter of the president of a chopping bowl concern would conduct herself.

"But you see—" began the applicant.

"That is quite all right," Tom rattled on. "You're an intelligent young woman, and you can manage, and none of these girls know anything about the family of Mr. Dawson. So it is settled, and if you'll please take off your hat and coat at once, I'll have your name put on the payroll immediately."

"But I was going to say—"

"If you don't understand this board one of the girls will show you," Tom anticipated. "It isn't that they don't know how," he explained, "it's that they don't think it's worth while. That's why I wanted them to think that we had one of the Dawsons on the job. Tell them, if they ask, that Mrs. Dawson decided not to come, but that you came instead." And Tom hurried back to his office, bent on talking a flowing line of enthusiasm concerning the merits of the Dawson chopping bowls into his dictaphone. No stenographer could keep up with him.

Now, temperamentally Tom was not a fast talker. It was an acquired habit, and his idea of a happy home to go to after working hours was a home where there were not five sisters and aunts and things, and where one could talk as slowly or as little as one chose. It was because he had so often thought how restful such a home would be that he began to think about matrimony, and with matrimony on his mind and so thoroughly delightful a young woman as the new telephone operator in one's office, no one with Tom's preference for round blue eyes and smooth [illegible] voice could long stay out of love. But though Tom could talk chopping bowls and other business matters fluently enough, when it came to telling this young lady of his state of mind and heart his lingual talents forsook him. But he went on dreaming and even priced household furniture and consulted a real estate agent or so regarding small apartments.

Sometimes he got some small consolation in telling other people what a wonderful telephone operator he had, and expounding his theory that it paid to have a really first-class girl on that end of the work. He even told the president's son, Mr. Dawson, of this theory.

"But you know," began Mr. Dawson, "that young woman didn't come from the agency; "you see—"

"She didn't come from the agency?"

"No," said Dawson: "you didn't give me a chance to explain, and you didn't give her a chance, either. You see, Mrs. Dawson—"

Tom swallowed hard, and it seemed as if the sun went into a temporary eclipse. "I congratulate you on a rare treasure," he gulped. "She is wonderful."

"She has a high opinion of you, too," said Mr. Dawson, and somehow Tom thought this was an especially inappropriate remark. He didn't want to be thought well of by the woman he had loved in vain. He would rather have her detest him, now that he knew she was married.

"We'd like to have you come to dinner some time—make up a little family party," said young Dawson, and somehow the conversation closed here, and Tom went back to his office to talk chopping bowls to his dictaphone, but the words would not come. In fact for days and even weeks Tom lost his power of gab, and sales went down and business began to slump. He was working his ingenuity overtime trying to think of a way to get the charming Mrs. Dawson out of his office. Instead of seeming like a nice, straightforward, round, blue-eyed girl as she had seemed, she was a vampire in disguise to him now, and every time she beamed on him as he came and went, he imagined cruel thoughts lurking beneath the sweet charm of the smile.

"Billy wants me to get you to come home for dinner some time with us," she said to him one day. "You have been so cross lately I wouldn't ask you. Only we have such good friends to begin with before you knew I was a Dawson, and I don't approve of letting misunderstandings creep up between friends in that way."

And poor Tom accepted for dinner that very night and the blue-eyed young woman telephoned home to some one named Nora—the cook, of course—that she would bring him home for dinner and please have mushrooms and beefsteak, for she had heard him say once that he liked them. When 5:30 came and it was time to go Tom waited for young Bill Dawson.

"Won't your husband call for us here?" he said, and then as the blue eyes drew up in a pucker of questioning—"Yes, Mr. Bill Dawson, your husband."

"Why, Bill's my brother," said the girl, and though it was late on a dull afternoon, the sun came out of a cloud and the whole world was suffused with happiness for Tom.

"You see, you didn't give me a chance to explain. Nora, Bill's wife, backed out, and I took the job instead. I came that day to ask if I'd do, but you didn't give me a chance to say a word." She looked him frankly out of those round eyes. "Tom, you've been so blue and miserable lately," and she actually took his hand in her two and he had to hold on to the desk with the other to keep from floating into the seventh heaven. "Tom, has it been because you thought I was married—has it been because you cared?"

And Tom, the man with the tongue that was hung in the middle, couldn't do more than gasp a meager "yes."

WOMEN EVERYWHERE

Praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound as the Greatest Remedy for Woman's Ills.

New Haven, Conn.—"For two years I suffered with a female weakness, pains in my back and painful periods, and I was so weak and tired that I was not able to do my work. A friend told me to use Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it gave me great relief. My pains left me and I am now able to do my work and feel fine. You can publish my testimonial and if your Vegetable Compound does others as much good as it has me I will be very much pleased." —Mrs. CHARLES E. MORGAN, 37 Sea Street, New Haven, Conn.

The reason Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is so successful is because it contains the curative, strengthening properties of good old fashioned roots and herbs, which act directly on the female organism.

There are women everywhere who long for children in their homes yet are denied this happiness on account of some functional disorder which in most cases would readily yield to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Such women should not give up hope until they have given this wonderful medicine a trial, and for special advice write Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass. The result of 40 years' experience is at your service.

How It Came About.

"The worst winter I remember was when we were besieged," said the old soldier. "We had only one bite a day for two weeks and that was horseflesh."

"I remember," said Pat O'Brien, his companion. "living for a month on one bite, and that was out of my leg."

"You old cannibal. Do you expect me to believe that?" roared the soldier.

"It's true, believe it or not," said Pat calmly. "A dog took a bite out of my leg, and the insurance kept me like a lord for four weeks."

Life for most of us is made up of little things, so don't despise the opportunities for small enjoyments.

New Ship's Propeller.

To increase the efficiency of the ship's propeller, it is suggested by an inventor to place a smaller propeller, but with a steeper pitch, in front of the usual propeller, and on the same shaft. The smaller radius of the auxiliary screw compensates for the greater pitch, reducing the resistance to the screw.

The inventor of this double propeller claims that the auxiliary screw causes a better utilization of the engine's power. The small screw placed in front of the usual propeller acts upon the water near the shaft, where the larger screw exerts but little power. He contends that the addition of the smaller screw will not increase the burden placed upon the engine of the ship, and that, with the same motive force it will add from 25 to 30 per cent. to the driving power of the propeller.

There is no doubt that the addition of another screw of greater pitch would increase the driving power of the propeller a great deal, but it is by no means clear how this can be produced without adding to the burden of the ship's engines.—Popular Science Monthly.

Long Distance Messages.

It is announced that the French naval authorities have recently erected what is claimed to be the most powerful wireless station in the world, and which is capable of sending messages as far as Australia. If this prove to be true, the station has a range of at least fifteen thousand miles.

Why Stay Fat? You Can Reduce

The answer of most fat people is that it is too hard, too troublesome and too dangerous to force the weight down. However, in Marmola Prescription Tablets, all these difficulties are overcome. They are absolutely harmless, entail no dieting or exercise, and have the added advantage of cheapness. A large case is sold by druggists at 75c Or if preferable, they can be obtained by sending price direct to the Marmola Co., 864 Woodward Ave., Detroit, Mich. Now that you know this you have no excuse for being too fat, but can reduce two, three or four pounds a week without fear of bad after-effects.

Heat Insulators.

A new heat-isolating material is being produced in Sweden; the chief constituent is a kind of fireclay, known as "Molera," found on the Island of Mora. Another heat insulating material, composed of a mixture of a special clay and cork, has been discovered by a Norwegian engineer. The clay and cork mixture is burnt, and the result is the formation of a very light substance that is said to be eminently suitable for all heat insulating purposes.

The Modern Influenza.

That the new influenza is a distinct malady and not the old influenza is the belief of Dr. Leonard Keene Hirshberg. Writing in Munsey's he says:

"The present plague is probably the most malignant pandemic that the world has experienced since mediaeval times, when Boccaccio's ladies and gentlemen had to run away from Florence to escape an outbreak of the bubonic plague. In one of our army cantonments I saw more cases of pneumonia at one time than have entered the Johns Hopkins Hospital in the thirty-odd years of its foundation.

"In civil, as in military, life pneumonia was far and away the most frequent complication; and this led to the revival of the old name of 'black plague' for the new disease, the bodies of many of its victims being cyanotic, or purplish-black in color, at the approach of death.

"Another similarity between Spanish influenza and the bubonic plague was the number of rats and other rodents found dead. One day last October I noticed, and reported to the Public Health Service, three dead rats lying within a few blocks on three of the most prominent streets in Baltimore. Rats and their fleas seem to be the spreaders of contagion in several epidemic diseases."

Siam's New Flag.

Siam has a new flag. To commemorate the entry of his country into the war against Germany, King Maha Vajiravudh decided to modify the flag by adding blue to it, in order that it might be a tricolor like the flags of the other allies.

"This addition," says the royal decree, "will serve as a token of equality and honesty between Siam and her allies, for it is a sign of the alliance of the world against barbarism. Besides the color blue recalls the birthday of his majesty and is used especially for him. It seems good to him to make a figure in the national flag."

By the terms of this decree the new flag has five horizontal stripes—red, white, blue, white, red. The width of the blue stripe is three-sevenths of the total breadth, and that of each of the red and white stripes is one-seventh.

This flag is called the "Thong trai Rong," and is flown upon all merchant vessels and ashore in Siamese territory. Vessels in the Government service fly the same flag, but with an anchor, a wheel and a crown, in yellow, in the middle. Those of the royal Siamese navy carry in the middle a red disc on which is a white elephant.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

To Cure a Cold.

First stop eating. The system is overloaded with impurities and they must be eliminated. Fast until these poisons can be disposed of in a natural manner. Take long walks, drawing in many deep, full breaths, exercise every muscle of the body that the circulation may be quickened and each part of the body thoroughly cleansed by this accelerated circulation.

Bathe at least once a day, rubbing the surface of the body briskly all over for five or ten minutes. After missing from two to three meals, if a ravenous appetite is acquired, it is, of course, desirable to indulge this appetite, but in moderation. Under no circumstances should the stomach be gorged, and those foods which are unwholesome or but moderately nutritious should be avoided.

Molybdenite.

Molybdenite, chiefly found in Tasmania, is used for a variety of purposes, but its principal value is in the manufacture of steel, to which it gives a hardness and toughness that makes the steel suitable for use in propeller shafts, guns and boilers.

Shell-Shock Experts.

Sixty-five young women are graduates of the Training School for Psychiatric Social Work, Smith college, Northampton, Mass., and are styled "shell-shock experts." They will go immediately to clinics in New York, Boston and other cities to begin six months' practical work with nervous patients.

A Conservative Yank.

James Murray, 103 years old, who for 78 years, according to the New York Tribune, has lived in Trinity Church Cemetery, which is within the limits of New York City somewhere near 154th street, has never in his life ridden on a trolley car or seen a skyscraper building, and says he has no desire to visit the lower part of Manhattan Island for any such experience.

Shock Left Her Weak and Nervous

COULD NOT SLEEP

When the system receives a shock of any kind, the heart becomes weakened, the nerves unstrung, the appetite poor, faint and weak feelings come over you, you can't sleep at night, and you wonder if life is worth living.

To all those who suffer from nervous shock we would recommend Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills as the best remedy to tone up the entire system and strengthen the weakened organs.

Mrs. J. J. Bunyan, Pilot Butte, Sask., writes:—"I have used Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills after having suffered from a terrible shock to my whole system. I was so utterly weak, and nervous I could not sleep at night, and my appetite was very poor. I could not walk across the floor without trembling all over.

I had hot flushes and fainting spells. When I was on the second box of your Heart and Nerve Pills, I began to feel that they were doing me good, so I kept on until I had used six boxes, when I felt like a different person.

I am never without them in the house, and highly recommend them to all who suffer with their heart."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c. a box at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Peace Must Be Lasting.

Baron Shibusawa, one of the great bankers of Japan, gave an interview to the Tokio Yuniuni in which he deals with the peace proposals at length. The following excerpts are from a translation made by the Japan Advertiser: "Since practically the whole world has made such stupendous sacrifices for this war, peace should not be concluded until the object for which the Allies triumphed in the conflict has been fully accomplished. The only way in which the world can be saved from future wars is by establishing a permanent peace on solid foundations. In this respect, President Wilson's speech of Sept. 27 is very clear. He maintains that no nations on earth must be permitted, hereafter, to act for the attainment of their own selfish ends, and he insists that absolute guarantees must be given for the future and happiness of mankind. If this ideal be realized, the enormous sacrifices endured for victory have not been made in vain.

"Beyond doubt, viewed in the light of what has happened, Germany made use of the Peace Conference at The Hague as a cloak under which to conceal her wicked designs. When the day of trial came Germany tore the peace convention to pieces and it failed to serve the purpose for which it was designed. This must be attributed to the indomitable nature of the convention. If the representatives of all civilized countries of the world deliberated on the question of peace with sincerity and [illegible] there is no doubt that a permanent peace of the world will be established on a secure basis and will prove a great boon to humanity. Two prominent causes of war are racial prejudice and trade disputes. As these [illegible] are contrary to the principles of humanity and justice, however, misunderstandings may be avoided if the cause so earnestly championed by President Wilson is put into practice."

GROWING! GROWING! GROWING!

Price of W-S.S. in February $4.01
in March $4.02

What is $4.00 today? It is a question of purchasing power. What will $4.00 buy at present prices? Just over one third of a barrel of flour. Before the war flour was selling at $5.00 a barrel.

No one can say just how much more the purchasing power of the dollar will be in 1924, but you can see that the four dollars you put into War-Savings Stamps now, will grow, not only in number, but in value.

Your investment in War-Savings Stamps is like the snowball rolling down a slope. You give it a start and it grows by itself!

Your four dollars becomes five, and every dollar will be worth more.

Whether you buy one W-S.S. each day, or each week, or each month, or only two or three in a year, your money is growing, growing, GROWING all the time.

Those who cannot invest $4.00 at a time, can buy Thrift Stamps at 25 cents each. Sixteen of these on a Thrift Card will be accepted as $4.00 in exchange for a W-S.S.

Four British Generals

Whose Names Will Live In Story of the Nation

GEN. PLUMER is recognized as the greatest of the British generals under Haig. Only less conspicuous is the record of Rawlinson. It begins with the command of the immortal Seventh Division, which arrived in Flanders in October and in less than a month was reduced from 12,000 to 3,000. Its share of Ypres is forever memorable. At Loos Rawlinson was less happy, but he reappears in command of the Fourth Army at the First Somme and holds this post of great importance throughout the battle. After that he disappears for a time, to reappear, after Gough's defeat in March, commanding the Fourth Army again. He deals the great stroke on Aug. 8 which was the beginning of the long series of blows leading to the final scene at Mons, and the coming of victory.

He was Haig's personal friend and choice; he shares with Haig criticism in certain phases, but he shares equally with his chief the credit for the ultimate success in which his victory of August 8 and his share in the breaking of the Hindenburg line on Oct. 8 are brilliant details.

Another general whose fortunes have been steadier is Horne, who commanded the First Army from 1916 onward. An artillery officer, his contribution to the First Somme was very great. He was a rising soldier from that moment and his army was always held highly. Against him fell the second German blow in April of this year and his front was temporarily pierced, owing to the unexpected and complete collapse of the Portuguese. But he held on, managed to hold Givenchy and the high ground west of La Bassee until the great danger was past.

Even more conspicuous was his success in late August, when he attacked north of the Scarpe and broke the Drocourt-Queant line, insuring the ultimate fall both of Douai and of Cambrai. The extent of this success was totally unexpected. It was the first sure promise that the Hindenburg line would not stand and it was a success which held out the first hopes of a decision in 1918.

Rather more brilliant is the record of Byng. He was a distinguished officer before he won Cambrai in 1917, but this victory gave him a place which he has held ever since. In a sense, this victory marks a turning point in the war. It was not properly followed up, which means that Byng did not receive the support which he needed to make his first success permanent. This was because the success outran all expectations and the British army had not the necessary reserves. But Cambrai proved that by restoring the element of surprise it was possible to break through and that by use of tanks surprise could be had, since they would take the place of long sustained bombardment in clearing the way for the infantry.

It was by the use of the lessons of First Cambrai that the Allies won the campaign of 1918 and the war. Mangin's great counter-offensive at the Second Marne was founded upon the use of tanks. Each successive British and French thrust thereafter employed the same method. The German used a variation of the surprise tactics in his earlier successes, but without the tank, relying upon secret concentration and great numbers. But it was Byng who abolished the long-standing belief that trench lines could not be broken, and his discovery was one of the very greatest of the conflict.

In the spring, at a critical moment, when Gough's army had fallen, Byng broke the German effort to extend the dislocation of the British front. He held Arras and Vimy Ridge in the face of a tremendous attack, which the Germans abandoned after forty-eight hours. Still later, in August, he made a successful drive from the old Somme line eastward to Bapaume, which terminated German hopes of holding the Allies west of the Hindenburg line for the balance of the campaign.

Plumer, Horne, Rawlinson and Byng, these are the outstanding figures under Haig. They bear the same relation to their commander that Fourand, Mangin, Debeney and Berthelot bear to Petain; for Castelnau and Fayolles, who commanded groups of armies brilliantly, the British army supplies no counterpart, since authority was not thus delegated.

FAMILY THOUGHT HE WAS GOING TO DIE

Wheeler Says Nothing Helped Him Until He Took Tanlac—Health Restored

"Well, sir, Tanlac has not only entirely relieved me of my awful trouble, but I have regained twenty-five pounds of my lost weight and never felt stronger and better in my life," said Harry R. Wheeler, who is employed at the Pacific Coast Steel Plant and lives at 4744 Forty-Eighth Ave., South, Seattle, the other day.

"About a year ago," he continued, "I began to suffer with intestinal indigestion that, in spite of all I could do, got worse and worse till I was in a terrible condition. Everything I would eat fermented and I would be in such agony that it was like a sharp knife cutting clean across my stomach. I got so weak that I could hardly do a thing, and it was only my will power that kept me going at all. When I would get home at night I would be so weak and in such pain that my wife was always ready with a hot water bottle to put right on me, and even then I would be in such agony at times I thought it would drive me distracted. My hips ached with rheumatism, and the muscles of my right arm and leg would get all twisted into knots, and at times I couldn't raise my arm nearway to my head. I went down in weight from two hundred pounds to a hundred and fifty-two, a loss of forty-eight pounds, and my condition was so serious that my family actually thought I was going to die.

"I tried everything I could hear of to get relief, but nothing did me any good. Then my sister-in-law, who had been suffering with rheumatism, got me to try Tanlac, as it had done her so much good. I got a bottle and when I found it was helping me, I just kept it up till now I haven't a pain or an ache about me. I have a splendid appetite, and can eat anything I want without it hurting me in the least. I use to lay awake night after night suffering terribly, but now I go to sleep as soon as my head hits the pillow, and sleep like a log all night. I am picking up in weight every day and am feeling so fine and well that I am glad to tell everybody how much this wonderful medicine has benefitted me."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. B. Warne Drug Co., Ltd., in Havelock by A. C. Denike, in Lakefield by Tanner Drug Co., Ltd., in Fowler's Corners by W. A. Hunter, in Gelert by A. J. Scott, in Westwood by G. Pringle & Son.

Brilliant Timothy Healy

Will No Longer Provide Laughter for Parliament

SPEAKING of tigers, it is to be noted that a celebrated specimen of the breed will roar no more at Westminster. Mr. Timothy Healy being not a member of the new Parliament. He will be missed, for while he contributed no particular nuggets of wisdom to the output of the Commons he did give his colleagues many a hearty laugh, and a man who can make the Commons laugh is regarded as a sort of godsend. It is true that most of Tim Healy's wit was of a savage kind, which won him the nickname of the "Tiger," but remorseless wit that is directed at an opponent is relished by everybody except the opponent quite as much as though it were a genial humor. Mr. Healy is a Nationalist, of course, or rather he was a Nationalist. What he is now it is not easy to decide. He has displayed strong Sinn Fein sympathies; indeed, he represented that it was because of the ill-treatment of the Sinn Feiners by the British Government that he decided not to stand as a candidate for Northeast Cork, which, with other constituencies, he had represented for nearly forty years. Another reason which he did not make public may have been his doubt about being re-elected; another may have been his certainty of defeat.

Tim Healy did not pass out of public life like so many Nationalists by being devoured by the Frankenstein monster they had created. He left with a fine swagger, "as a protest," he said, "against the infliction of two years' imprisonment on a poor actor for singing two Irish songs published and long sung without objection." He added that he desired to make the seat available for the return to Parliament of some such convict. Tim Healy was one of that little band that helped win for the Nationalist party in the House of Commons the reputation of being the most cultured and brilliant group in the House, "wild Irishmen" though they were. Like several others whose names will occur to readers, his first reputation was made with his pen, for when he went to London he joined the staff of the Nation, and soon was entrusted with the preparation of its weekly London letter, which became rather a famous institution. As a lawyer he won renown, and in his early days at the bar he and Sir Edward Carson were often pitted against each other. It has been said that if Healy had ever learned to control his temper he might have rivalled Carson's fame as an advocate.

But this was something he never learned to do, and automatically he was disqualified from becoming a real leader. He had to follow other men, who may have been less brilliant, but who had greater common sense. His first political distinction came when Parnell appointed him secretary on his American tours. He came into contact with many prominent Americans and made a deep impression upon them. In Parliament he also made his mark, but it was rather on account of his powers of repartee than for the constructive value of any bills he introduced. He wasn't heavy artillery; he was a sniper, but a deadly one. He was often a thorn in the flesh of his own party management. Party discipline he rebelled against. On one occasion he remarked: "There are two united parties in this House, and I am one of them." Indeed, he was, in a sense, his own party. Another retort was made at the expense of the late Prof. "Tom" Kettle, a gallant and brilliant Irishman, if ever there was one. They were opponents in an election, and when they appeared in a small village it was found that the village green was too small to hold a joint meeting. Therefore they decided to toss coins to decide which would be permitted to take charge.

Healy won, and remarked "the kettle has lost its spout." The retort shows evidence of having been machine made, and the probability is that the story is imaginary. At any rate it is worth repeating, for if the witticism was not Healy's it is as good as any that are remembered about him. His retorts, whether worth remembering or not, were always instantaneous, so swift, as an Irishman might say, that the eye could hardly follow them. On one occasion he spoke of an Irish bill as "the offspring of a headache at the Irish office." He improved on this when he characterized another proposal for the governing of Ireland to be "like feeding a dog with a bit of its own tail." Again he said, "Mixed marriages are not an unmixed blessing."

Mr. Healy was one of the oldest members of Parliament in point of service. A silk hat he wore was almost as old, and was undoubtedly the most disreputable "lid" ever seen within the sacred precincts with the exception of the cap that Kier Hardie used to wear. Despite his unconventionality in this respect, Mr. Healy is learned in the French and German languages, in ecclesiastical matters, in ornithology, music and art. He is a noted collector of old furniture and Sheffield plate, and can judge a piece of "Waterford" glass with experts. Shorthand is a minor accomplishment, and it is said that most of his correspondence with members of his family is carried by the system associated with the name of Sir Isaac Pitman. The day of Mr. Healy and those like him is over in the British Parliament. They contributed little but laughter and obstruction to the Government of the country, and their humor hardly made amends for the seriousness of the obstacles they thrust under the wheels of progress. The surest test of Mr. Healy's unfitness for the new era is found in his own admission that he resigned in order that a convict might take his place

Masked Burglar Beats and Kicks Woman in Brooklyn

Mrs. Edith Fountain Confronts Man Who Ransacks House and Flees With $18 and Jewelry

BROOKLYN, N.Y., Feb. 22.—Awakened from a nap by noises in the dining room of her home at No. 120 Sheridan avenue, Brooklyn, Mrs. Edith Fountain, twenty-five years old confronted a masked burglar, who threatened her with a blackjack and demanded money. The man ransacked the house, and in a dresser in the bedroom of the apartment broke open a drawer and took from it $18 in cash and several pieces of jewelry.

As the man was leaving the apartment, which is on the second floor, Mrs. Fountain grappled with him. In the struggle she was kicked and beaten by the burglar, and left in a semi-conscious condition in the hallway. She finally managed to get to the head of the stairs and call to the family below for help.

The police of the Liberty avenue station were notified, and detectives are now looking for the man. Mrs. Fountain was in a very nervous state following her experience, but was not seriously injured by the burglar.

Nicholas De Vito, seventeen years old, of No. 196 Marion street, Brooklyn, was arraigned in the New Jersey Avenue Court, Brooklyn, on a charge of being implicated in the robbery of Harry Balzheiser in his drug store, at No. 2,040 Fulton street, Brooklyn, last Friday night.

Arraigned at the same time were two other young men and a woman on information furnished by De Vito after detectives under Captain John MacKirdy apprehended him in front of the Halsey Theatre Monday afternoon. The three were held in $5,000 bail each for examination charged with being implicated in the drug store robbery. The woman was held without bail on a charge of violating the Sullivan law. She described herself as Helen Smith, wife of a soldier abroad. The men said they were Peter Quigley, of No. 2,078 Atlantic avenue, Brooklyn, and Vincent Martin, of No. 1,080 Putnam avenue, Brooklyn.

In a raid on the woman's apartment at No. 881 Halsey street at two o'clock yesterday morning they found the two men with her. They declare they found a blackjack under her mattress and a partly loaded revolver under a loose board in the floor.

"Your apprehension is another indication that our detective bureau is doing good work in checking crime," Magistrate Short addressed the four. "The detectives have done good work. We should not pity men of your standing. Your immediate apprehension will make other men take notice that the police are on the job."

WILL INVESTIGATE SHIPPING WHISKEY DISGUISED AS TAR.

MACON, Ga.—A special Grand Jury will be summoned by Judge Beverly D. Evans of the United States District Court for the southern district of Georgia, to investigate the alleged conspiracy to ship whiskey into Georgia from Cincinnati and Louisville under false labels. If indictments are found the trials will take place the latter part of January.

Those held in connection with the case are M. E. Shaw, a contractor; Rasrill Hicks, a tinner; S. C. Clemons, a negro druggist; Dave Shaw, of merly of Macon and Sycamore, but merly of Macon and Sycamire, but now of Louisville. All are now in Macon, with the exception of Dave Shaw, who will be brought here soon.

The whiskey was shipped to Macon disguised as tar, and forty barrels of the contraband were seized at the local freight office.

HIS TRUST IN WIFE, GONE WITH SAVINGS; ASKS AID OF COURT

Mr. Josephson Questions Truth of "Robbins" — Wants $1,077 in Bank Paid to Him.

NEW YORK, Feb. 22.—All of the "great trust" which Morris Josephson used to repose in his wife, Sarah, he solemnly avers has vanished much after the fashion of his savings. Between conducting a furniture business and frequently being told by Sarah that his savings had been "stolen by some one unknown to her," Josephson's thoughts had little else to centre on since 1905.

But an awakening came last week and Josephson has now enlisted the aid of the Supreme Court in restoring to him the missing funds. His complaint has been filed and names Sarah as having more than a passing interest in the passing of his money. He also regards with significance and eagerness an account she has in the Citizen's Savings Bank.

Thirteen years ago, says Josephson, when he had a shop at No. 2,047 Second avenue, his sales were plentiful and enabled him to congregate $1,000. Reading or writing English presented such difficulties that he disdained opening a bank account and used nooks and crannies in his home to hide his savings. Having implicit faith in Sarah, Josephson declares, he confided these hiding places to her.

One day she came to him with the dire tiding that the $1,000 had been "stolen by some one unknown to her." Subsequently Josephson recovered from the shock, amassed another fortune of $800. Again Sarah tearfully announced the money was "stolen by some one unknown to her."

Josephson lost faith in the hiding places, but not in Sarah, and when he sold out his business he turned over to her $1,500 of the proceeds. When he returned at night Sarah tearfully announced that "some one unknown to her" had stolen the money.

In January, 1917, Josephson asserts, he entrusted $400 to Sarah. Two days later she told him she had been robbed by "some one unknown to her." Years passed by with Josephson unable to solve the mysteries. But on February 6 last, a great light dawned upon him. He insists that Sarah used her position as his wife to appropriate his funds, totalling $3,700.

He declares the law does not provide any adequate remedy against Sarah except to have her enjoined from drawing some $1,077.09 she has on account with the bank, compel her to make an accounting, pay the costs of his action and have the bank pay him the money she is credited with.

BRITISH OFFICERS REPORT THAT GERMANY NEEDS FOOD

PARIS—The need for revictualling Germany is really urgent, according to the report just made by a group of fourteen British officers who travelled in various parts of Germany recently for the purpose of conducting a special official investigation of the situation. The officers declare that the country is living on its capital, as regards food supplies, and that either famine or Bolshevism—probably both—will ensue before the next harvest if outside help is not forthcoming. The need for fats is especially urgent.

The chief places inspected by these officers were Berlin, Munich, Hamburg, Hanover, Leipsic, Dresden, Magdeburg and Cassel. Unrest and disturbances are said to be diminishing, owing to the more stable political conditions and the firm line adopted by Gustav Noske, Minister of Defence, whose position has been greatly strengthened against the Spartacan movement by the large combined social democratic majority in the new Assembly.

At the same time, unemployment and the cost of living are on the increase. The number of unemployed in Berlin is reported to be more than a hundred thousand, and is increasing by five thousand a day.

The reason Vinol was so successful in Mr. Harder's case, is because it contains beef and cod liver peptones, iron and manganese peptonates and glycerophosphates, the very elements needed to build up a weakened, run-down system, make rich, red blood and create strength.

Veterans Purchase Old Murray Street Church

Contract for Changes Has Been Let to Local Contractors—Many Improvements.

ROOMS FOR LADIES.

On Saturday the purchase was completed by the Peterborough Branch of the Great War Veterans' Association of the property formerly occupied by the Murray Street Baptist Church. This property is located between Aylmer and George streets on the south side of Murray street, directly opposite the Armouries. The lot has a frontage on Murray street of 114 ft. by a depth of practically 192 ft. A lane runs along the west side of the building leading to driving sheds in the rear yard, so that the property is out of contact with any other buildings.

The main building proper is a two-Storey structure with a solid stone foundation of considerable thickness, running up several feet above the ground level and from there on the construction is brick. There is a small cottage in the rear of the vacant lot which will be used as a caretaker's residence.

The Layout.

It is proposed that the basement or ground floor will be arranged for Executive Offices, Recreation Rooms and Baths. The first floor will contain an Assembly Hall, 40 ft. by 66 ft. and in addition a suite of rooms for the Ladies' Auxiliary, consisting of three rooms and an up-to-date kitchen. A third floor will be added to the main building and will contain 12 or 15 bedrooms with bathroom facilities; this will be a source of revenue and comfort for the members. It will also serve to make the Hall a home to all unattached comrades. In the long lounge room on this floor there will be six or eight Davenport beds that can be made down for any extra occasion.

The outside of the building will be completely altered by changing the windows and the erection of balconies on the front and rear.

The contracts for all changes have been let to Mr. H. A. Graham, a returned camrade who has had a number of years' experience as contractor in this city. The work will start to-morrow and the veterans have great hopes that they will be able to finance all the work at the present time as a means of giving labour to some of the unemployed.

The committee in charge of the work are: Capt. R. E. Layfield, chairman; Capt. A. S. Morrison, Arthur Ringer, Harvey Staunton, and the secretary, Sidney Whatley.

Spartacan Disorders

State of Siege Proclaimed at Once "Point—The Council of Eleven"

(By John Graudenz.)

BERLIN, Feb. 14.—The German government announced its determination to-day to refuse recognition to the newly proclaimed Soviet republic in Munich. Military action was expected to be deferred, however, until the Bavarians themselves are given an opportunity to overthrow the radicals.

Spartacan disorders were continuing in the industrial districts of Germany. At Mannheim, prisons were opened and the city was being patrolled by armed cars, manned by radicals. The Spartacans demanded the establishment of a Soviet government. The authorities of Buden immediately proclaimed a state of siege. Strikers in Dusseldorf, Muelpeim and Oberhausen decided not to accept the decision of the Essen labourers to return to work.

Council of Eleven.

The "Council of Eleven," which is administrating the affairs of the Soviet republic in Munich, was said to have discharged all regular troops and replaced them with "Peoples' Guards." Persons suspected of complicity of a plot to restore the monarchy have been arrested. Among them was a brother of Count Luxburg, former German Minister to Argentina and outhor of the famous "Spurlos Versenkt" message.

Throngs of citizens were said to have visited the spot where Premier Eisner was assassinated, standing about with bared heads.

TEMPORARY LEADER

Many Conflicting Interpretations on the Selection of J. A. Robb as Temporary Leader of Liberal Party

LITTLE KNOWN

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, Ont., Feb. 24.—There are conflicting interpretations on the selection of J. A. Robb as temporary leader of the Liberal party. Some say it reveals the power of French Quebec which, although voluntarily giving up the leadership, retain it in their own province, closely under their eyes. Others lay the emphasis on the fact that Mr. Robb is not only a Scotch elder in the Presbyterian church but a member of the Protestant school commission for his town. They say that this marks a real change from a French-Canadian Roman Catholic.

On another aspect of the matter some commentators think the selection of Mr. Robb, in place of Mr. Fielding for example, shows the determination of the old guard of the Liberal party not only to maintain control, but to show that high office in the organisation is barred to anyone who left Sir Wilfrid and supported the Union government. There seems to be no feeling against the rank and file of the party who "seceded," but so these observers say, a deliberate attempt will be made to exclude the leaders. One of the difficulties pointed out in this line of procedure is that the rank and file supporting Unionism may not feel like deserting those leaders of the Liberal party who for conscientious reasons, felt that temporarily the two branches of the party could not travel together.

Another Element.

There is another element of opinion which, this morning, puts an entirely different interpretation on the Robb appointment, seeing in it a subtle indication that a complete re-approachment of the Liberal party may be nearer than appears on the surface. The people say that the selection of Mr. Robb is obviously only a temporary one, that not only is he not a national figure, although a deeply respected one, but that he himself has no desire for permanent preferment or responsibility. His appointment to-day, therefore, leaves the field quite open, and in the months intervening between now and the convention, anything may happen. If, on the other hand, a man more in the national eye had been chosen, even temporarily, it would have been embarrassing to change him in a few months. This would have shut out Unionists who, although not in alliance with their old party to-day, might conceivably be so in a few months, when the whole political line-up, both Government and Opposition, may have changed.

State of Suspense.

Meanwhile from this point of view the Liberal party has achieved a state of suspense which is considered wise by its supporters.

Mr. Robb himself is a well liked man, with a quiet, sincere and pleasing personality. He has not taken an active part in the debates of the House, but he speaks smoothly and logically. He is sixty years old, and was born in the county of Huntingdon, Quebec, where he still lives. He was on the farm until he was sixteen, and then went into the milling business. In 1906, as he says himself, he was "pitch-forked" into public life by becoming Mayor of Valleyfield, in his own county. The local finances had not been carefully handled and he was called upon to come in and clean things up. He had to go through some unpleasant experiences, but he acted with courage and did win a victory for careful and honest administration. He remained as Mayor until 1910. Meanwhile, in 1908, after persistent pressure from friends, he contested Huntingdon for Liberal Federal party, and succeeded in regaining the seat, lost to an Independent in 1904. In 1911 he was anxious to retire, for domestic reasons, but it was Sir Wilfrid's personally expressed desire that he should remain that he persuaded him to run again. He was elected then and also in 1917. Mr. Robb has a kindly, pleasant face, saddened by grief, which in the deaths of his wife and only daughter has lain heavily upon him.

LEAVES TOKENS TO CITY.

OTTAWA, Feb. 24.—Sir Wilfrid Laurier maintained his pride and interest in Ottawa to the last. It is understood that a clause in his will dedicates to the capital city all the tokens of honour bestowed upon him during his distinguished public career.

Many of these are of almost priceless value. They include the testimonials covering the freedom of cities in the United Kingdom. The casket containing the freedom of the City of Edinburgh, one of the most beautiful of the collection, is solidly encrusted with diamonds. The intention is that the souvenirs shall find a place in the war memorial building, which will doubtless be erected in Ottawa before long.

MAY SINK THE FLEET

Captured German Navy Presents a Problem to the Allies—Cannot be Broken Up Profitably

OPINION DIFFERS

Canadian Press:

PARIS, Feb. 24.—While the Supreme War Council has not discussed the disposition of surrendered German warships, naval experts of the Council have studied the subject. British and American officers agreeing that a proper solution of the question will be to sink them in deep water. French and Italian officers do not take this view, and if experts do not soon reach an agreement the matter may be taken up directly by the Supreme War Council. The British navy has captured the greater number of German vessels taken during the war, and British delegates feel they have a greater interest in the determination of the question, and they have the weight of the opinion of American experts with them. There are seventy-four German warships, aggregating half a million tons, or an estimated building cost of $200,000,000 at Scapa Flow. These naval vessels cannot be used profitably in commerce, are too heavily engined and have no cargo space, a fact which has been proved. It has also been demonstrated by wreckers that naval vessels cannot be broken up at profit.

Strikers in Germany Agree to An "Armistice"

(Special to Examiner.)

COPENHAGEN, Feb 24. — The Workmen's and Soldiers' Councils in the Ruhr districts have accepted the proposal of the German General Headquarters for an "armistice," according to a despatch from Munster to-day. The terms were said to include the ending of the strike, surrender of all arms, and freedom of the press. Martial law has been proclaimed in Augsburg, Bavaria. Cavalry and sailors were reported to have repeatedly charged the crowds there on Friday night.

PLANNED TO KILL THE PRESIDENT

(Special to Examiner.)

NEW YORK, February 24. — With the arrest of fourteen Spaniards the police to-day assert that they have frustrated a plot to assassinate President Wilson at Boston. The men were taken in an uptown club yesterday. The place had been under secret service surveillance for some time. The prisoners were to be arraigned before United States Commissioner Hitchcock to-day, charged with publishing and distributing seditious literature. Secret service operatives to-day said that evidence had been secured which will be used to prove some of the prisoners had planned to kill the president by throwing a bomb in Boston.

Neither bombs nor explosives were found at the place raided. The prisoners did not carry fire arms.

President Wilson Confident That Congress and People Will Accept Peace League

Expects to Return to France in About Two Weeks Time --Treaty Will Be Submitted to United States Senate For Ratification

(United Press Service.)
(By Robt. J. Bender.)

BOSTON, Mass., Feb. 24.—(By courier from the George Washington anchored in President Roads).

President Wilson, returning to American shores to-day, is confident that Congress and the people will approve participation of the United States in a League of Free Nations.

Failure of America to sanction such a course would, he believed, be a great moral blow to the civilized nations now bending their efforts toward a just and lasting peace.

The President's historic journeys through foreign lands and his work at the peace table have more than ever convinced him that the European nations look to the United States as the one great power without selfish interests, participating in the conference. For the United States to refuse to join in what he and a majority of the nations regard as the fundamental of a lasting peace, would, he believes, break the heart of the world movement for a new order of things. Hence the President returns to make a strong effort at convincing the country and Congressional members of the vital importance of the League. As the covenant is not in its final form and is, therefore, not ready for ratification, the President's work now is largely informative. His big fight, if one proves necessary, will come after the Paris Conference has finally approved a League plan and the peace treaty is complete, ready for submission to the United States Senate for ratification.

Will Go Before People.

Then the President will go before the people, if necessary, to ask support. But that will probably not be before mid-summer or fall.

While in Washington, President Wilson will confer not only with members of the Senate Foreign Affairs Committee, but many other members, according to his present plan. Barring a change in the programme, he will leave for France again, March 5th or 6th. However, the situation, as regards appropriation bills, the possibility of calling an extra session and the session and condition of Premier Clemenceau (whose death might result in a change of the French Government and resultant delay in the peace negotiations), all enter into the inconclusiveness of his plans to-day.

The President's return finds what he regards as the biggest part of his job completed—formulation of a League covenant. Good progress has been reported to him by wireless from Paris on all the contentious problems being worked out by committees in his absence.

The greatest work outside the formulation of the League, is held by the President to be a solution of the Russian problem, which, according to the last reports, was still much confused.

En route to the United States on the 'George Washington,' Ambassador Francis, who is returning to Washington to confer with the House and Senate Foreign committee members, said of the Russian situation, with which he has been dealing for three years: "A reign of terror, instituted by the Bolsheviks in order to maintain themselves in power, was prevailing in Great Russia—or Central and Northern Russia—according to last accounts. The outrages committed by the Bolsheviki are incredible.

Chaos in Russia.

"I think it is impossible to restore peace in Europe with chaos prevailing in Russia. In fact, with Germany comparatively uninjured industrially, and with her army receiving ovations on its return to Berlin, I am persuaded that if a peace is negotiated with disorder or Bolshevik rule in Russia that Germany, with her familiarity with the Russian character, which she has been studying and attempting to influence for a generation or two, will be able to utilize the immeasurable resources of that great country and in twenty years or perhaps a decade will be stronger than at the beginning of the war just ended. If so, Germany, instead of being defeated, will have gained a victory out of the war which she brought on in order to realise the hope and expectation of 'Deutschland Uber Allies,' which all Germans cherished until the great military power was compelled to surrender its fleet and to disarm its military forces."

Actual Directing Force 'Was Premier Clemenceau

Present Technical State of War May Be Terminated in a Few Weeks—The Work Has Been Speeded Up.

GERMANY FIRST

Canadian Press:

PARIS, Feb. 24. — Atmosphere around the Peace Conference has changed remarkably in the last few days. The deliberation and caution which marked the proceedings of important commissions, have given away, and even the most conservative delegates are being carried forward at a great pace. Talk of early peace has become general. The actual directing force toward that end has been Premier Clemenceau, who, even while reclining in his easy chair, suffering from the wound given him by a would-be assassin, has summoned the Premiers of the four other great Powers to his side in order to impress upon them the need for hurrying the great work in their hands. France originally doubted the wisdom of concluding peace before conditions crystallised in Germany.

France Agrees.

Now France agrees with America and Great Britain in demanding a termination of the existence of the present technical state of war so that even Germany may resume the normal ways of peace. This view was reflected to-day by Stephen Pichon, French Foreign Minister, in his regular Sunday talk with foreign newspaper correspondents. It is believed by some that a treaty, which will be signed first, must be followed by another final treaty which will exactly prescribe the condition to be met by the late enemy powers. Several months may elapse before this can be made ready.

Germany First.

M. Pichon said that Germany would be first dealt with, because of the greatest importance of problems presented in her case, but added there were important peace questions for settlement in connection with Austria, Bulgaria and Turkey. Military experts, he said, have been instructed to examine them and have been in readiness for speedy adjournment. The commissioners who are considering reparations, the Minister said, are nearing an agreement. The first question to be determined is what Germany owes and then what she can pay. After this a plan can be devised by the Entente for dividing the reparation obtained among the Entente powers. In conclusion, M. Pichon said that Premier Clemenceau was about to undertake consideration of the Russian question when he was shot. He said the subject would, therefore, await his return to his official duties.

Civil War Threatened

Compromise May Be Affected Between Rival Elements

(United Press Service.)
(By Frank J. Taylor.)

WEIMAR, Feb. 24.—Civil war is threatened in Bavaria unless an immediate compromise is effected between the rival elements which set up separate governments following the assassination of Premier Eisner, according to official advices received by the German Cabinet to-day.

The combined Soldiers' Peasants' and Workmen's Soviets seized the governmental machinery and proclaimed a communistic republic. A few hours later the Majority and Independent Socialists effected an amalgamation, organized a central council, and claimed the right to administer the affairs of the whole of Bavaria.

A great majority of the Bavarians were reported to resent the assumption of authority by the communist elements, which are largely non-Bavarian.

PRESIDENT WELCOMED

Woodrow Was Guest of Boston for Greater Part of To-day—Flags of Allied Nations

MAIN ADDRESS

(Canadian Press.)

BOSTON, Feb. 24. — President Wilson was the guest of Boston today on his arrival from France.

Thousands of people from all parts of New England arrived on early morning trains to swell the throngs in the streets through which it was arranged that he should pass on his way from the Commonwealth Pier to his hotel in the Back Bay district. For the greater part of the crowd this was the only opportunity to see the president as Mechanics' Hall, where he was to deliver his big address of the day, seats but 7,000 people. Buildings all along the route of the parade were ablaze with flags and bunting, and recognition of the international character of the president's recent activities was shown in the frequent display of flags of the allied nations.

The meeting at Mechanics' Hall was set for 2.30 o'clock in the afternoon. A special train will start for Washington with the President and his party at 4.30 p.m.

Canadian Suits For Roumania

One of the First Big Orders For Canadian Clothing.

Orders for some sixty thousand men's suits have been received by Canadian clothing manufacturers from Europe. The order comes through E. L. Carley, the representative whom the Canadian clothing manufacturers sent to Europe some time ago, and comes principally from the Roumanian and Serbian Governments, with small orders from Belgium and France.

It is evident this order for 60,000 suits is considered only the first, for Carley, representing the clothing manufacturers in England, has asked that samples of serge from 15 to 20 ounces be sent him. The woolen manufacturers are doing more than send these samples. They are sending also two of thir leading members, Geo. C. Coppley, of Coppley, Noyes & Randall, Hamilton, and M. Friedman, of Friedman & Co., Montreal, who will sail Feb. 28 on the Olympic.

CROSS OF WAR FOR MAJOR KELLY

Mrs. W. B. Kelly has received a Croix de Guerre with a bronze star attached, which was won by her son, Major B. E. Kelly for distinguished services when fighting in conjunction with French near Amiens.

Major Kelly, who is attached to No. 9 Field Ambulance, is expected to sail for Canada about March the 1st, and will resume his practice in the city.

THE GRENFELL MISSION.

The annual collection on behalf of the Grenfelel Mission Fund is being taken in Peterborough at the present time, and the people of the city who have from year to year assisted in this magnificent work, are urged to renew their contributions on this occasion. The splendid effort inaugurated by Dr. Grenfell and carried on so successfully by his associates and himself, is a cause that is in every way worthy of support and encouragement. In the midst of the many calls upon public generosity throughout the war years, the Grenfell Mission [illegible] and now that the coming of peace has put a stop to many demands upon the public purse there should be an appreciable increase in the donations to the work of Dr. Grenfell in Labrador. Contributions may be left at the newspaper offices to be handed over to Mrs. James Wood, the untiring local treasurer of the Fund, who has for years devoted herself to furthering the interests of the Grenfell Mission in Peterborough.

BETTER TRAIN SERVICE.

The attention of Peterborough's Board of Trade is directed to the fact that Lindsay is endeavouring to improve the train service between that town and Peterborough which has been greatly curtailed during the war by the Railway War Board. Transportation is a matter in with the Board of Trade has always taken an active interest and it would seem like good business if the local body were to get into touch with the Lindsay authorities and work in co-operation with them in this particular matter. Improvement in the train servire would benefit Peterborough just as much as it would the neighbouring town and a concerted effort might result in a restoration of the service to its old footing. Changes made during the war were necessitated by various reasons, and it may be that the movement from the deadbeard of Canada's returning soldiers will present a complete return to pre-war conditions for the present, but at least there can be nothing lost in pressing for an improved service. If Lindsay and Peterborough unite their efforts in urging upon the authorities the desirability of better connections between the two points, there would be a much greater chance of success.

WHAT ABOUT A RECEPTION?

It is not too early for Peterborough to begin considering the question of whether or not there is to be any reception for the soldiers who will be returning to this city when Canada's four fighting divisions are demobilized. Units of the 3rd Canadian Division are expected to sail for home next month and the troops of the other divisions will follow in rapid succession. While it is true that none of these units will be demobilized in Peterborough, yet in a number of the battalions and batteries there will be a large quota of Peterborough soldiers and they will come home in a body from their respective dispersal points. For instance the 21st Battalion, which will be demobilized in Kingston, contains a large number of officers and men from here who will in all probability come home together from that city. This is true of the 2nd Battalion, 23rd Battery and other units. Is the intention merely to receive these quotas as the squads of men now coming home are being received? Or will there be a more elaborate and fitting reception? These are matters that should be considered as soon as possible by the authorities and some action decided upon. There is no use in putting off the decision as to the course to be adopted until the men are almost home.

THE BRIDGE PROBLEM.

The suggestion made by The Examiner that a public meeting be called in order that the people of Peterborough might be given an opportunity to fully inform themselves as to the Hunter St. bridge problem, is ridiculed by our contemporary which remarks that the Council have been given a mandate from the people and should go ahead with the bridge. While agreeing with the Review that there is generally too much talk and not enough action in all such questions as this, yet the fact remains that the Council, mandate or no mandate, is practically forced to ask the ratepayers for more money if the construction of the bridge is to be proceeded with at the present time. It is true that the Dominion Government has agreed to make a grant of $350,000 towards the cost of the structure, but the fact that there is a string to this grant seems to have escaped general notice. The Government's assistance is conditional upon the city's building a bridge that will cost $350,000, of which amount Peterborough must provide $300,000 and the Government the balance. The situation is that the appropriation already voted for the bridge falls $40,000 short of the required sum. If more money is to be asked of the ratepayers it would seem highly desirable that the citizens should be given an opportunity to acquaint themselves with all the conditions. This is the biggest propolition that Peterborough has yet undertaken. It involves the largest expenditure of public money that any Peterborough Council has ever had to handle, and if more money is to be voted, the people will have to be convinced of the necessity of the additional sum to be asked for. It will take some time to prepare and advertise the necessary by-law, and in the meantime public discussion of this huge problem should prove of benefit.

THE DANGER OF THINKING IN MILLIONS.

Extravagance of speech runs hand in hand with extravagance in expenditure," says Lt.-Col. A. T. Thompson, ex-M.P. in the Canadian Military Gazette.

In a recent article, entitled "Thrift," we dealt with the lack of that excellent quality, as exemplified in lavish spending on dress and autos.

The fact is we have grown so accustomed to read and speak of armies of millions, and moneys in billions, that we have lost the true perspective, and are in grave danger of coming to grief by thinking of what are really very large sums as "mere bagatelles," to use the airy phraseology one so often hears nowadays.

That we have spent hundreds of millions on the waste of war would seem to be the very best reason for rigid economy now, both public and private, whereas it is made an excuse for still further heavy expenditure.

There are at present, no doubt, many national ills, but nothing like the number of panaceas prescribed. The optimists are busy indeed in prescribing remedies, and COST never counts for a moment, with them. Very recently the writer was discussing with one of these a certain phase of the military situation, not important in character, which sometimes irritated the [illegible] section of the army. [illegible] and announced a remedy. "It would cost four or five million dollars only," said the listener. "What [illegible] twenty millions," came the reply, "it would make them happy, and after all, we have spent a thousand millions on the war, what difference would an additional twenty make?" It is talking of that kind, met here and there, and seldom, but almost everywhere and often, that makes one shiver for the mental condition into which the exertions and extravagance of the war seem to have landed our people.

Let me give another example. "I think the discharged soldiers should have an additional allowance of ten dollars towards buying a great coat," said this man. "Are they not being allowed to keep their great coats on discharge?" was the reply. "Why, yes, but another ten dollars would do them no harm, and what is ten dollars anyway?" Yes, what is ten dollars? Not much as ten dollars, but four millions when applied to four hundred thousand men.

Then, having already taken on C.N.R. and G.T.P., nothing will serve many well intentioned people but a further purchase, that of the C.P.R. and G.T.R. What if this little deal would cost somewhere round seven hundred million dollars—have we not spent twelve hundred millions on the war?—why should we dread this SMALL additional expenditure? And while we are at it, let us buy up all the water powers, the coals mines, etc., etc.

Such, in effect, is the talk one hears on all sides, in this country of thinkers in millions. One wonders what these same gentlemen will say as the income tax mounts higher and ever higher. Well regulated control of our great transportation systems let use have by all means, and public ownership too, when the same comes, if it ever does, that the result from the ownership of what we have already acquired justifies an extension of the system.

In the meantime let us try and get at least part of the way back to such homely old maxims as "take care of the pennies, and the pounds will take care of themselves," and let us even practise a little more economy in speech itself, after the manner of the Scotch, who more nearly follow the injunction, "Let your communication be yea, yea, and nay, nay," than do any other people. The world at its moment is long on the talker, and mighty short on the hard striker.—Financial Post.

THE DAYLIGHT SAVING BILL

The Peterborough Branch of the U. F. O. No. 519, have sent the following resolution to Capt. J. H. Burnham, M. P., for West Peterborough:

Peterboro, Ont., Feb. 10, 1919

Whereas, it has been announced in the press of the Dominion that the Daylight Saving Bill, which was in force during 1918 is to be re-enacted during the coming session of Parliament;

Therefore, be it resolved that we the members of the Peterboro branch No. 519 U.F.O., do hereby register a protest against the re-enactment of this measure for the following reasons:

That it was enacted purely as a war measure to give urban dwellers more time for gardening and kindred pursuits in order that production of vegetables, etc., might be increased. As hostilities are over and conditions rapidly coming back to normal we think that such gardeners can find time enough to cultivate a peace-time garden with the clock following standard time.

That it has been found impossible for farmers to work their farms to the best advantage when following the "new" time, owing to unfavorable conditions caused by heavy dews in harvest and frosts in early spring and late fall making it out of question for the farmer to work more than 2 to 2 1-2 hours before dinner. If he quits work at 6 o'clock this means a loss of from 1 to 2 hours each day.

That this measure has caused a great deal of dissatisfaction among farmers sons and hired men on farms where standard time is followed. This means a much longer day for these workers than that of the workingman in other occupations.

That it has caused much inconvenience to tens of thousands of farmer throughout Canada, who are supplying milk and cream to the city dairy trade. It is necessary for these farmers in most cases to be up at 4 to 4:30 a.m. to ship their produce on the early trains. When the clock is advanced one hour, it means putting this much more work into their day as their hour for quitting is about 7 p.m. standard time.

We fail to see why any measure which has aroused such universal dissatisfaction among the rural people who number one half the total population of the country, and which is of doubtful value to the majority of the remainder, with the exception of the leisure class, should be placed on the statue books for another year. We would ask you to use your influence against the re-enactment of this law at this session of Parliament.

Signed on behalf of the club—Rich Rodgers, president; Chas. S. Brown secretary, R. R. No. 9, Peterboro, Ont.

Capt. Burnham's Views.

With regard to the matter Capt. Burnham writes The Examiner as follows:

Editor Examiner: This matter has got to be threshed out and it might as well start now. To those engaged in city work the daylight saving appears to be one thing, but to the farmer, it appears to be another. If it is a mere opportunity for pleasure for some and of actual commercial importance to others, the commercial end of it will receive my vote. I cannot allow my own (or others') selfish desire for longer hours for amusement (and amateur gardening) to weigh against the interests of the farmer if that is the fact. I would like some way of finding out what the farmer does really think because if it is as set out in this petition, I will vote against the pleasure end of it, and in favor of more food and greater production.

J. H. BURNHAM.

BACK FROM RUHLEBEN

Extracts from an account of a civilian's trip out of Germany from a letter from Mr. Davidson Ketchum (son of the late Judge Ketchum, of Cobourg), who had the unique experience of being in Berlin on the day war was declared and also on armistice day:—

"Here I am back in England, after an absence of 4½ years. We left Ruhleben a fortnight ago last Sunday, a special train taking us to a Danish port, where we found a Danish ship waiting for us. We were glad indeed of the Danes' hospitable welcome, for we'd been 39 hours in cold weather in a crowded train quite without heat or light. The Germans gave us hot soups and coffee at various stations, and we'd brought food of our own, so that we got through all right. The Danish Red Cross couldn't do enough for us aboard, and we greatly enjoyed the trip to Copenhagen, especially seeing the blue Baltic and the wooded shores after so many months of flat Brandenburg. At Copenhagen crowds of people cheered us, but we stopped only long enough to change to a pair of small ships fast 'butter boats' which fetch the Danish dairy products to England in peace-time. At 8 o'clock we left again and had 48 hours' sea journey to Leith. They fed us splendidly, though the terrific tossing of the second day dimmed our appreciation of this fact a little. Anchored in the Firth of Forth Wednesday night, amid unbroken greetings from various war vessels, and landed on Thursday morning. Leith had taken a complete holiday to receive us; the din of all the whistles and the roar of the cheering crowds along the docks was quite deafening. At our dock we were received with a message from the King, brass band on the pier heads and general jubilations. In the great decorated sheds, one mass of flags and flowers, all arrangements had been made for telegrams, etc., and a huge luncheon prepared, when the Leith ladies waited on us in motherly style. Each of us was given a bag of provisions, etc., for the train journey, and then, when we thought all was over, we were loaded into decorated lorries and made a real triumphant entry into the city. The scene was quite indescribable. The thronging crowds left only a line the exact width of the lorries, filled the rest of the street, crammed every window and crowded the tops of the houses. The whole progress was one long sky-raising cheer. The old women cried, the kids stretched up to be kissed, and the girls caught at our hands and hurled cigarettes, etc., into the lorries. The good people told us with great pride that the King, who had been there the previous week, had not had one-half the reception! A special train took us to London, quite worn out, on Saturday. Stayed in bed over the week-end. I went to Lincoln on Tuesday to see—who couldn't get leave. Had a splendid time for two days, making my first flight in an aeroplane. (And very nearly my last!) It was a glorious sensation. Back to London. At last after seeing ——, got down here Saturday night and hoped for peace. But there is no peace in the world. Everybody wants me to come to tea and tell them all about it. My exasperation is getting such that I shall be entirely rude to someone soon. "Aunt ——, is spoiling me all she can, but both she and all other friends deeply hurt and disappointed at my healthy appearance."

TOWN ASKS TO MAKE ALL ALIEN CITIZENS

FLINT, Mich., Feb. 21.—Alleging Flint, Mich., five days a week, declaration make the effort to bring its entire foreign born population of 16,000 persons into American citizenship so that it might be the first all American city in the United States, one of the most stimulating occurrences of the big civic meeting at which the programme was adopted was the speech of an elderly Flint resident of French nativity.

Rising to address the meeting, he said:—

"I'm French, and I'm proud of it. I have just one criticism to make of this country. That is that no one apparently ever took the trouble to interest himself in my becoming a citizen. You foreigner, you say, is shy. That is so. Therefore, don't leave him to himself. Make him realize that you welcome him; that you want him to stay here as an American and that all Americans are his friends.

"There's nothing that appeals so much to a man in a strange land as a friendly word, whether it comes from a friend or a stranger. If employers and superintendents in business plants would think in the morning to bid their foreign born workers a cheery good day, they would be surprised at the results that would follow in the way of co-operation and friendliness."

BURGLARS TAKE SKEY LEAVE DIAMONDS

J. Bialkie's House Near Pt. Dalhousie Entered—Large Stores Are Taken.

ST. CATHARINES, Ont., Feb. 24.—Whiskey and champagne have taken the place of diamonds and precious stones in the objective of burglars in Ontario as revealed in a robbery at the home of F. Bialkie, near Port Dalhousie, which has just been reported to the city and county police. While the occupants of the house were away, burglars entered the place and carried away five gallons of G. and W. whiskey, one case of champagne, a five gallon keg of port wine, besides several dozen cases of vegetables and fruit, 16 pairs of ladies' silk stockings, several dozen silver cutlery, a phonograph records and various other household articles, which must have required one or two trucks to carry the booty away. The police are mystified.

16 Reels ROYAL Double Show For Single Admission 16c

William Fox presents "TOM MIX in Western Blood." This is a thrilling story of adventure in the land where the best man wins in 5 Parts. Another William Fox feature is the "Extravaganzas"--Ali Baba and the Forty Thieves." This is a wonder tale of the Arabian Nights in 5 Parts. George H. Wiley also presents Jean Sothern in "A Mute Appeal" supported by a clever cast of Motion Picture Actors in 5 Parts. These are three excellent features to be presented at the Royal To-Night. In addition to this there will be a good one reel "MUTT AND JEFF" comedy. This programme fully sustains the reputation of the management of the Royal for showing the best pictures in the City. It is a well-known fact that programmes similar to the above are shown in the largest picture houses in Toronto, Montreal and other large centres at much higher prices than that charged at the Royal. Sixteen Cents to all. Do not fail to see this excellent programme. If you have time see the matinees in the Afternoon and avoid the evening rush. Same show at Both Performances.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

Activities at the Water Street Alleys

W. Schleffel won the prize for high three games in five pins last week, his score being 953 with high single of 376. Both scores being records.

Scores over 700 (3 games)—Henderson 737; Schleffel 730. Over 600—Schleffel 697; Henderson 688; Marsden 688 and 670; Maynard 648; Jory 648; Barrette 618; Gettas 659, Clancy 605; Cocks 656.

Following are games scheduled for this week in the Business Men's Ten Pin League:

Monday, Grocers vs. Matthews-Blackwell.

Tuesday, Canadian General Electric vs. Printers.

Thursday, De Laval vs. High Rollers.

"B" Five Pin League

A "B" five pin league will start next week and all teams must be entered by Thursday night of this week.

BOWLING NEWS.

The prize winners at the George Street Alleys last week were:

P. Laskas, first in ten pins.
P. Gettas, first in five pins.
C. Riachea, first in boys' class.

Three good prizes will be given this week on the different alleys.

HOCKEY.

A very exciting game of hockey was played on Friday between Gallagher's Braves and the Old Reliable Fire-Hall team. The Fire-Hall team won by a score of 5 goals to 1. There were many good players on both teams, which made the game interesting.

SIR THOS. LIPTON COMING

LONDON, Feb. 24.—Sir Thomas Lipton intends to go to America to inspect his yacht, the Shamrock IV., which has been laid up there since the last international races were called off at the start of the war. "I regret that there is no prospect for a race this year," he said, "but I am confident the America's Cup will yet be brought back to England.

Gleason Not Only Fighter in Game

There Have Been Others, Big and Little, Who Have Been Bad Medicine

When Kid Gleason was appointed manager of the White Sox his prowess at fisticuffs was exploited at length. Gleason is a good man in a brawl, a rough, ready and efficient customer, although no brawler. He is good-natured, yet determined, and, like most of the men in baseball who can go hard and fast in a fight, is opposed to notoriety in that line.

George Moriarity, the umpire and former third baseman, can mill it with the best of them. He can fight like fury when he has to. Those in baseball who are able to put it over on him are few, if any, yet he is adverse to that sort of thing, and is a quiet, decorous gentleman. Same way with Charles Rigler, the umpire, big, strong, game, but who does not seek a quarrel and dislikes any reputation that links him with fame of pugilistic or quarrelsome description.

Frank Chance Quick to Fight.

Frank Chance was a battler with a [illegible] temper. He was quick to [illegible] and had the size and strength [illegible] him formidable. They say [illegible] offered to thrash Jim Corbett [illegible]; also that Heinie Zimmerman once gave him a fierce battle, or was ready to. The Detroit club has had several members or more than ordinary skill in self-defence. Besides Moriarity, these were Charles Schmidt and Bradley Kocher, both catchers. Kocher was inoffensive and reserved, but give him just cause and anybody who elected to be his opponent had his hands full. Another former Detroiter, Edward Barrow, now pilot of the Red Sox, is a gentleman by nature, but a warrior to be feared if there's occasion to make warfare. Nature blessed him with a splendid physique, yet Edward lives up to the Shakespearean precept that it's fine to have a giant's strength, but not to use it as a giant.

Two of the best boxers ever in baseball were Giants, Al Bridwell and Arthur Devlin. Devlin could hold his own in a hand-to-hand fight with anybody in baseball. He knew how to hit and could hit hard. He was lightning quick and a clean hitter. He was tall, long of reach, fiery, but clear-headed, as capable in a stand up, man-to-man combat as anybody baseball has had. Jim McAleer, tall, slender and not robust looking, was nevertheless a good man in his day, with his cool head, long, well-developed arms and quickness of hand and foot.

Kid Elberfeld was one of the best of the little scrappers, and one of the best of the big, if scrap he must, was Robby—Uncle Wilbert, of the charming disposition, fast on his feet for a big man and powerful. Not many men cared to tackle Otto Jordan, former Brooklyn second baseman, active, strong and fast in a mill. Like Kid Gleason, he was built close to the ground, a big little man. A former team mate of Jimmy Smith's, lately of the Giants, then of the Braves, describes him as a "fighting fool"—In the complimentary sense—a slim, medium-sized lad, but a whirlwind when stirred to battle-pitch.

Earl Neale, of the Reds, who has engaged Fred Toney, Kill Killefer and Lee Magee on the field in recent years, evidently can mix it in telling fashion. He has a good physique to support belligerency, yet doubtless the game has undiscovered ones who could trim any of those mentioned.

A REPORT ON WAGES AND HOURS

Canadian Press:

LONDON, Feb. 24.—If the government desires to avert a national disaster it must understand that a report on wages and hours of miners be forthcoming before March 14, declares Frank Hodges, secretary of the Miners' Federation. He said that the principle of nationalization must be established. Hodges added that railway men and transport workers were with the miners.

MAY INSURE WILLARD, DEMPSEY AND RICKARD

CHICAGO, Feb. 24.—Applications for insurance policies of $50,000 each for Jess Willard, world's champion heavyweight pugilist, Jack Dempsey challenger for the title, and Tex Rickard promoter of the bout for next July fourth, are under consideration by Lloyds in London it was learned to-day. Rickard will pay the premiums on the total of [illegible] of accident insurance to [illegible] himself against possible financ[illegible]

"The insurance I want is simply to protect me against an accident that might happen to prevent Willard or Dempsey from fighting," Rickard said.

The application were signed by Rickard in New York, and forwarded to London. A local agent of Lloyds said he had every reason to believe the insurance would be placed. The policies in the cases of Willard and Dempsey would run from March 1 until after July 4, and for Rickard the policy would be for one year.

COL. H. A. BRUCE RETURNING

LONDON, Feb. 24.—Col. H. A. Bruce and Mrs. Bruce are returning to Canada. Colonel Bruce assured the Canadian Press before leaving that Lord Beaverbrook was making a splendid recovery. The wound consequent on the operation had healed satisfactorily and complete recovery was certain.

Canadian Downed The Last Zeppelin

Montrealer Attacked Single-Handed When 19,000 Feet Up.

MONTREAL, Feb. 24. — Now that the many and varied "hush' incidents of the war are coming to light, it will be interesting to tell how a Montreal aviator accounted for the last Zeppelin to be brought down. The aviator was Lieut. Stuart D. Culley, D.S.O., who enlisted in the Royal Naval Service nearly two years ago.

Early Sunday morning, August 11, 1918, word was brought in by motor boats that a Zeppelin had been sighted. When he was some 10,000 feet up, Culley sighted the Zeppelin a considerable distance away. He decided to attack it. He kept straight on until the Zeppelin was almost directly over him, when he pulled up the nose of the plane and emptied his machine gun into the bottom of the airship, it being some 200 feet above the plane. The plane itself was 19,000 feet in the air. I nabout half a minute or so spurts of flame appeared in several parts of the Zeppelin.

The ships had been watching the performance and immediately the Admiral saw the flames he sent this signal to all the ships around about:

"Turn to hymn 224, last verse," which is as follows:

"A Happy Band of Pilgrims,
Look upward to the skies.
Where such a light affliction,
Shall win so great a prize."

Later Lieut. Culley was called on by the Admiral to stand on the deck of a destroyer whiel the fleet went by with the crews lining the gunwales cheering him.

FOOD RIOTS START IN MAJORCA, AND TROOPS ARE CALLED OUT

MADRID, Feb. 24.—Serious food riots have broken out at Palma, Majorca, one of the largest islands in the Spanish Balearic Group. The market stalls were plundered and destroyed. All the stores and cafes have been closed.

The populace attempted to loot the palace of a wealthy resident named Marched. Cavalry, however, beat off the mob. Artillerymen with machine guns are guarding the railway stations, while troops are patroling the city.

IMPLEMENTS FOR IRELAND

Through Co-operative Society Frost & Wood Receive Opening Order

Representatives of the Irish, Co-operative Agricultural Society, now in Ottawa, have concluded arrangements for the purchase of a large quantity of agricultural machinery. This order was placed with the Frost & Wood Co. of Smiths Falls, Ontario and will be put in hand at once. It is learned that other orders from the Co-operative Society—orders of considerable magnitude—will follow very shortly.

A MILLION UNEMPLOYED.

BERLIN, Feb. 24.—The National Ministry of Economic Demobilization estimates the number of unemployed men in Germany at present to be a million. It is declared that the extent to which the war lessened the men's desire to work must not be underestimated. One official is quoted as saying: "We have lost the war as thoroughly as it could have been lost, but it is time to quit complaining. Let us grin and bear it."

Pte. Cyril Kline Died in France

Word has been received of the death in France of Pte. Cyril Kline, son of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Kline, Parma Michigan. Pte. Kline enlisted in the American Army about a year ago, and has been serving in France for several months. His death occurred February 19th from an attack of bronchial pneumonia.

Mrs. Kline, mother of deceased, has many friends in Peterborough, who will regret to learn of her bereavement. She is a sister of Mrs. Jas. Grady, High street.

No. Elizabeth, things are not always what their names would imply. A poker chip isn't necessarily a chip off a poker.

Captain L. Stevens Arrived in Peterboro' Saturday Evening

Speaks Well of the Treatment Received in Germany by Prisoners of War

Captain Leslie Stevens, R.A.F., returned to the city on Saturday evening, after four years' service overseas, and will spend a four months' leave with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. G. L. Stevens, 208 McDonnel Street, at the expiration of which he will, on the 8th of May, returned to report for service in India. He went overseas in 1915, and after two years' service, returned to Canada in 1917 for leave, returning to France in October, where he remained until July of 1918, when he was severely wounded and sent to England. Later he was put in command of a squadron near London.

Returned Air Men.

In the squadron of which Captain Stevens was in command there were about seventy repatriated air men from Germany. "There wasn't a grouch out of one of them," he said, "about the treatment they received at the hands of the enemy. They all agreed that they had received good treatment. In fact some of them who had been in Holland would have preferred to have been returned to Germany."

Armistice Night.

Of the nature of the celebrations on armistice night, Captain Stevens refused to talk. "All I can say," he said, "is that what we didn't do wouldn't be worth printing."

His return to Canada was made on the "Royal George." "On this ship there were several English wives coming to Canada for the first time. And you can take it from me, they were scared stiff of the reception they would receive, for they had heard the reports that the wives who had landed previously had been most discourteously received by the Canadians."

Many Applications For Work At Local Labour Bureau

An Average of Twenty-five Names a Day—Call For Farm Help

Work at the Government Labour Bureau on Charlotte street, is now in full swing. On the average 25 names a day have been registered by men desiring work. Already 125 names have been filed, about half of them being returned soldiers. Most of the applicants are unskilled labor, machinists and workers of the building trades coming next in numbers.

Between 18 and 20 men have been placed in positions, and over 35 men have been referred to prospective employers.

Farm Help.

Numerous applications for farm help, skilled or unskilled, from farmers in Peterboro County, have already been received, and several men have been placed. The manufacturers give optimistic reports of their labour needs in the future. The Bureau is looking into the new contract work which will soon be opened up in New Ontario and it is likely that a number of local men can fill good positions there.

Out of Work.

Farmers' sons, lured by the big money on munitions, who left the farm, are now out of work and are applying at the Bureau for more work. They are advised to go back on the farm but they do not like the idea. Mr. Robertson states that soldiers and those who never worked on farms, will get a better chance to fill the positions as far as the Bureau is concerned.

WAS ASSASSINATED.

(Special to Examiner.)

LONDON, Feb. 24. — The Amir of Afghanistan has been assassinated, it was announced in official despatches received here to-day.

Habibullah Khan, Amir of Afghanistan, succeeded to the throne in 1901. He was forty-six years old.

The HOME CIRCLE COLUMN

We always class children, birds and flowers together. And why? Because they should be equally beautiful, innocent and happy. We should never rob childhood of its ideal loveliness Even old people should be gay, and happy and good; too good to overcloud the children's horizon with angry eyes and lowering brows, nor turn their merriment to discord by continual fault-finding. Allow them all the freedom consistent with absolute safety. Let them play and be happy, but teach them self-control. God's estimate of self-control is this: "He that is slow to anger is better than the mighty, and he that ruleth his own spirit, than he that taketh a city."

God intended that there should be one day each week as an especial day for the culture of home ties. A day when the father would be home from work, and the children home from school, and the mother have less of household care, when all could put on their best clothes, sing their sweetest songs, and enjoy a day of love. The Sabbath should never be made a day of labor in the home. The work of each home should be so arranged that it can be done almost entirely in six days and as evenly as possible in each day. "Six days shalt thou labor and do all thy work."

A single bitter word may disquiet the home for a whole day, but like unexpected flowers which spring up along our path, full of freshness and beauty, so do kind words and gentle acts and sweet dispositions make glad the home where peace and blessings dwell. The heart will turn lovingly toward it from the tumults of the world and home, "be it ever so humble," will be the dearest spot under the sun.

How few, comparatively, of the young people of the present day, appreciate as they should the inestimable privileges they enjoy. Surrounded as are the young in all cities and most towns, with all the opportunities necessary for the cultivation of a literary taste, not one in a thousand appears to improve these golden chances. Occasionally it is true we meet with a young man or woman who firmly grasps the idea that "knowledge is power" but these unfortunately, are the exceptions, not the rule.

Sunshine in the lives and souls of people if just as potent in the realm of home as the sunshine that drives darkness from our world and brings that warmth which is essential to life and growth in the vegetable kingdom. There is a convincing and vivifying power in soul sunshine; for as has been well said, men and women, youth and children, seek the friendship of the sunny-faced.

The poorest girls in the world are those not taught to work. There are thousands of them. Rich parents have petted them, and they have been taught to despise labor and to depend upon others for a living, and are perfectly helpless. The most forlorn women belong to this class. It is the duty of parents to protect their daughters from this deplorable condition.

Nothing so helps a woman through the long weary days of work as the knowledge that what she does is appreciated by those she loves, and for whom he toils. Think of this, husbands and fathers, and remember that a kind word is always in season.

Any business man would be horrified at the suggestion that he would ruin his boy by neglect, that his absorption in business would result in the undoing of his own son. But it is the easiest thing in the world to forfeit a boy's confidence. It will take only a little snubbing, a little scolding, a little unkind criticism, a little nagging and unreasonableness to shut off forever any intimacy between you and your boy.

Love is a great home-maker, that makes even the drudgery of housekeeping a pleasure, and home life a foretaste of the bliss of heaven. One cannot get too much love into one's home-making, but easily too little.

Pay the printer and the preacher. You're sure to get your money back. The printer tells you the news about this world and the preacher tells you about the other one to come.

Happiness is a perfume that one cannot shed over another without a few drops falling on one's self.

Make it a rule to have the back yard at all times as clean as the front one.

SHIP SPRUNG A LEAK WHILE IN MID-OCEAN

NEW YORK, Feb. 24.—Six shipwrecked seamen from the Newfoundland schooner Teresa Maud, rescued from their vessel January 22 and taken to Gibraltar, arrived here on the British steamer Glenedon, from that port. The Teresa Maud, a craft of only 92 tons, sprang a leak and became waterlogged while on a voyage from Oporto to Grand Bank, Nfld., with salt. The distress signals of Captain Lee and his five men were seen by the British steamer Crew Hall, bound east, which took them off.

NATIONAL WHOLESALE GROCERS CONCERN IS SEEKING A CHARTER

OTTAWA, Feb. 24.—Notice is given in the Canada Gazette that application will be made at the present session of Parliament for an act to incorporate the National Wholesale Grocers' Association of Canada. The purpose of the association, according to the notice, is to promote the trade of the Dominion, both import and export business.

It is also designed to develop harmonious relations among manufacturers and wholesale and retail dealers in order that food products may reach consumers in best condition and at lowest prices.

STOLEN STORES

Military Equipment Discovered at Halifax

HALIFAX, N.S., Feb. 24.—Bales of blankets, canvas kit bags haversacks, rubbers and other miscellaneous loot, the property of the militia and defence department, were discovered last night by the police in the store of a Water street merchant The stores, valued at several thousand dollars, had been missing for some time and the suspected premises were raided, disclosing practically all the stolen goods. The goods were removed and a charge of being in possession of stolen goods is laid against the merchant.

GREAT BRITTAIN WITH A LOT OF AERDROMES

Gen. Seely Tells of Ship That Stayed Up 100 Hours.

LONDON, Feb. 24.—Major-General Seely, Under-Secretary of the Ministry of Munitions, announced that the Government intended to make flying safer by providing a large number of airdromes, some of them military and some civil.

A British airship, according to General Seely, recently remaining in the air for more than 100 hours, and at an average speed of 50 miles an hour must have covered more than 5,000 miles. It might have stayed up longer.

C. P. R. BOATS MAY DOCK AT PORTLAND

MONTREAL, Feb. 24.—It was announced in shipping circles yesterday that the Canadian Pacific Ocean Steamship Line's best vessels may make Portland their terminus on this side of the water in a short time. This step would not entail the dropping of St. John as a terminus entirely. The story in circulation here stated that the C.P.R. would contribute to the erection of a new state pier at Portland and would make connection with its transcontinental line over the Maine Central at Newport, Vermont, or Cookshire.

After His Death, Don Martin's Typewriter Wanders at Front

PARIS.—This is about the strange case of Don Martin's typewriter, a big, cumbersome writing machine which crossed the seas with the famous reporter. It had previously gone through three Presidential campaigns. Little Don and his huge typewriter were inseparables—always in close communion long after the other correspondents had gone to bed.

When Don died suddenly a few months ago it was left bereaved at the A. E. F. press headquarters in Bar-le-Duc. The typewriter was ordered sent to Paris. Instead, when we reached our new quarters in the citadel at Verdun by some accident of packing it had turned up there. Next came the shift of the writers to Luxembourg, and although two army sergeants were on the lookout to ship the machine back it got into the wrong truck and crossed the empty trenches of the west front over into the grand duchy.

From Luxembourg it continued its mad career into Germany, where it was finally cornered and returned to France. It is now at the office of the Paris "Herald." With numerous newspaper friends of Don arriving daily from Washington to cover the Peace Conference I had to think again of this dumb instrument of a long association once more in the exact place where the great news of the world was breaking. The typewriter had followed the spirit of its master.

How Don in the flesh would have loved to see the victory, gone into Germany with our conquering soldiers and been here to record the events of the peace deliberations! His nimble fingers are now cold in death but in their spirit mold I am sure they are still running over the keys of his faithful machine.

Their Liquor Cost Over Five Thousand

ST. CATHARINES, Feb. 22.— Here is how Messers. Smith and Lavelle, of Toronto, came out on the Homer whiskey-selling case. They sold to Clyde in the first place $3000 worth of booze, but they delivered only $3000 worth, giving him a check, and while they were in Buffalo, payment on this check was stopped, presumably; anyway, whatever happened, the check was not good enough so that the vendors could realise on it.

The liquor was, in the natural course of events, confiscated to the government.

Then there is the matter of the confiscation of the automobile by customs authorities. It is true that the owner, Lavelle, was adudged not guilty of bringing the beer into Canada, but the customs law does not make distinction or split hairs about technicalities. The car that carries liquor is confiscated to the state. The sum of $800 was paid for the release of the car.

So the profit and loss account of the dealers has to be summed up in this way. Whiskey confiscated, $3000; check given to Clyde, $200; penalty on car, $800; fines $1200; total, $5200.

A Strange Disappearance

Canadian Press:

TRAVERSE CITY, Mich, Feb. 24.—Several persons connected more than a decade ago with a little convent at Isadore, near here, were being sought to-day by county authorities in an effort to throw light on the disappearance in 1907 of Sister Mary Jelina, a nun, who, officers say, they believe came to her death by violence. At the time of her disappearance it was generally understood that Sister Mary had left the convent to visit relatives, but her body was recently exhumed. Among those who the authorities expect to help in clearing up the mystery is Rev. Andrew Bienowske, also Father Edward Podlewski, who succeeded Father Bienowske at Isadore.

LAUDS POPE'S WORK IN WAR

Father McMahon Tells What Has Been Done to Alleviate Suffering

NEW YORK, Feb. 22.— The Rev. Joseph H. McMahon, pastor of the Church of Our Lady of Lourdes, who has been called the spokesman for the Roman Catholic Church in this city, attacked Continental Socialism and Freemasonry and asserted that there was no "basis for a suspicion existing in some minds" that the Holy See had not been entirely impartial during the war.

"As insidious propaganda has been and is now being carried on in the press of certain countries," declared Father McMahon, addressing the Catholic Library Association, of which he is Moderator, "against the Holy See." He said that Pope Benedict XV had done more to do away with suffering and hardship in the war than any other power, and had handled successfully many matters which the United States did not dare to attempt. Among the things which Father McMahon said the Pope had accomplished were the exchange of prisoners, getting permission for letters to be sent from invalid regions, obtaining rest on Sundays for prisoners, and the establishment of prisoners' bureaus at Rome, Paderborn, Freiburg and Vienna.

PERSHING NOT IN POLITICS.

Thanks Writer for Good Wishes, but is Interested only in Army Work.

SHARON, Feb. 24. — General John J. Pershing will not be a candidate for the Presidency.

A letter received from James Brackin, Republican leader at Greenville, from Colonel Boyd, private secretary to the General, in reply to one in which Brackin congratulated Pershing on the defeat of Germany, and said the Republican party would probably nominate him, reads:

"General Pershing has asked me to acknowledge receipt of your cordial letter of Nov. 14th, and to extend his hearty thanks for your high appreciation of the achievements of our armies in France. As for the other matters mentioned in your letter, he thanks you for the compliment which you pay him but he is concerned only with his military duties and feels that he could not consistently become interested in anything which would divert his attention from them. He asks me to extend you his best wishes."

Aged Man Weeps After Fire Ruins Art Possessions

Irreplaceable Paintings Destroyed in Blaze Which Wrecks East Orange Studio Building.

NEW YORK, Feb. 22.—Facing ruin and with his life approaching its sunset, George Henry Roberts, an aged musician and vocal instructor, gazed upon the wreck of the studio building at Nos. 585 to 593 Main street, East Orange, N.J., following a fire which had destroyed his entire worldly possessions, and sobbed like a child. It was not a casual loss which he faced but the loss of many paintings and other works of art which are irreplaceable, including an original painting by Turner and others by William Blakelock, which were ruined beyond repair.

The fire occurred early Thursday morning, and fortunately Mr. Roberts, who usually slept in his studio, happened on that night to be visiting a friend. The blaze was first discovered in the Chambers Photographic studio on ground floor, from which it spread with amazing rapidity. Other offices and concerns were wiped out as completely as was Mr. Roberts' studio, a sales shop of the Edison Phonograph Company also being destroyed. The total damage was estimated between $35,000 and $50,000.

Mr. Roberts had lived in East Orange, but a few years ago he removed to Boston, where he taught singing to many boys and young men of wealthy families. On the outbreak of the war most of the students enlisted and so he returned to East Orange a year ago. He had never married but had devoted his life to music and the collection of his works of art.

He had accumulated many masterpieces of painting and sculpture, and his studio was a rendezvous of and others.

When the first firemen arrived they hastened to the top floor in the belief that Mr. Roberts had been trapped Two firemen, John Stevens and Frederick Ford, were overcome by smoke, and when Mr. Roberts was not found it was believed he had been burned.

The Death Of Rifleman Butler

Mrs. Sarah E. Butler, 93 Dufferin street, received the following letter from the major in reference to the death of her son, Harold L. Butler, who was killed on his way to Siberia on Dec. 30th, 1918:

Mrs. Sarah E. Butler,

Peterborough, Ont.:

It is my sad duty to inform you of the death of your son, No. 3708761 Rifleman Harold L. Butler, on December 30th. I am enclosing a copy of the entry in the ship's log which gives you the information of the death. He was given a military funeral on board ship, His comrades from his own platoon acted as the pallbearers. The service was attended by all the men of his company and by all the officers of the battalion.

It is very sad to see a promising young life cut off before it had been given a chance to prove itself in the world. But you must be consoled by the fact that as a soldier he proved his willingness to give his life for his country. Although he did not give up his life on the field of battle he died a true soldier's death while going to a foreign country to fight for the welfare of the world.

Sincerely,

A. G. Poupore, Major,

259th Batt., Can. Rifles, Siberia.

BRITAIN WOULD SMASH HULLS AND ARMAMENT

But She Would Not Destroy Engines or Other Parts of Industrial Value.

PARIS, eb. 21.— Opposition had been voiced in various quarters to the destruction of the German ships on the ground that they represent, not only a military force, but also material required for industrial purposes. In this connection one important feature of the British plan has not been published. Great Britain does not propose to destroy the engines or other parts of the ships which have industrial importance. She would remove these parts and then destroy the hulls and armament.

The basis of the British Admiralty plan which will be submitted to the Supreme War Council is that the German ships should not be retained as warships and it is insisted that because of their construction they have no commercial value. Whether the vessels shall be sunk in the Atlantic ocean or otherwise destroyed is a matter of indifference to the Admiralty.

The Admiralty decision is said to have been influenced largely by the belief that a satisfactory distribution of the ships among the allies was impossible. In fact, it is added, Great Britain would claim a major portion of the ships. This would only serve to increase her preponderance of sea power which, it is held, might be objectionable to other nations.

FOUNDLING SUFFOCATED.

KITCHENER, Feb. 24.—An inquest was opened here by Coroner S. H. Kalbfleisch into the death of the new-born babe found here, at which Dr. E. Hagmeife, who conducted the post-mortem, reported that the child was alive when born and had been suffocated to death.

An adjournment was made until the 27th to allow the Crown to follow up the several clues. A woman is under arrest on the charge of vagrancy is thought to be the mother of the child.

The Times History of the War

The Story of the Great War

IN the first days of the war, days when the whole world trembled in fear of the hideous thing rising to challenge civilisation, a certain body of men, sensing the calamity about to break upon the world, set about calmly, dispassionately to record history-in-the-making.

This body of men was the staff of The Times of London.

The result of their efforts is now offered to you—The Times History of the War.

The Times is unquestionably the premier institution of its kind in the world. No source of information is closed to it. It has the confidence of Governments. It penetrates to the remote corners of the world for authentic news. Its record for truth, enterprise and diligence is unrivalled.

Then, when you consider The Times Organization working in co-operation with the British Government Officials in the preparation of these volumes, you get an idea of the scope and importance of The Times History of the War now being offered to the Canadian public. This History is complete and authentic. It is the source of knowledge to which coming generations must come for complete and authentic information on the war in all its phases. Its publication is a triumph of which even The Times has reason to be proud.

The Times history contains written and pictorial records of the events leading up to the war, the first uneasy stirrings that gripped and turned men cold when the potentialities of the impending struggle were realized. Every battle on sea and land is truly described. The gradual assembling of the hosts of the British Empire, as chronicled in this work, until they comprised the mightiest Military and Naval force ever mustered by one nation since the world began. The more than 10,000 illustrations are worth many times the cost of the complete work.

The proud and vital part that Canada played in this struggle is fully and exhaustively portrayed. In word and picture Canada's mighty effort is recorded—from the sailing of the "First Contingent" in 1914, through Ypres, Courcelette, Cambrai, to the capture of Mons in 1918, on to the end, Canada's part is fully told.

Aside from the fact that a full and intimate knowledge of the War must be part of everyone's equipment, there is a fascinating romance woven through every page of these volumes of Canada's rising to undreamed heights of self-sacrifice and effort, that will cause the heart of every Canadian to swell with pride at the noble part his country played in the Great War.

As a work of reference, as a book of fascinating reading, as a medium of liberal knowledge of world politics and geography, as a chronicle of the most stirring period in the history of man, The Times History of the War is a work of incalculable value.

APPEAL FOR GRENFELL MISSION

Extract from Letter.

"For two weeks we have been working night and day, that is, my secretary Mr. Finley, a Yale man, and myself, around a deep inlet known as White Bay. There we encountered so much real poverty, so much need of even the elements of life, viz., bread and clothes to cover, we came back inclined to wonder if life there anyhow had anything to offer. We saw men and women hungry, with both beriberi and scurvy, from want of food, empty cupboards, and naked children, while the fish, plentiful enough in the north, had partially failed on this part of the coast."

This is the cause to which you contribute when you make your offering to the Grenfell Mission. Leave your offering at the office of this paper and it will be forwarded to Mrs. James Wood, Treasurer, Monaghan Road. 3d46

NEW YORK IS $236,000,000 IN ARREARS IN ITS BUILDING

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 22. — That there is a shortage in building in the North Atlantic States of $538,-800,000, and that the deficiency in New York State is $236,000,000, or 43 per cent. of this total, is the substance of a statement given out by the Division of Public Works and Construction Development of the Department of Labour.

The estimates are based on a study of building permits issued in the larger cities prior to and during the war. Massachusetts comes second with a deficiency of $153,000,000, Pennsylvania is third, with a deficiency of $92,500,000, followed by New Jersey with $27,500,000; Maine, $8,300,000; Rhode Island, $8,000,000; New Hampshire, $7,300,000, and Vermont, $4,800,000.

The building deficiency in these States during 1917 and 1918 is approximately fifty per cent. of the average of 1915 and 1916, indicating that the district is one year behind normal development in building projects. This, in addition to the normal, current demand for 1920.

BRITAIN HEARS WIVES GET ROWDY WELCOME

Stories That Crowds at Canadian Ports Jeer and Pelt Soldiers' Dependents.

LONDON, Feb. 24.—The sailing of the Melita Friday, with its married passenger roll and offspring, is noteworthy in view of the allegations made here recently that young wives of soldiers on arrival in Canada and Australia "have been received by jeering crowds, and, on one occasion at least, were pelted with street refuse and had to be protected by the police."

Whatever the truth, if any, in this story, it had no effect upon the spirits of the Melita's passengers. Euston Station in London begins to look like its old self nowadays, with specials running to Riverside, Liverpool, on the morning of a big sailing.

Friday's train was crowded, especially in the third class, with honest, serviceable looking women, a fair proportion of whom carried lusty infants. Many hundreds more went to Liverpool direct from different centres in England and were met on the ship by their soldier-husbands, who came up in a body from the Canadian discharge depot at Buxton. A band on the landing stage played lively airs during embarkation, and everybody appeared to anticipate their future life with a lively cheerfulness.

Among the ordinary passengers were Col. Herbert Bruce and his bride, Mrs. Hayden Horsey, Col. Creelman, Mrs. Delaney, Gustave Fracco, F. K. Froud, Bishop Bidwell, Major Mahood, Major Peake and Col. Wiusby.

Three Perished In Flames; Miss J. Parrish Among the Victims

House Was Totally Destroyed—Terrible Tragedy in the West

The Milestone (Sask.) Mail contains the following reference to a sad tragedy, in which Nurse Jeanette Parrish, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Parrish and niece of Mr. and Mrs. P. C. Parrish, of Powles' Corner, near Lindsay, was one of the victims:

"On Saturday morning, January 18, a fire which resulted fatally for three occupants, completely consumed the farm home of Frank Kime, about nine miles north-east of town. Those dead are Mrs. Frank Kime and ..., and Nurse Jeanette Parish, of Lang.

"On the morning in question, Frank Kime got up and got his own breakfast, after which he went to the barn to do the chores and harness the team to go for a load of ice. He told the women that they need be in no hurry about rising as he would leave a good fire on and would not be back for some time. When he was taking his horses out of the barn to give them a drink just prior to hitching them up, he noticed a large volume of smoke issuing from the house. Knowing there must be something wrong he immediately went to his wife's bedroom window. On breaking in he found she was not there. Going around the house to the other side where Nurse Parrish slept he repeated the process of breaking the window. When he gained admittance he found there was no one there either. Going around to the kitchen door he tried to get in, but could not as the fire had gained too much headway, and it would have been suicide to enter. He then went to the front door. This was nailed up for the winter, as is the usual custom on the prairie. He secured an axe and chopped the door off. This done he discovered Mrs. Kime lying on the floor near the door, face down with the 14 months old boy under her. These two he dragged to safety and rolled them in the snow to smother the fire. They were still alive, but very badly burned. The nurse's remains were not discovered until the fire had burned itself out. When found there was very little of the body left. All the extremities had been burned from the trunk, and this was almost gone as well.

"Kime placed his wife and baby in a sleigh and drove to the home of his nearest neighbour, John Lekivetz, where everything that medical skill could provide was done for them. In a final effort to save the baby's life it was brought to Milestone in the evening, to be taken to Moose Jaw on the local, at which place it was to enter the hospital. The boy died, however, in Mrs. P. M. Martin's arms just before reaching town. The remains were dressed and ... ed in a casket at once. Before this casket reached home the mother had been called to the great beyond after thirteen hours of untold agony. There was not one inch of the mother's body which did not support bandages, so badly burned was she."

Death Of An Old Resident

Late Erasmus Greene Was One of Peterboro's Early Fire Fighters

Mr. Erasmus Greene, one of the city's oldest residents, passed away at his family residence, corner of Antrim and Water streets at 6:15 Sunday morning, at the advanced age of 85 years. Mr. Greene was a Fenian Raid veteran, one of those who responded to the call to arms to protect his country against invasion, and he served throughout the campaign as a non-commissioned officer. He was a volunteer member and perhaps the last one of the early fire-fighters, when the crude hand-operating fire engine was in its prime. The brigade did efficient service at a time when fire precautions were not observed as they are now.

Mr. Green is a son of Ireland, having been born in Kildare, May 15th, 1834, and came to Canada four years later, with his parents and grandparents, locating first at Kildare, near Joliette in Lower Canada. In 1840 they moved to the Island of Montreal, and a little later settled further up the St. Lawrence in the Township of Hemmingford opposite Cornwall. The year 1849 saw their arrival at Peterborough, settling in Smith Township one mile south of Selwyn on what is known as the Buckhorn Road. Here they remained five years, disposed of their farm to Edward Sanderson, and finally took up residence on Water street opposite the old Market Hall, where Mr. Greene lived with his grandparents while learning his trade with Mr. Rowe in his carpenter shop on Chambers street with whom he worked for eighteen years. It was during this period that he helped in the carpenter work on stores erected by James Stevenson, Thomas Bradburn, William Cluxton and William Dixon.

ERASMUS GREENE

Started in Business.

Mr. Greene started in business for himself in the year 1872 at Bobcaygeon, but returned the following year to Peterborough. In 1881 he journeyed to Chicago where he remained sixteen years finally returning to Peterborough to spend the remainder of his days. That was 25 years ago. He built a house for himself on Water street at the corner of Antrim and lived there retired to the time of his death with Mrs. Bithray, his daughter. A son, Albert W., of Chicago, who lived in Chicago, is home for his father's funeral. His wife, Mary Hewitt Greene, predeceased him four years.

In religion Mr. Greene was a Methodist, and up to four years ago, when he suffered a paralytic stroke, he was a regular attendant of the George Street Methodist Church.

He leaves to mourn his loss, one daughter, Mrs. Thomas Bithray, of this city, and one son, Mr. A. W. Greene, of Chicago, and one grandson, Captain P. W. Greene, attached to the staff of Major-General Barth, of the United States Army.

The funeral will take place to-morrow afternoon at 2 o'clock from the family residence, service at the house, to Little Lake cemetery. Rev. A. J. Thomas, of George Street Methodist Church, will officiate.

"THE MAN WHO CAME BACK."

"The Man who Came Back," Jules Eckert Goodman's famous play, based on John Fleming Wilson's story of the same name, revealed to Peterboro theatre goers in its visit to the Grand on Saturday, the reason for its tremendous popularity and long run in New York. It was one of the most gripping and striking presentations seen at the Grand in a long period. Briefly the story of "The Man who Came Back," is the story of Henry Potter, the son of a New York millionaire, who, born with a silver spoon in his mouth, has been brought up with every luxury that money could buy provided for him, and who has, as a result, drifted into ways of dissipation and weakness. He is shipped to San Francisco in an effort to save him, and he drifts from bad to worse, eventually winding up in an opium den in Shanghai where he is finally converted to a realization of his position in a wonderful scene with Marcella, a San Francisco cabaret girl, with whom he is in love. This third act, which takes place in a Chinese dive, is one of the most impressive that a Peterboro audience has ever seen. Eventually Potter, with the assistance of the girl, whom he marries, after their decision to "go back," wins out.

The play was most admirably acted. Mr. James Dyrenforth, in the title role, had a part that called for exceptional versatility and ability and he easily answered every demand made upon him. His picture of a prodigal son, was a masterpiece. Miss Sophie Allen, as Marcella, scored heavily, and in the big scene in the third act, rose to heights of genius in her magnificent acting. Mr. Jas. Seeley presented a life-like portrayal of the millionaire father. Mr. A. R. Callendar was excellent as Captain Trevelin, and the other roles were all splendidly handled.

The scenic investiture was in keeping with the merit of the play and the high character of the acting. All in all it was a memorable production.

Wild Night Orgies In German Cities To Be Restricted

BERLIN.—The revival of carnival, wine drinking and expensive night revels into which certain classes of the population of Berlin and other large cities have plunged since the beginning of the armistice, hereafter will be restricted by the police. Under an order issued only such dance halls as had permits before the war will be allowed to continue, but they will be limited to certain days of the week and to certain number of hours in the evening. The dance halls and cabarets which have sprung into existence since the armistice will not be licensed after March 15.

The frivolous and profligate night life now prevailing has been criticised generally as being not only inconsistent with Germany's present position, but also unfavourably affecting public opinion abroad.

Died of Pneumonia After Long Active Service In France

Mrs. Joseph Johnston, 9 Park street, whose only son, Driver Percy H. Johnston, died of bronchial pneumonia at Letreport hospital, France, on New Year's Day, received the appended letter from the officer commanding the 36th Battery, C.F.A. Driver Johnston enlisted with the 68th Battery in Vancouver in 1916, and in France was transferred to the 36th. Before moving to Vancouver he was employed at the Peterborough Canoe Company, attended Park street Baptist church, and had many warm friends in Peterborough who have been deeply touched by his death, the more distressing in that occurred when the war was over and after he had given long service at the front.

France, Jan. 6th, 1919.

To Mrs. Joseph Johnston,
9 Park street, N, Peterboorugh,
Ont., Canada:

Dear Madam,—I very much regret to inform you that your son, No. 338363 Driver Percy H. Johnston, died on the 1st inst., from bronchial pneumonia. He left his unit in September with influenza, and was admitted to hospital at the base. His illness appears to have developed into pneumonia with fatal results.

His death is greatly deplored by both officers and men of this unit ... on their behalf I have to convey ... you their very deep sympathy ... you in your affliction, more especially as driver Johnston performed ... good services during the war, and ... that it is over to be taken ... this time is so very hard, ... death in consequence is more ... deplored by us all.

Believe me,
Yours very sincerely,
L. OUELLETTE, Lt.

Bribery For Easy Navy Duties Being Investigated Here

Story of How the War Trapper Caused Secretary to Send Lawyer to the Front

NEW YORK, Feb. 22.—Rumors which the Hearst papers for months ... against naval officers of the Atlantic Coast, that there has been bribery and graft in obtaining easy shore duties, promotions and rapid release from service by administration officers and petty officers in the Third Naval district, with headquarters at No. 2 Broadway, have been published reports.

Their publication in a newspaper in this city was followed immediately by a statement from Joseph Daniels, Secretary of the Navy, that he had learned of these reports and that he had several weeks ago assigned a ... Advocate of the Navy to come to New York and unearth the facts and to present the evidence to him in an independent report. The lawyer's report has not yet been presented to the Navy Department and, until this is done naval authorities will not be ... to discuss the case or give any ... information regarding the ...

Trapper Implicated.

"We have learned that arrests have been made," said Secretary Daniels ... that one man has been tried by ... court martial. The court convicted ... and he has asked for a review of the ... As yet his appeal has not come to my desk. The facts upon which the ... acting in this investigation ... that money was paid for ... and promotion in the ... and discharges from the ser...

"In addition, according to the reports current among naval officers, are charges that men who wanted to evade the army draft were accepted into the navy upon false physical records that; men anxious to escape service at sea contrived to have themselves transferred to navy shore posts paying money thereafter, and that men were allowed to register conventional appearances at their naval duties for an hour or two daily, being free to conduct their civilian business during the rest of the day.

Stories of specific cases have been circulated for months among hundreds of naval officers, both in the regular navy and in the Naval Reserve. They have been discussed so openly recently that surprise again was expressed that no action has been taken.

"Soft Deals" on Shore

Some of the stories heard most frequently are:—

1. A manager of a prominent concert singer in this city obtained the admission of his son into the navy after he had failed to pass the naval physical examination, but had passed the army examination given by his draft board. The young man was then assigned to a "soft detail" at one of the city piers.

2. A popular young actor of this city who entered the navy as a yeoman desired to be transferred to a training station on the Pacific coast, where his wife, whom he had married only a short time previously, was acting.

3. A son of a wealthy manufacturer, failing to pass the physical examination of the navy, was later admitted through some process and received the commission of ensign.

4. A naval officer stationed in this city on administration work obtained sets of examination papers which were to be issued to candidates for commissions. He distributed the examination questions among chief petty officers who were friends of his, and who later, taking the examination, were made non-commissioned officers ...

Pte. J. A. Foster of the 58th C.M.R. Arrives Home From Overseas

Among a number of Peterboro soldiers who arrived home on Saturday, from overseas, was J. A. Foster, 16b London street, a former member of the 58th C.M.R. Pte. Foster enlisted here four years ago, in February, 1915, with B Squadron, 8th C.M.R., and went overseas with that unit, going to France in January, 1916, in a draft to the 4th C.M.R. He was with the 4th during the Battle of Zillebeke, June 2, 1916, and was one of the handful of men of his regiment who came through that engagement safely. He had a number of narrow escapes, being buried three or four times by shells during the terrible bombardment.

Pte. Foster afterwards went through the Somme fighting, Vimy Ridge, the engagements around Lens and the battle of Passchendaele, unwounded, and was then transferred to the Canadian Forestry Corps, spending last year in the south of France, where the Canadian Forestry Units were busily engaged.

A Tribute to The Rev. R. A. Whattam

At the joint meeting of the trustee and quarterly official board of Mark street Methodist church held Friday night, a vote of apreciation was tendered the Rev. R. A. Whattam at the close of his four year pastorate for his service and faithfulness to the congregation, in bringing it to its efficient standing, also the splendid services of Mrs. Whattam in her faithfulness to duties in the interest of the different Departments of work in the church and that the work that both Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Whattam in future shall be called to perform shall be watched with interest, and God's choicest blessing signed by an unanimous vote of the Mark street trustee and quarterly official board.

GOSPEL HALL NOTES

Mr. Innes will speak every night this week, to-night's subject is "Side Lights" on the life of the Prodigal Son. Last night a good audience listened to the story of the Assyrian General stricken with leprosy and its lessons. Mr. Innes made a strong plea for sinners to get down off every high thought. He said the human race was not being tried, but trial was past and sentence given that all were guilty and if people would only come down and take the low place confessing their need, God would be gracious and save. Obedience must be obsolute in this respect before the Gospel could be received. Mr. Innes is a strong speaker telling many incidents in such a convincing style it is a great pleasure to hear him.

FIRM HAND IN INDIA.

Viceroy Calls for Legislation Guaranteeing Peace and Order.

DELHI, India, Feb. 22.—In opening the Legislative Council of the Indian Empire here, Lord Chelmsford, the Viceroy, said that it was important that the large powers which had enabled the public peace to be maintained during the war should be replaced by adequate substitutes. The reaction against authority, which had manifested itself in many parts of the world, he pointed out, was likely to leave India untouched. The Government, he added, could not shut its eyes to the undoubted existence in India of definitely revolutionary organizations, and it would fail in its duty if it was not prepared to deal with them.

Special measures were clearly essential for the maintenance of the Government and the lives and property of the citizens of India, the Viceroy declared, and he therefore commended to the Council legislation for the most earnest consideration.

Fifty thousand Indian troops have been demobilized since the armistice, the Viceroy reported. As to crop conditions, he said the unusual drought had caused widespread anxiety, but that recent rains had been beneficial.

WOMAN WILL PROSECUTE ANOTHER FOR MURDER

LOS ANGELES, Cal. — A woman, Mrs. Georgia P. Bullock, will prosecute Mrs. Gertrude M. Gibbons, formerly of Boston, who is charged with murdering her husband, Frank Gibbons, it was announced here.

Mrs. Bullock, who was formerly judge of the women's court and is now a deputy district attorney, will seek to obtain a capital sentence for Mrs Gibbons on the ground that she administered poison to her husband because of "constant nagging."

Mrs. Gibbons' defence will be that she bought poison at her husband's request and gave it to him. "that he might put himself out of his misery and that his soul might become that of a newborn babe."

Mrs. Gibbons asked for a jury of men. She fears the emotions of women might react against her, it was reported near collapse

Two Prisoners Made Escape

Canadian Press.

SIMCOE, Feb. 24. — By sawing through one-half inch bars in their cell door, and five window bars about one inch square, two prisoners made their escape in the early hours of the morning. They were William Flook, sentenced to three years' penitentiary, and Frank Sutton, sentenced to eighteen months, both for theft.

HORSE JUMPS INTO CAR.

TILLSONBURG, Feb. 24.—A very serious accident occurred on North Broadway, which luckily resulted in no fatalities to the occupants. V. Denton of Springfield was driving on Main street when his horse became frightened at Mabee's service car and jumped to the wrong side of the road, the auto driver turning out to miss the horse, which in another instant jumped directly into the car, horse's leg was broken, and it was later found necessary to shoot the animal. Eye-witnesses claim that no blame can be attached to either party, and that it was the best of luck that no fatalities resulted.

LIEUT.-COL. COLLINS DENIED WRIT

NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 24.—Federal Judge Grubb has denied a writ of Habeas Corpus sought by Glen H. Collins, former lieutenant-colonel in the British army, charged with obtaining through fraud a necklace valued at 25,000 rupees from Mohamid Ali Zainal Ali Baza of Bombay. It was announced that Collins would be returned to Bombay for trial. He was arrested here last July at the request of British authorities.

GERMAN ARMY AT LOW EBB.

Capt. Gherardi Says That It Has Shrunk to Insignificant Size.

PARIS, Feb. 24.—Captain Walter R. Gherardi of the United States Navy, who has been in Germany two weeks, studying economic and general conditions, has returned to Paris and reports that he found much unemployment throughout the country and a restless, fluid condition that contains a threat against the peace of the immediate future. He says that Germany's food supplies are limited to almost exhausted reserves, which cannot last longer than next month, leaving a great gap to be filled before harvest.

The German Army, Captain Gherardi says, has shrunk to insignificant figures and is no longer formidable.

If the new armistice terms now being framed, involved disarmament of all but a sufficient number of soldiers to prevent internal disorders, are observed by the Germans, it is believed by most of the Entente representatives here that France need have no further fear from that quarter and that there can be no reason for delaying the conclusion of a peace treaty.

HER FIVE CHILDREN

Had Whooping Cough At the Same Time

Whooping cough is one of the most dangerous diseases of children, especially to those under five years of age. It first starts with a fever and cough, sneezing, watering of the eyes and an irritation of the throat. Later the coughing increases, the child becomes livid in the face, the eyes appear as if they would burst from their sockets and suffocations seems imminent till relief is brought by the "whoop."

On the first sign of whooping cough we would advise the use of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. This fam ous remedy will clear the bronchial tubes of the collected mucous and phlegm, and in this way ease the racking cough and in a short time make it disappear entirely.

Mrs. Walter McGaughey, North Battleford, Sask., writes:—"I have five children, the eldest thirteen and the baby two years old. They all had the whooping cough at the same time. I tried two or three cough remedies, but none gave the same satisfaction as Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. A home where there are young children should never be without it. I will highly recommend it to those who want a quick cure."

There are many imitations of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, so be sure you get the genuine by insisting that the package is put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; price 25c. and 50c. and manufactured by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

WHY SILK HOSE WILL STAY HIGH

One of the chief reason why there will be practically no reduction in the price of the better grades of women's silk hosiery for Spring in the rapidity with which the production of these goods is absorbed. As was pointed out yesterday, none of this merchandise was used for military purposes during the war. Consequently there is no flood of goods released by the Government to depress values, as has been the case with other lines of knitted articles. It was further pointed out that, while the consuming power of the country increased steadily as the war went on the production of fine silk hose, due to the inability to obtain additional machines and skilled labor, barely held its own during the period of 1914-1918. Since November last the demand for the goods in question has been so great that in certain lings buyers ha- even tried to purchase manufacturers' samples in order to supply their customers. With a condition of this kind promising to continue indefi- wholesalers contend that lower prices for fine hose are out of th question for some time to come.

WILSON INVITES THE CRITICS TO TEST SENTIMENT OF AMERICA

"I Have Been Struck by Moderation of Those Representing National Claims."

"CONFIDENCE IN U. S. 'ASKS' SOMETHING"

Mr. Wilson's speech, the first direct answer to the opponents of the league in the Senate, was planned to lay the background for American support of his programme. Its preparation followed a long conference aboard the George Washington last night and this morning with Secretary Tumulty.

Mechanics Hall, Boston, Mass., Feb. 25.—President Wilson, in his first speech here yesterday, on landing from France, invited the critics of the League of Nations plan to "test the sentiment of America."

Speaking of the slow progress of the conference, the President reminded his audience of the complexity of the problems affecting nearly every country in the world.

"What We Are Doing."

"What we are doing," said he, "is to hear the whole case from those most interested. I have been struck by the moderation of those representing national claims.

"I have seen tears in the eyes of men there pleading for a national ambition, but they were not the tears of anguish; they were the tears of ardent hope. There is no nation in Europe that distrusts the course of the United States. Was there ever such a wonderful thing before?

"I would not have you understand that the men who represent the other nations there are disinterested. Quite the contrary."

The European statesmen, he said, when unable to agree were to resort to the nation known as "the "friend of mankind." To illustrate his point the President related that American soldiers were welcomed in all the European countries.

"If I were to regard the pride I feel a personal pride I would be the most stuck up man in the world.

Searching for the Fact.

"I have been searching fo. the fundamental fact that has brought Europe to believe in us. She seemed for the first three years to believe we felt we could make more by staying out than going in. Then suddenly the whole verdict was reversed. It was when they saw that America not only held ideals but acted ideals, they became the confirmed partizans of America and became converted to those ideas.

"Now," said the President, "this confidence we have established calls for something. The Europe I left was full of hope. The Europe of the third year of the war was sinking to a stubborn desperation. They thought the end of the war would eventually be a resumption of the old order. They never dreamed it would be a Europe of settled peace."

GRAIN MARKET

Corn markets were strong at the opening yesterday, making substantial advances over the previous close, but later weakening on reports from Washington that news of a bearish character was coming out. Whether there was truth behind the rumour or not, it had probably the desired effect, for at the close most of the earlier gains had been lost, the deferred options, however, still closing a little stronger than before the holiday. In the cash markets oats and barley are still holding strong.

Manitoba wheat—In store, Fort William; No. 1 northern, $2.24 1-2; No. 2 northern, $2.20 1-2; No. 3 northern, $2.17; No. 4 wheat, $2.11 1-2.

CATTLE MARKET

Union Stock Yards— Receipts were 192 cars, with 3,708 cattle, 248 calves, 1,968 hogs, and 344 sheep and lambs.

A good strong market yesterday, with prices firm at about last Thursday's closing sales, or 50c. to 75c. higher than a week ago yesterday. There were no choice heavy steers in yesterday's market, outside of an odd steer here and there. There was a demand, however, for the best choice butcher available both for the export trade and for local requirements.

Fat cows were good end strong.

Calves firmer to 25c. higher.

Lambs firmer to 25c. higher.

Hogs steady at $18, fed and watered.

AIRPLANES USED IN FRANCE FOR MILK DISTRIBUTION.

NEW YORK, Feb. 24. — A communication from France to Mrs. Warren McConiha, president of the New York Committee of Free Milk for France, states that the crippled condition of the French railroads had made it necessary to distribute the milk throughout Northern France by airplane. It is the first time that aircraft have been used in the extension of relief in France although similar methods were resorted to many months ago in Italy.

The committee also announced the establishment of small stores throughout France at which milk is distributed for the benefit of the poor at less than one-third the normal price. Those who cannot afford to buy the milk are supplied without cost.

The Modest French Hero Gen. Pau Warmly Welcomed

Veteran of Franco-Prussian War and Defender of France in Recent Conflict Visits Toronto—Neither Danger Nor Age E'er Daunted Him

TORONTO, Feb. 25.—General Paul Mary Caesar Gerald Pau, who arrived in Toronto yesterday afternoon, is one of the most heroic figures of the Great War. Almost as striking a figure as was General Joffre in the early stages of the conflict, is this one-armed veteran of the Franco-Prussian conflict.

It was in June, 1911, when war clouds began to darken the political horizon of Europe, that the French Government first offered General Pau command of all the French military forces. He was to become Commander-in-Chief and Chief of Staff in times of peace, and generalissimo in in times of war. His demands, however, at that time were considered too revolutionary; they would have meant a mighty shake-up in higher army circles and so they were refused and he was allowed to retire.

But when the Great War came, and things looked darkest for his beloved France, Pau again enrolled in the army and was given supreme command of the army in the east. Under his regime the shattered French forces, after defeat brought about by many blunders, were reformed and he lead the successful offensive movement into Alsace.

Following the second battle of Muelhausen, Gen. Pau was called by Field Marshal Joffre to command the strategic retreat to the Aisne and he was present at the famous War Council in Bordeaux when Lord Kitchener insisted on the court-martialling of the French General who had delayed going to the assistance of General French.

First General Honoured.

General Pau was the first French general to be mentioned by the French War Department officially for meritorious service. He was praised for his superb generalship at Mulhausen. Since then his name has appeared repeatedly in the news from the front.

He was subsequently sent to Russia on a special military mission. There he formed a very close friendship with Grand Duke Nicholas, then in command of all the military forces in Russia. He is a universal favourite with the soldiers. He commands not only the goodwill but the affection of all with whom he is brought in contact.

So successful did General Pau become that his services were quickly recognized by the French Government and he was employed on a number of special missions, including visits to Bucharest, Roumania, and the United States.

General Pau has often been described as the most picturesque veteran of the French army. He is 70 years of age and is a collateral descendant of the Maid of Orleans. As such he is entitled to the armorial bearings of Joan of Arc, which distinction he shares with one other French general, Hubert Lyautey, former Minister of War and Governor-General and Commander-in-Chief of Morocco.

Descendant of Joan of Arc.

The arms were granted to the maid herself, and after her death to her brother, by the French Crown, nearly 500 years ago. They show on a blue shield a perpendicular sword of silver pointed upward. The point supports the golden crown of France, and the hilt of the sword is also of gold. The sword is flanked on either side by the gold heraldic lily of France. The crest shows a picture of the Maid of Orleans, her loosened and flowing hair surmounted by a golden crown.

General Pau was a lieutenant in the Franco-Prussian war, having graduated from St. Cyr in 1867. He lost his arm at the battle of Froeschviller, but gained the Cross of the Legion of Honour. By the end of the war he had gained his captaincy, but promotion came slowly thereafter. It was in 1897 that he attained the rank of General and was given command of a brigade. His great executive ability then began to tell, and five years later he was in command of an army corps, the sixteenth. In 1906 he was sent as commander of the twentieth army corps to Nancy, the pivot on which the defence of France's eastern frontier hinged.

COL. MACHIN DENIES M.S.A. FAILURE IN P.Q.

Issues Statement Refuting Allegations of A. Rives Hall, K.C.

MONTREAL, Feb. 25.—Mr. A. R. Hall, K.C., in his address at the Reform Club, said the Military Act cost the country $4,000,000 and secured only 40,000 men. He expressed pained surprise that Justice Loranger, a son of Quebec, should lend himself to slander on his own Province. He no doubt helped the figures and knew 83,500 exemptions had been let go unchallenged in Ontario.

Lieut.-Col. Machin, Director of the Military Service branch of the Department of Justice, has issued a statement in reply. Col. Machin says his official report, which will be presented shortly, will embody with the greatest accuracy figures which will demonstrate the misleading character of the statements affecting the operation of the Act, which Mr. Hall "ventured to submit for the entrainment of his friends at the Reform Club." Col. Machin objects particularly to the reflections on Judge Loranger "to whom the country is principally indebted for the very considerable measure of success which attended the draft in the Province of Quebec."

THIN PEOPLE SHOULD TAKE PHOSPHATE

Nothing Like Plain Bitro-Phosphate to Put on Firm, Healthy Flesh and to Increase Strength, Vigour and Nerve Force.

Judging from the countless preparations and treatments which are continually being advertised for the purpose of making thin people fleshy, developing arms, neck and bust, and replacing ugly hollows and angles by the soft curved lines of health and beauty, there are evidently thousands of men and women who keenly feel their excessive thinness.

Thinness or weakness are usually due to starved nerves. Our bodies need more phosphate than is contained in modern foods. Physicians claim there is nothing that will supply this deficiency so well as the organic phosphate known among druggists as bitro phosphate, which is inexpensive and sold by McDermid & Jury in Peterboro and most all druggists under a guarantee of entire satisfaction or your money back. By feeding the nerves directly and by supplying the body cells with the necessary phosphoric food elements, bitro-phosphate quickly produces a welcome transformation in the appearance; the increase in weight frequently being astonishing.

This increase in weight also carries with it a general improvement in the ealth. Nervousness, sleeplessness and lack of energy, which nearly always accompany excessive thinness, soon disappear, dull eyes become bright, and pale cheeks glow with the bloom of perfect health.

CAUTION:— Although bitro-phosphate is unsurpassed for relieving nervousness, sleeplessness and general weakness, it should not, owing to its remarkable flesh-growing properties, be used by anyone who does not desire to put on flesh.

THE WIFE

BY JANE PHELPS

Ruth Is Charmed With Mrs. Livingstone

CHAPTER CXXVIII.

Ruth kept the appointment the next morning, and found Mrs. Livingstone a very delightful middle-aged woman. One of the many women of social prominence who was giving not only her money, but her entire time to war work. They took to each other at once, and Ruth felt no hesitancy in talking of her plans She explained that it was because her own baby had been born after her husband had gone overseas, that she was particularly interested in the wives of soldiers who were similarly situated. Before she left for the shop she had a list of five or six to look up, some of whom Mrs. Livingstone said might very urgently need help.

"Two kinds of help," she had said with a winning smile, "The help that money brings; and that which sympathy gives. Some of them, poor things, are naturally terribly depressed. Many of them have no one to whom to turn for either sympathy or for diversion. They will welcome you because you are young, and because you, thru having the same experience, know just how they feel. I am glad you are taking up this work. Even tho it is home work, it is none the less war work."

She then spoke of money being needed, and Ruth told her of her aunt's interest, and that she was abundantly able to assist her financially. But, even so, Mrs. Livingstone made Ruth promise to come to her if she needed help of any kind.

"She was perfectly lovely!" Ruth said with enthusiasm when she told her aunt of her call on Mrs. Livingstone.

"She is charming. And has promised to help me all she can. She entirely approves of what I want to do, and has given me a list of young wives and mothers to visit," she told Mr. Mandel.

"I knew you would get on with her. I have known her a long time. She is one of New York's four hundred. Not only because of her money and birth, but because of her good heart."

Ruth lost no time in locating the people on her list. With one exception, they were young women, like herself, and the child their first, as Brian was hers. The exception was the one most in need of financial assistance. She had two little ones, just toddlers, and the third had come the day her man sailed.

"It was Tim's wish to have a boy, and when the boy come he wasn't here to see him. Not that he didn't like the girls; he was that fond of them. But he had set his heart on having a boy ,and now likely as not he never will see him. He'll be killed maybe."

"You must not feel that way," Ruth said to her, the told her of her own little Brian, whom his father also never had seen. Before she left the poor litle Irishwoman was not quite so hopeless, and, Ruth, in trying to cheer her, had intrigued herself also.

If Ruth had been busy before, now she was overloaded. She neglected nothing at the shop, but daily almost, her list of mothers grew. She never had an unoccupied minute. Her aunt declared she would make herself ill; and Mandel tried to make her take her outside work on a rational manner. But Ruth stubbornly refused to save herself. Altho she did not concede it, she felt, in a way, that she was atoning for keeping the news that he had a son from Brian by doing all she could for the wives and babies of those other soldiers who, like Brian, never had seen, perhaps never would see, their children born after they left.

Whenever she tried to instill hope in some young mother's heart she always had an unexpressed fear in her own. Often as she assured them that Tim, or John, or George, would probably come back safe and sound, she would have to swallow hard to rid herself of the lump in her own throat at the thought that perhaps Brian—her man—might not return.

But her work among these young women did her good. She forgot to lie awake and wonder if Brian had seen Mollie King that day, and, if so, under what circumstances. She was wearied to exhaustion with her combined duties and her charitable work. She slept almost as soon as she touched the pillow.

Little Brian was growing wonderfully like his father. So like him, that Ruth often looked at the tiny face and wondered if he would be as much like Brian in other things as he was in looks. In some things she hoped he would; she hesitated to her thought when she thought of other traits.

"I hope you will be good and brave and—strong," she said to him as she held him closely in her arms. What she meant by "strong" perhaps she herself could not have told. Yet, in this hesitation, she had put her complaint against Brian—her feeling that he was not quite all she wanted her boy—his son—to be.

ORIGIN OF AIREDALE.

Popular Dog Came From Valley of the Aire.

The Airedale is a peculiar dog, and his origin is not easy to trace. In all probability he is the result of crosses between the old rough Scotch terrier, the bull-terrier and the otter-hound. Certain characteristics of the latter breed are very prominent in the Airedale of to-day. About forty years ago the colliers of the Valley of the Aire enjoyed almost a monopoly of these dogs, which are highly prized for their fighting qualities, general ruggedness, keen intelligence and loyalty to their owners. The colliers were a rough, hardy set, ready for anything, and their favorite dogs were bright disciples of the school of hard knocks.

Those accustomed to associate the name terrier with a small dog are apt to be somewhat puzzled by the appearance of this latest addition to the recognized breeds. He is, as a rule, is what may be termed a "big little dog," choice specimens sometimes weighing as much as sixty pounds, which means a dog as large as a heavy pointer.

The appearance of the Airedale at once reminds one of the Irish and Welsh terriers; in fact, the dog at first glance looks like a very large and somewhat coarse Irish Terrier. A closer examination, however, will prove that he has no useless lumber, that he is all dog, and a very smart type of dog at that. To the otter-hound he owes much of his bone, strength, and his peculiar head. The mark of the hound, too, is apt to show in the ear and the narrowness of the skull. Careful breeding has about eliminated these undesirable features, and the V-shaped ear, larger, but of the same general type as that of the fox-terrier, has become a fixed characteristic.

The size and all the valuable qualities of the Airedale make one of the best of dogs for the country, as they unfit him for life in a city. Being very powerful he requires plenty of exercise. He should have his freedom, for a couple of jaunts daily upon a chain are by no means sufficient for him, or for any other active dog. As companion during tramps about the country, or with the run of a large suburban place, or upon a farm, this dog is one of the most desirable of all the canine race.

He is game to the last gasp, as becomes one of his blended blood. From the Scotch and bull terriers he derives his keenness for vermin and his almost unrivaled fighting powers, while from the otter-hound he derives a marked hunting instinct and a readiness to work cheerfully in water, no matter how cold it may be. In his knowing-looking head is a rare good set of brains, and his nose is excellent. No dog is fonder of a rough frolic, and none is keener to tackle any wild creature, from rat to raccoon. But strong and ready as he is, he is blessed with a sweet disposition and a spaniel-like faithfulness. He will fight till he dies, for he does not understand what fear is, yet he is no bully. A generous friend and a fair foe, he asks no odds of any dog, and as he is a glutton to take punishment and an artist in administering it, he usually can give an excellent account of himself if attacked by a much larger dog.

About an American country home he is sure to prove useful and in every way reliable. He is one of the best of watch-dogs, and he is large enough to command the respect of unsavory intruders. As a vermin destroyer he has no superior, such large quarry as woodchucks and coons falling comparatively easy victims to his dashing method of attack.—From All Outdoors.

Letter Boxes in the Alps.

In the Alps there is one letter box at an elevation of nearly 10,000 feet above the sea level from which there are collections four times a day. There are several letter receptacles at an elevation of between 8,000 and 7,000 feet.

Fortune Tellers.

It is asserted that there is not one case on record of a man who profited by the wizardry of a fortune teller who afterward rewarded the card reader or crystal gazer, or whatever it was, by so much as even a small cash tip.

This fact shows that either patrons of fortune tellers are an exceedingly ungrateful lot, or that there isn't one of them who ever had the slightest reason for being grateful. In other words, can a fortune teller really tell fortunes?

Clear, Peachy Skin Awaits Anyone Who Drinks Hot Water

Says an inside bath, before breakfast helps us look and feel clean, sweet, fresh.

Sparkling and vivacious —merry, bright, alert—a good, clear skin and a natural, rosy, healthy complexion are assured only by pure blood. If only, every man and woman could be induced to adopt the morning inside bath, what a gratifying change would take place. Instead of the thousands of sickly, anaemic-looking men, women and girls, with pasty or muddy complexion; instead of the multitudes of "nerve wrecks," "rundowns," "brain fags" and pessimists we should see a virile optimistic throng of rosy-cheeked people everywhere.

An inside bath is had by drinking each morning, before breakfast, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver, kidneys and ten yards of bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour fermentations and poisons, thus cleansing, sweetening and freshening the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

Those subject to sick headache, biliousness, nasty breath, rheumatism, colds; and particularly those who have a pallid, sallow complexion and who are constipated very often, are urged to obtain a quarter pound of limestone phosphate at the drug store which will cost but a trifle, but is sufficient to demonstrate the quick and remarkable change in both health and appearance awaiting those who practice internal sanitation. We must remember that inside cleanliness is more important than outside, because the skin does not absorb impurities to contaminate the blood while the pores in the thirty feet of bowels do.

Music in Prisons.

In a paper read before a convention of music teachers, the musical director of a well-known prison said that the band and orchestra maintained in the institution with which he was connected was as important a part of the prison life as any of the industries which contributed to make the prison self-supporting.

The major of an important middle-Western city said not long ago: "Music operates to destroy anarchistic tendencies, to foster, preserve and operate constructive citizenship. It is unnecessary to defend the usefulness of music as a practical agent in life. It has been demonstrated as such. We need the spirit of music now, if ever, in a world of strife, confusion and violence. As an influence in the direction of affection and kindliness it hits a plum."

ALL HAD IDEAS ABOUT FIRE

Members of Family Differed Considerably Concerning Its Proper Arrangement, Says Harriet Beecher Stowe.

The fact is, that there is no little nook of domestic life which gives snug harbor to so much self-will and self-righteousness as the family hearth; and this is particularly the case with wood fires, because, from the miscellaneous nature of the material, and the sprightly activity of the combustion, there is a constant occasion for tending and alteration and so a vast field for individual opinion.

First came an enormous back log, rolled in with the strength of two men, on the top of which was piled another smaller log; and then a forestick, of a size which would entitle it to be called a log in our times, went to make the front foundation of the fire. The rearing of the ample pile thereupon was a matter of no small architectural skill, and all the ruling members of our family circle had their own opinions about its erection, and these they maintained with the zeal and pertinacity which becomes earnest people. My grandfather, with his grave smile, insisted that he was the only reasonable fire-builder in the establishment; but when he had arranged his sticks in the most methodical order, my grandmother would be sure to rush out with a thump here and a twitch there, and divers incoherent exclamations tending to imply that men never knew how to build a fire. Frequently her intense zeal for immediate effect would end in a general rout and roll of the sticks in all directions, with puffs of smoke down the chimney, requiring the setting open of the outside door; and then Aunt Lois would come in, and, with a face severe with determination, tear down the whole structure and rebuild from the foundation with exactest precision, but with an air that cast volumes of contempt on all that had gone before.

The Lucky Horseshoe.

The superstitious use of horseshoes as emblems of good luck originated about the middle of the seventeenth century. They were at first deemed a protection against witches and evil spirits, and were nailed on doors of houses with the curve uppermost. It was the belief that no witch or evil spirit could enter a house thus guarded. The custom of nailing horseshoes to ships and other sailing craft is still in vogue in many English-speaking countries. To find a horseshoe with an odd number of nails attached to it is considered the forerunner of good luck, and the more nails the greater the good fortune that is likely to attend the finder.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

You Never Can Tell

By IMES MacDONALD

(Copyright, 1918, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

The roving eye of youth is ever eager for adventure. Romance lurks just around the next corner and the man or girl of dreams is ever a potential possibility, for in the eyes of youth no dream, no matter how improbable it may seem, is entirely impossible. "You never can tell" is the slogan of youth —"you never can tell."

"You never can tell," thought Summer Lane as she tripped lightly along toward her job at the library. "Something might happen today—you never can tell." And she hummed a snatch of song as she started on her regular routine. But her lunch hour came and nothing had happened. At five o'clock she started home and nothing had happened. She entered her little apartment and found Alice Martin, a pretty schoolteacher with whom she lived, already there—and still nothing had happened—and then the telephone rang and indifferently Summer leaned toward it from where she sat on the couch.

"Is this Miss Lane, Miss Summer Lane?" asked a man's strange but very nice voice.

"Yes," said Summer, "this is Summer Lane," and her eyes opened very wide.

"I am Lawrence Gardner, from Chicago, an old friend of Elsie Turner's who was a school friend of yours, I believe. She told me to be sure to look you up while I was in town and so I am doing it."

Summer swallowed three distinct but very rapid separate times before she could reply. "And now that you've 'phoned—are you coming up to see me?" she invited.

"I'd love to," he said genially, "but what about the theater or somewhere tonight. Is there any particular show you'd like to see? They're all now to me, you know."

"I've been wanting to go to 'The Eyes of Youth,'" said Summer uneasily.

"'The Eyes of Youth' it is then," he laughed, "and if I call about 7:30 will that be all right?"

"Splendid—and I'll be ready," sang Summer joyously. "and I'm just so glad you called, Mr. Gardner, you don't know how glad. It was terribly nice of Elsie to send you."

It happened to be Alice's night for doing the dishes, and when she came into their bedroom after her task was done she gasped in astonishment.

"My goodness, Summer! You're all dressed up like a queen. I never saw you look so ravishing and—so—so reckless, you bright-eyed thing! Who is this Gardner person, anyway?"

But Summer only laughed gayly and twirled about on her toes. Just then the bell rang and she danced toward the electric button to let the ringer in and then skipped to the door to admit Lawrence Gardner.

For a long moment adventure clasped the hand of romance, and each looked deep into the eyes of the other. Romance so shyly and radiantly lovely—and adventure so well groomed and stalwart, with smiling, quizzical eyes and genial, friendly manner.

And a few moments later they descended the stairs and were whirled away in a taxi, and when they had returned after the show he left her at the door regretfully.

"It has been a perfectly wonderful evening," said Summer, "and it was very dear of Elsie to tell you about me."

"Shall I see you again tomorrow?" he asked eagerly.

"You—you never can tell," she answered demurely and vanished within.

A short time later she related to Alice the events of the evening. "And he is so attentive and thoughtful and jolly in a quiet sort of way! I just had a be-au-tiful time," she chattered. Alice eyed Summer suspiciously. "Summer Lane, are you going to fall love with that Gardner person?" she demanded sternly.

With brilliant eyes and flushing cheeks Summer reached up to turn out the light, then turned and snuggled to her bed, and as she pulled the covers up to her chin she chuckled a little in the darkness there. "You never can tell, Alice, old dear—you never can tell."

A week passed—two weeks—and each day Lawrence Gardner either made it a point to see Summer Lane or to telephone her—usually he saw her. Three weeks passed—and a month—and still he lingered in New York! Until one morning at his hotel he received a night letter from his father that made him grin just a bit, but as usual that afternoon he happened to meet Summer at the library and strolled home with her.

"Let's have a nice little home party with Alice tonight," suggested Summer. And so they did. He helped set the table and ran out at the last minute to get ice cream for the dessert. And after the dishes were done he and Summer sat side by side on the couch while Gardner smoked his pipe in contented silence.

"Summer," he said, after a long interval, "I've got a confession to make." He reached over and drew the telephone book toward him, opening it at the "Lanes." She sat on one foot and leaned close to him watching curiously as his finger slid down the column of names. Finally he pointed out the name of a firm—"Lane, Summers & Griggs, importers." "You see," he explained, 'the day I called you up I had occasion to call up these people. The name just above theirs is "—and he pointed out her own—" 'Lane, Miss Summer, librarian.' Now," he went on, "that name of yours interested me so that I got curious to hear your voice, and when I had heard your voice I was determined to see you. Of course I didn't know any such person as Elsie Turner in Chicago, but I soon realized that by some strange coincidence you did—because you're always ringing her into the conversation and making it uncomfortable for me. I just—didn't want to go on any longer under false colors, so to speak, so I had to tell you."

Summer pulled the telephone book out of his hand and hugged it up to her breast, at the same time rolling him an accusing look out of the corner of her dancing eye. Then she hunched up her shoulders and laughed merrily.

"Silly," she giggled. "Don't you suppose I knew you didn't know me from Adam, nor any Elsie Turner person, either? Why, I never even heard of her myself!"

"What?" Lawrence Gardner's pipe fell out of his mouth and he sat up eagerly. "You were pretending, too?"

But Summer would not look at him and only nodded with downcast eyes. So Gardner drew from his pocket the telegram he had received from his father that morning and she read it with flushing cheeks.

"What in Sam Hill's keeping you so long in New York? You ought to have finished there ten days ago. I'm buried to my eyes in work here, so for heaven's sake marry the girl—and come home.

"Yours, DAD."

The telegram fluttered to the floor and Summer started to rise, but Gardner reached up and dragged her down beside him.

"Dad's a wise old boy," he said, with his cheek against hers; "will you marry me, Summer?"

And Summer snuggled a bit, as she murmured, "You never can tell, Larry, dear. Something like that's liable to happen most any day, now."

Sword-making an Legend.

The field marshal's sword which was recently presented to King George by Prince Yorihito is a specimen of one of the most curious arts in the world, and the number of processes which they undergo before they "pass the censor" is greater than the more prosaic Western swordsmith ever imagined.

Sword-making in Japan is a religious art, and every process has a religious ceremonial. The hut in which the work is done contains images of the god of the swordmaker and the chief goddess of the Shintos. Bits of paper and wisps of straw are also employed to drive away evil spirits. No woman may enter the place, for a woman would bring a demon in her train, and imperil the mission of the weapon.

Before the work begins prayer is offered; and various religious rites are observed ere the blade is said to be well and truly made. After the weapon is polished and sharpened it is offered to the sword god to be blessed, with offerings of saki, rice, or sweetmeats; afterwards prayer-scrolls are read—and the sword is finished. FOR LITTLE FEET

YOU can get the same sturdy wear—the same guaranteed quality — for the Children, that you have found so satisfactory in your own rubbers.

"The best rubbers that can be made" is the standard of the Dominion Rubber System. And this applies to ALL rubbers bearing the Trademarks of the Dominion Rubber System.

Children's rubbers are made with the same care, of the same high-grade materials that give such easy comfort, such long wear, in the rubbers for men and women.

This superior quality is necessary in Children's rubbers because they need the extra protection which good rubbers give on wet days; and they need the extra quality to withstand the rougher usage which most children give to all footwear.

Ask for these better rubbers by name:

The Serbians.

Ethnologically the Serbians are Slavs, while linguistically they are related to the Croats. History's earliest glimpse of them showed them as an agricultural people living in Galicia. In the 6th century they moved southward to the Black Sea, and later into the northwestern corner of the Balkan Peninsula. It was not until 1804, however, that modern Serbia had its inception.

Orientals seem to be immune to the fierce heat of the staterooms in ocean steamers, and can endure for a great length of time temperatures that would speedily prostrate white men.

Needed His Secretary.

Uncle Moses Lightfoot approached a clerk in the drug store and inquired: "Got any 3-cent stamps?" "No," the clerk replied, "we're all out of threes." "Dat's too bad," said Uncle Moses, "'cause dis letter ought to go out to-night." "We have plenty of twos." "But dis letter goes out de town." "And we have plenty of ones." "But one won't take it." "Couldn't you put on a two and a one?" "Huh?" "Or three ones?" At the old man ambled toward the door he scratched his head and muttered: "Maybe I could, maybe I couldn't, but I ain't got no time to be foolin' round tryin' to add up."

You Can't Brush Or Wash Out Dandruff

The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night, when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

Do this to-night and by morning most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop at once, and your hair will be soft, lustrous, glossy, silky, and seem to look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and never fails to do the work.

GREAT ZUYDER ZEE DAM

LITTLE NATION WILL ADD TO ITS AREA.

Dyke Is to Cost $80,000,000, and It Will Require Thirty-three Years to Build, But 820 Square Miles of Inundated Land Are to Be Reclaimed by Scheme.

DAM the Zuyder Zee! So say the deliberate Dutch. In fact, both Queen Wilhelmina and the States General are of the same mind. On June 14 last, the royal signature was affixed to the bill that has been under advisement by the Parliament of the Netherlands for five years and more. In fact, the broad idea of draining the Zuyder Zee has been a subject of discussion for quite half a century, and the best of Dutch engineering talent has given the matter the closest study since 1886.

As might be expected, the Hollanders have preferred to put their hard-won guldens in trade and other enterprises from which they could be certain of prompt returns. Besides, the sluggish native mind accepted the intrusive sea as a more or less necessary evil, and the demand for an increase of arable acres was not so imperatively insistent as it has become of late. The Netherlands could draw upon neighboring countries and even from overseas for many of its foodstuffs, and the desirability of self-sufficiency in the matter of producing subsistence was not urgent. The Government and the people generally have had a rude awakening to Holland's agricultural deficiencies in the course of the last four years; hence the law which empowers the authorities to isolate the Zuyder Zee from the North Sea, and to bare to the light of day a very large part of the watery area which will then be impounded.

The genius who is responsible for the great project as it now stands is C. Lely, a distinguished hydraulic engineer and at one time Minister of Public Works and Waterways of the Netherlands. One of the most difficult aspects of the whole problem has been that of taking care of the several rivers that now find outlet into the Zuyder Zee—the mere question of shutting out the North Sea was, despite the magnitude of the task, really of secondary importance, because the discharging rivers would inevitably add to the volume of the waters of the enclosed Zuyder Zee and inundate a still wider area of the contiguous lands. It was in just this crucial phase of the scheme that Lely showed his professional cunning and imagination.

He has not proposed to strangle the rivers and thus to shut out all communication with the open sea, but he has planned to control their discharge by turning their waters into superior highways for traffic to and from Amsterdam, Kampen, Staveren, and other internal and prosperous ports, taking advantage of the deepest routes as they now exist in the Zuyder Zee and restricting the land to be reclaimed to the shallowed parts of the interior sea.

As the Netherlands is to-day, the country has a total area of 2,648 square miles. The project, which will be taken in hand at once, will involve the reclamation of 820 square miles of the present bed of the Zuyder Zee, and the turning of the greater part of this land into fertile fields. In brief, the purpose is to add to the Netherlands a new-born province large enough to provide 4,800 farms, each of 160 acres, and to create districts that will sustain an industrious populace of a quarter of a million persons. To make this possible, the Dutch will spend $89,244,000, and to lessen this drain upon domestic resources the work will be spread over a total period of thirty-three years.

The Hollanders have battled with the sea and flood for centuries, and by reason of this long experience they have become experts in the building of dykes and the holding of water at bay. What they have been able to achieve with traditionally instable sand has been little short of marvellous, and from them De Lesseps conceived the practicability of the Suez Canal and was inspired to essay the union of the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans via a cut across the Isthmus of Panama. Heretofore, the Dutch have held back from taking actual steps toward draining the Zuyder Zee because of the immense outlay that would be involved; but the war has taught them that they must produce more food within their own boundaries, and more food means more farms. Just how great is the demand for self-subsistence is emphasized by the fact that the Netherlands will have to spend $20,000,000 more to carry out the project now than would have been required a few years back.

Without digging into hydrographic history, it is enough to know that the Zuyder Zee is an erosive offspring of the North Sea; and the area of this inland body of water which is to be barricaded off, and in a large measure drained, came into being as recently as the early part of the fifteenth century. The Zuyder Zee never would have been created were not the flooded area lower than the outlying sea. The battering billows of the North Sea broke through nature's bulwark at a point inside of the Frisian Islands, and the briny waves swept unchecked into the depressed region.

As far back as 1859, one Van Diggelen boldly schemed to shut out the ocean by diking the passages between the Frisian Islands—Texel, Vlieland, Terschelling, and Ameland. That husky Hollander was not content to halt at half measures; and in his plan to oust the North Sea he overlooked the disposal of the waters pouring into the Zuyder Zee from rivers within the national boundary. He made no provision to take care of their voluminous ebb. His plan, in short, invited disaster from an internal cause, and his compatriots were alive to the danger.

GREAT BRITAIN. After March 1st of this year, practically all manufactured goods from other countries will be barred from the United Kingdom, except those imported under special licenses, which at present are difficult to obtain. This regulation amounts to almost total prohibition of imports of manufactured goods, except those purchased directly by the Government of the United Kingdom. The object of this prohibition as announced by the British Government is:

To have British goods manufactured in British factories, and thus give employment to the rapidly demobilizing British Army and the war workers.

FRANCE The tradesmen of France, generally speaking, are not permitted to buy manufactured goods from other countries except under special licenses. France is determined to keep her own factories busy and thus furnish employment for French soldiers and war workers.

The industrial systems of Britain and France are disorganized by the transition from war to peace. Consequently, they are being given the greatest measure of protection ever known in history. They are erecting encircling walls to shut out goods manufactured by other countries.

CANADA During the war, Canada scrapped many peace industries for war industries. The reverse is now being carried out. Canada must provide positions for over 200,000 soldiers who are not yet demobilized.
When the armistice was signed, there were about 700,000 people employed in Canadian manufacturing establishments. This number included a considerable percentage of the 300,000 soldiers who were discharged during the course of the war, and also the makers of munitions and war material. Canada must use her utmost efforts to retain these in employment or to find them new employment.

Canadian industry during readjustment is not safeguarded by an almost impassable wall similar to those now being erected by Britain and France. Exclusive of the special war tariff, levied generally on imports, both dutiable and free, by the Government for the purpose of raising war revenue, the Canadian Customs tariff in the fiscal year 1918 imposed an average rate of only twenty-one and two-fifths (21.2-5) per cent. on dutiable goods coming into Canada.

Yet, at this critical time, insistent demands are heard from certain sections of Canada that sweeping tariff reductions must be made immediately without any preliminary study of the probable result on commercial and financial conditions. If these demands are met other countries will be encouraged to dump their surplus manufactured goods into Canada and increase unemployment here.

Shall we tear down even what safeguards we possess, at the very time that older and stronger countries are so greatly increasing theirs?

A GREAT LIFE SAVER

Invention That Helped Defeat Hun Murder Policy.

No invention did more to defeat the Hun policy of unrestricted sea murder than that of Lieut. C. D. Burney, of the Royal Navy. It was he who hit upon an idea which made the German mines which were scattered broadcast useless, and thus saved the lives of hundreds of sailors and prevented the loss of a large number of warships.

Simplicity itself, the divice—which is a secret official patent, and is known in the service as the "P.V." or "paravane"— consists of a water-plane shaped like a torpedo, having a pair of large flat fins projecting on either side of its body. The tail is fitted with rudders to keep the torpedo at any set depth while it is in operation.

It is towed overside by a wire rope which runs from the ship's bows outward. This wire rope is intended to pick up the mooring ropes of mines and slide them along till they reach the nose of the paravane, where a sharp saw is fixed inside a V-shaped slot.

The saw cuts through the mooring rope and allows the mine to float free, when it can be either avoided or destroyed, as may be desired.

For his wonderful invention, Lieut. Burney has been paid the sum of £30,000 and decorated with various honors.

Eyelet work, embroidery, self-coloured, is one of the most refined forms of ornamentation on cloth frocks.

Revolutionary Changes In International Naval Laws Are Contemplated

A Number of Principal Points Favoured by the Peace Delegates —Each Nation Will Be Held Responsible.

MAKE WAR IMPOSSIBLE

(By Fred S. Ferguson, Copyright 1919, by the United Press.)

PARIS, Feb. 25.—Revolutionary changes in international naval laws which, fitting in with rules of the League of Nations, would make war eventually impossible, are now under discussion. The regulations under which munitions are shipped from neutrals to warring countries would be completely overturned. Under their operation, "freedom of the seas" would not be theoretical but real.

The United Press is able to state to-day that the principal points favoured by the peace delegates, regarding munitions shipments in the future are:

1—Each nation shall be held responsible for any unneutral act by its citizens.

2—All contraband must be established at the outbreak of a war, and lists cannot be changed during the period of hostilities.

3—As carrying contraband naturally is forbidden, the flag of a non-warring nation flying over a ship would be a guarantee that she was not carrying munitions or other prohibited materials.

4—If a ship arouse suspicion and is stopped within a restricted area, search shall be limited to investigation of her papers to determine her nationality.

5—If a ship of a non-warring power is discovered carrying contraband, that nation shall be subject to punishment by the League of Nations, economically or otherwise, as the executive council recommends.

Distinct Violation.

It is obvious that under such rules no nation will be able to carry on a war beyond the limit of her own production of munitions. The practice of buying munitions from a non-warring power, by payment of enormous prices, and obtaining shipment through payment of high freight rates with shippers taking the risk—as heretofore done—would be eliminated by point one, as carrying contraband would be a distinct violation of the law and the nation from which a ship was sailing would ascertain that she carried no contraband as a measure of self-protection. There would be no neutral power in the strict sense, after establishment of the League of Nations, but, assuming that despite the rigidness of the League laws some powers would start to engage in a war, these new regulations would act as a further deterrent. If a belligerent violated the rules governing its movements at sea, it would bring upon it the judgment of the League, while violation by a non-belligerent would render the latter an accomplice in war-making.

As the discussion progresses the idea that is constantly brought to the forefront is not to frame rules under which war can be humanely conducted, but to render war impossible.

Woodrow Back In Washington

Has Had a Strenuous Time While Away

(By Robt. J. Bender, United Press.)

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25.—President Wilson returned to Washington early to-day, completing one of the most unique trips in history. Since his departure from home last December the President has travelled over 12,000 miles, has been made a citizen of approximately 1,600 cities, towns and hamlets in Europe, has been housed in the Royal Palaces of two Kings and one Prince, has ridden on the Royal trains of two ruling families, delivered nearly two-score speeches and short addresses, and received six college and university honorary degrees.

SPANISH CABINET RESIGNS.

(Special to The Examiner.)

MADRID, Feb. 24.— (Delayed.) — The Spanish Cabinet has resigned, it was announced to-day.

The Spanish Ministry was formed last November by the Marquis De Alhucemas.

FRANK JENNE says:

In the presentation of the very first of the seasonable models developed in the Send-ready Clothes Shops, Montreal, I may add my acknowledgment of their customary quality and their refreshing style. The new Spring suits are all a man could desire or require—dependable, correct and distinct in style. There is one for you. "Come to me."

LUDENDORFF HAD TO LEAVE SWEDEN

(United Press.)

LONDON, Feb. 25. — General Ludendorff, former quartermaster-general of the German armies, left Sweden for Germany on Sunday night, according to advices received here to-day. The Swedish Foreign Office is said to have refused his request for extension of his permit to stay in that country.

Demobilization In Peterboro'

2nd Battalion May Come to Peterboro'—The Deputation to Ottawa

Demobilization of the 2nd Battalion in Peterborough will probably be one of the results of the visit to Ottawa of the civic delegation which waited upon the Ministers in connection with the giving of contracts for the Canadian General Electric Works.

Captain Hubert Eastwood thought that the Battalion would like to be demobilized in the city, and the Mayor sent a letter to Colonel McLaughlin, Commanding Officer of the 2nd Battalion, asking if it could come here for that purpose. He replied that headquarters must be consulted. Consequently Mayor Duncan and Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., while in Ottawa, saw Col. Sharples, officer in charge of demobilization at headquarters, and made the request on behalf of the citizens to have the battalion demobilized here. Col. Sharples said that they would try to do so, or if not entirely, they would endeavour to a certain extent, to comply with the request.

No Skating at Brock St. Until Weather Changes

Cold Weather is Predicted and There May Be a Lot of Skating Yet

The continued mild weather has made it impossible to get ice for skating at the rink. There has not been any frost in the rink since Friday night. However it is 30 and 40 degrees below zero at points out West, and it is expected will reach East to-morrow, only, it is hoped in not so strenuous a form. It will be sufficient, however, to make ice and as soon as there is skating it will be announced.

Government Troops Pursue Spartacans

In Parts of Bavaria the Extremists Take Over Newspapers and Public Buildings — Fighting in Forests Near Dusseldorf.

(United Press Service.)

BERLIN, Feb. 25.—With the restoration of order in Munich, under the administration of the newly formed Soviet government, the Bourgeoisie press was reported to-day to have been prohibited from publishing for teh days.

Martial law has been proclaimed in Augburg, following the calling of a general strike there. The Spartacans seized the newspaper offices and public buildings. Several street demonstrations occurred.

In the Mannheim coal districts the Spartacans were reported to be retreating upon Dusseldorf and Muelheim, fighting rearguard actions in the forests with government troops as they fall back.

Premier Paderewski Asked to Remain at Head of the Government in Poland

TEST OF STRENGTH

(United Press.)

WARSAW, Feb. 25. — The president of the Polish Diet announced to-day that Premier Paderewski offered his resignation yesterday but that General Pilsudski had begged him to remain in office.

Paderewski and Pilsudski were rivals for the control of the Polish government. A compromise was finally effected with the former as Premier and the latter as Military Chief. Pilsudski recently resigned, but was given a vote of confidence by the Diet. It is accepted that Paderewski resignation was a similar formality—to compel public recognition of hip appointment.

(Special to Examiner.)

TRIESTE, Feb 25. — The Germans in Carinthia have violated the armistice concluded under the auspices of the American mission, according to a despatch received from Laibach to-day. They are said to have sent troops against the Slavs and though supplied with heavy guns were defeated, at Arndors and Neu-Dowien.

THE IRISH POLICY

Housing Situation in Ireland is Appalling—Situation Will Be Relieved

THE REPRESENTATION

(United Press Service.)

DUBLIN, Feb. 25.—Ireland will benefit equally with Great Britain in the reconstruction work planned by the Government, Sir James MacPherson, Chief Secretary for Ireland, declared in outlining the Government's Irish policy before the conference of Irish municipalities here.

A grant of 250,000 pounds ($1,250,000) has already been made to meet the immediate needs of demobilized men and others needing assistance, said MacPherson.

Housing Situation.

"Any scheme for reconstruction advanced in Great Britain is applicable to Ireland. The housing situation in Ireland is appalling. The Government will continue its housing programme including subsidies for payment of the difference between 'economic rent' and the rent which tenants are able to pay. We are considering the formation of the ministry of health.

"Ireland will participate in the benefits of the ministry of health, medical inspection in the schools, reclaimation of forestation and light and transit projects which are contemplated. The salaries of school teachers will be taken up. The principle of proportionate representation will be applied to local elections."

Wants Hearing.

PARIS, Feb. 25.—Sean O'Kelly, representing the provisional Irish government here, has written to Premier Clemenceau requesting that a date be fixed for the Peace Conference to receive Prof. Edward De Valera, Count Plunkett and Arthur Griffith, whom the Irish Assembly designated to present Irish claims. It is understood that Ireland will demand recognition of her independence, representation in the Peace Conference, and membership in the League of Nations.

The despatch would indicate that De Valera is in a position to appear before the conference. His whereabouts since he escaped from an English prison has been a mystery.

Death of Richard Henry Deyell

The following is from the Alameda (Sask.) Dispatch:

It is with profound regret we record the death of Richard Henry Deyell, at his residence in Flobisher, which took place on Friday last, 17th inst., at the age of 45 years and 11 months. The deceased gentleman was one of the pioneers of this district, having come here from Ontario 23 years ago. It was the writer's good fortune to have known Harry Deyell well, and we only knew him to esteem him more highly as the years went by. The deceased had been in failing health for the past two years. He leaves to mourn his loss his beloved wife and one darling little boy, his father and mother, who reside in Peterboro, Ont., his sister, Mrs. F. Deyell, and his brother, Mr. Rollie Deyell, who are esteemed residents of this district; also another sister, Mrs. B. MacWhinney, of Alameda, Saskatchewan. Harry was a devoted husband and a kind and indulgent father; to his sister, a tender brother, and to his friends, which were numerous, the soul of friendship. But the greatest of all he was a man. He believed in the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man. He believed that the man who scatters flowers in the pathway of his fellowman, who lets into the dark places of life the sunshine of human happiness, is following in the footsteps of His Master.

The funeral service was held on Sunday in the Union Church; the sacred edifice was completely filled which testified to the respect in which the deceased was held in the community. The choir rendered special music with much feeling; the organ played by Miss Riddell, was accompanied by the violin played by Mr. S. Giem. Rev. F. McLennan delivered an inspiring and appropriate address. The casket was covered with a beautiful cross of flowers very kindly presented by the Union Church. The remains were placed in the vault of Frobisher Cemetery, in the presence of a huge crowd of relatives and friends. The deepest sympathy of the entire community is extended to the bereaved widow and little son, and to the other relation s. The Dispatch desires to join in these condolences.

Quite a large representation from Alameda were in town on Sunday to attend the funeral of the late Richard Henry Deyell, including the following: Messrs. John Deyell, R. Deyell, T. E. and I. O. Truscott, I. P. Gordon, A. D. Truscott, E. B. Truscott, W. W. Emmerson, G. A. Emmerson, James Bean, R. W. Wood, J. W. McNeil, Fred Strong and L. Larmer.

Representatives of The "Triple Alliance" Hold A Meeting Re Programme

Will Decide Whether a General Strike Shall Be Called—Parliament Discusses Situation.

SHORTER HOURS

(United Press.)

LONDON, Feb. 25. — Representatives of the "Triple Alliance"—miners, railwaymen and transport workers—met to-day to map out a common programme regarding the demands to be made upon the government, and to decide whether a general strike shall be called.

The miners did not yield an inch in last night's parliament session, replying to Premier Lloyd George's offer of compromise, "acceed to our demands to avoid a strike." The bill introduced by the premier to create a special commission to investigate the minng situation was advanced to its second reading. The miners' amendment providing that the proposed commission should report March 12th instead of March 31st, was defeated by 257 to 43.

Final Returns.

William Addison, the labour leader in the House of Commons, announced that the final returns of the recent vote on a miners' strike were 811,998 for and 104,997 against. He said he did not believe the government had done all that it could to meet the miners' demands.

"Confronted with the prospects of civil strife we should do all in our power to avert it,' said Lloyd George, in introducing the bill. "I had hoped the bill would be passed through all its stages to-day."

"To grant the miners' demands without inquiry might make hundreds of thousands jobless, while crippling the export of coal. The miners were placed first in demobilization and the terms offered them were the most generous of any country in Europe."

Lloyd George promised re-organization of mining, housing, wages and hours, but said the reduction of two working hours a day, as demanded would have a serious effect.

The Spartacans On Polling Day

Burn Ballot Boxes in Dusseldorff — Majority Socialists Win by a Large Majority.

(Special to The Examiner.)

COPENHAGEN, Feb. 25.— Armed with rifles and hand grenades, Spartacans burned several polling booths during the municipal elections in Dusseldorff and threw the ballot boxes and electric lights into the Rhine, according to despatches received here to-day. Sharp fighting resulted and there were some casualties. The Majority Socialists won by a large margin in the Berlin elections. The results there were reported as follows: (Majority Socialists 232,865, Minority Socialists 181,204, Democrats 86,981, German Nationalists, 67,109.

The Knocker And The Booster

A reader sends in the following, with a request for its publication:

When the Creator had made all the good things, there was still some dirty work to do, so He made the beasts and reptiles and poisonous insects, and when He had finished, He had some scraps that were too bad to put into the rattlesnake, the hyena, the scorpion and the skunk, so He put all these together, covered it with suspicion, wrapped it with jealousy, marked it with a yellow streak and called it a knocker.

This product was so fearful to contemplate that He had to make something to counteract it, so He took a sunbeam and put it in the heart of a child, the brain of a man, wrapped these in civic pride, covered it with brotherly love, gave it a mask of velvet and a grasp of steel and called it a Booster, made him a lover of fields and flowers and manly sports, a believer in equality and justice, and ever since these two were, mortal man has had the privilege of choosing his associates.

THE WEATHER

There is some likelihood that we may yet experience some real winter weather this season. At present a decidedly cold wave is overspreading the Northwest, and should it move eastward, as it will most likely do, we may have some cold weather yet before the spring sets in. Temperatures of 25 to 40 below zero were common yesterday and last night west of Duluth.—W. P.

GERMANY MAY BE DIVIDED UP

(United Press.)

BERNE, Feb. 25.— The setting up of Soviet governments in Bavaria will, it is feared, result in the division of Germany, it was stated in a despatch from Vienna to-day.

As a result the Austrian desire for a union with Germany is said to be cooling.

Work For The Local Plants

Object of Civic Deputation to Ottawa—Received the Usual Promise

Mayor Duncan, Mr. S. R. Armstrong, City Clerk; A. J. Bolwell and W. Stevens of the Trades and Labour Council; Mr. McArthur and Mr. Kearns of the Machinists' Union; Captain Morrison and S. Whatley of the Great War Veterans' Association; B. D. Hall and Ald. James Hamilton of the Board of Trade, and Mr. E. G. Patterson, the deputation who waited upon Sir Thomas White, acting Premier; Hon. A. R. McLean, acting Minister of Marine, and Mr. A. Johnston, Deputy Minister of Marine, were given an encouraging reception yesterday at Ottawa.

Presented Conditions.

Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P.; Mayor Duncan, Mr. Armstrong, Mr. Whatley, and others in short addresses laid before the Ministers the labour conditions in the city and the number of men out of work, and asked that the Government divide the work that had to be done in future so that the Canadian General Electric could get some in order to keep men employed. Special reference was made to the construction of marine engines for steamers to be built by the Government.

The Ministers said that they were impressed with the facts, and with the fair way in which they were presented to the Government, and promised to comply with the request if at all possible. No time for a definite answer was named.

Will Purchase New Equipment

Meeting of the Public Utilities Commission

At a meeting of the Peterboro Utilities Commission held last night it was decided that the recommendation of Mr. H. O. Fisk, Manager of the Commission, on the purchase of a panel and instruments for use in checking power supplied by the Hydro Electric Commission be adopted and the manager was authorized to purchase the equipment immediately. He was also authorized to purchase 600 metres from the Hydro Electric Commission.

Water Rates

A schedule for the charges for water used in the Royal Theatre Building was set as follows: Theatre $25; billiard room $10; store $4.00 per annum. The charges for the R. Neill Co. Ltd., were set at $50 per annum.

The city council requested that an electric light be placed at the east end of the Locks bridge, at the corner of Otonabee street to the River Road, two lights on Wolfe street between Park street and Monaghan Road, one at the corner of Rutherford avenue, and one 100 yards east of the Monaghan Road. This was referred to the manager.

Victor Wilson and other residents of North Monaghan sent in a petition asking for an extension of the street lighting system on King George street. This was referred to the manager to report.

Railwaymen Demand Higher Wages—Special Meeting of Cabinet Called.

(Special to The Examiner.)

ROME, Feb. 25. — The Executive committee of railwaymen, comprising representatives of every important transportation centre, passed a resolution to-day demanding the immediate acceptance by the government of a new scale of wages. The delegates announced they would remain in session until a reply is received from Premier Orlando.

The Premier called a Cabinet to examine the workers demands.

HUN WANTS A PLACE

Claims Admission to the League of Nations--Foreign Minister Expresses Opinion of Covenant

NOT GOOD ENOUGH

(United Press.)

WEIMAR, Feb. 25.—Germany must depend upon the League of Nations for future peace, at home and abroad, and urges that the League should have a more democratic basis. Foreign Minister Brockdorff Rantzau declared in an interview here to-day. He said Germany is already qualified for membership because she now has the most democratic Government in the world.

"President Wilson's preamble to the League of Nations' constitution was not too optimistic," said the Foreign Minister. "His faith in the moral force of public opinion is justified. However, the League should have a more democratic basis.

Not Good Enough.

"Thus far it is little more than a defensive alliance. It may be good enough for the Allies, but it is not good enough for Germany, which is now obliged to depend upon the League for future peace at home and abroad. Germany is qualified for membership in the league, because she is the most democratic nation in the world.

"We will make our delegates to the peace conference as representative as possible.

"The League provision for publication of treaties is a long step forward.

Plotted To Kill President Wilson

Department of Justice Substantiated the Story—Plotters are being held for Advisor Brief, Deportation Department.

(United Press.)

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Feb. 25. — Indications to show that a plot was being hatched to assassinate President Wilson, has been gathered in this city.

Todd Daniels, Division Superintendent of the Department of Justice Bureau of Investigation, declared today that despite the denials of the Secret Service authorities, that such a plot had been unearthed.

"Whether evidence can be secured to substantiate this information I am not prepared to say," he said.

Five of the eleven men arrested in this city were held pending advice from the Deportation authorities.

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurmounted."

TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 25TH, 1919.

PLANS OF THE BRIDGE.

Mr. W. H. Pretty, whose keen interest in all municipal affairs is well known, makes a suggestion in regard to the Hunter street bridge problem that seems worthy of consideration by the civic authorities. Agreeing with the Examiner that the majority of Peterborough's citizens have only a hazy idea of the nature and importance of the work that is at present under the consideration of the Council, Mr. Pretty proposes that a set of the plans and specifications of the new bridge should be placed in the Public Library, in charge of Mr. Dela Fosse, and at the disposal of citizens who wish to acquaint themselves with the details of the structure. In this way many citizens would be able to get a much more comprehensive idea of the scheme than they possess at present.

The point is that if it is necessary to ask the ratepayers to vote a further sum for the erection of the bridge, nothing that will add to the popular knowledge of or interest in the structure should be neglected.

AN IMPORTANT VISIT.

The deputation from Peterborough which waited upon Sir Thomas White and other members of the Government at Ottawa yesterday, bring back an encouraging report as to the result of their visit. The citizens generally will share in the hope that their optimism will be vindicated by results in the near future. If the Canadian General Electric Company can secure large contracts for the manufacture of munitions, which was the primary object of the deputation's visit, the result will be beneficial not only to the C.G.E. and its employees, but to the whole city. Orders that will set the Canadian General plant running [illegible] near normal capacity [illegible] an impetus will be given [illegible] conditions, while the [illegible] ation will be con- [illegible] of anyone [illegible] in mind that [illegible] arranged, and if the cordial reception that was given Peterborough's representatives is followed by definite action the whole community will feel the effects.

THE IRON SECONDS.

It will be welcome news to the people of Peterborough that this city may be chosen as the demobilization point for the 2nd Canadian Battalion when the famous unit comes home from overseas. The city authorities have already pressed the claims of Peterborough for consideration in this respect and will leave no stone unturned in their effort to see that the battalion is brought here for dispersal. Peterborough has a claim on the 2nd Battalion. In the original unit there were more soldiers from Peterborough than form any other point in the 3rd military district and all through the war fresh drafts of men from this city have reinforced the Iron Seconds. Ottawa, Kingston and Peterborough were the three leading recruiting points in the district. The Princess Patricias will be demobilized at Ottawa, as will several other units, while Kingston has been chosen as the dispersal point for the 21st Battalion and probably other corps as well. Peterborough is entitled to at least one battalion, and the 2nd is the unit to which this city has every claim, although in strict justice the 33rd Battery should be demobilized here as well, instead of in Toronto, as Peterborough furnished over one hundred men for this well-known artillery unit.

DAYLIGHT SAVING.

Capt. J. H. Burnham, M.P., announces that he proposes to vote against the daylight savings measure when it comes before the House, if he is convinced that it is only in the interest of the pleasure seekers and is a detriment to the farmers. The Examiner is confident that the vast majority of the residents of Peterborough approve of the plan and wish to see it put into force again this year; it is equally confident that the inconvenience suffered by the farmers was not nearly so grievous as some of the petitions that are being circulated would make it appear. However, the fact remains that there is very active opposition to the daylight savings measure from some quarters, and all those citizens who wish to see the re-enactment of the bill during the summer months should lose no time in making their sentiments known. It may be possible that there are other members of Parliament in a similar position to Captain Burnham. The success of the United Farmers in the Ontario by-elections has given the politicians something to worry about, and like the local Federal member, other members of the House may be trying to decide which course might prove the most popular. The countless friends of the daylight savings system should be able to convince these wavering representatives that the majority of Canadians are anxious to see the system re-introduced this year.

THE VETERANS' BUILDING

The Great War Veterans Association of Peterboro are to be congratulated upon the business-like way in which they have dealt with the matter of securing new head-quarters. Although the grant from the Council was made only a short time ago, the Veterans have already purchased a property—the old Murray Baptist church building, the contract for the renovations that will be made to the structure have been let, and work was commenced to-day. In addition to making it possible for the Veterans to move into their new building much earlier than was anticipated, the quick action of the committee in charge has provided some needed employment for returned soldiers who will be used as far as possible in the construction work. The contractor is Mr. H. Graham, himself a veteran of the Great War.

The plans that have been adopted by the Veterans provide for a most comfortable and well-appointed head-quarters. The church proper furnishes them with a large assembly hall, while in the basement will be recreation rooms, offices, card rooms, etc., while at the rear of the Assembly Hall, there will be accomodation for the Ladies Auxiliary. It is planned to have dormitories upstairs, a second floor to be added to the building, and altogether the new headquarters promise to be worthy of Peterboro's returned soldiers and a credit to the city generally. The development of the Association is shown by the comparison between the plans for the new building and the little room in the rear of the Victoria Hall where the Charter members of the Association met two years ago.

DAYLIGHT SAVING

Buffalo News.

But to ask the city dwellers to give up that hour. No; no and no again. That hour was the best investment of time they ever made. It meant recreation in the sunlight. It meant time for a garden. It meant improved health. Yes, and a thousand other things worth while.

BRITAIN'S GRAND FLEET DISPERSED

From overseas comes the news tha Britain's Grand Fleet is no more. That huge body of ships which received the surrender of the German high seas fleet without the firing of a single shot are now going to be scattered over the seven seas, and their wonderful commander-in-chief, Sir David Beatty, is about to set out on a world tour in the old battle cruiser, H.M.N.Z.S., New Zealand.

The American ships were the first to go. They did their work without ever having been called upon to prove their worth in a naval engagement. In design they were a wonderful contrast to the British ships, and they were made conspicuous by their huge lattice-work masts. Splendid ships they were, and built for business, to the smallest detail. In speed and armament they were the equals of the British flagship, the Queen Elizabeth, and along with her sister ships would have tackled the latest and fastest ships of the Huns had they been fortunate enough to have been engaged in battle. But battle was denied them, and they have returned home, led by their flagship, to the friendly waters of New York harbor.

Fame and glory are short-lived and the news despatches from the old country say that the Fourth Battle Squadron is doomed. Rumor has it that the ships of this squadron will soon be in the hands of the ship-breakers, who have no sentiment in such matters. Yet, what a shame it seems that ships like the Orion and the Thunderer should be sold for scrap iron. Still, this is a commercial world, and it is sense and not sentiment that pays. To balance this there comes the news that the Vindictive, which was sunk by the heroic sailors in Zeebeugge channel, is to be salved and saved for the Empire as a monument of the undying traditions of H.M. Navy, and of the gallant sailors who have served their country at the sacrifice of their lives. Even as the old Victory has been preserved as a reminder of Trafalgar, and all that victory has meant to the British Empire, so will be the Vindictive. The First Cruiser Squadron is leaving home waters, and its ships will soon be seen very far from the shores of Britain. The Lion's squadron is now in home ports, but it is soon to go, abroad to other waters.

The New Zealand is being prepared to take Admiral Beatty to the overseas dominions. This ship built by the New Zealand Government, took part in the battle of the war in the waters near Jutland, and bears its battle scars gracefully. She is now old, so rapid has been the development of modern battleships, but the admiral could find no better ship in which to visit the colonies.

The waters of the North Sea have lost the mine-layers and mine-sweepers. These hybrid craft have departed for other spheres of operation, and were cheered on their way by the crews of the Grand Fleet. And the other squadrons are also going.

The great British Grand Fleet is no more. The largest fleet in the world's history has ceased to exist as one unit. But its work has been done, and well done, and the laurels it won will be ever green. The sterling heroism of its sailors, the brilliant tactics of its commanders, and its splendid record in action during the war will never be forgotten, and the future generations will ever be told how Britain's Grand Fleet kept the Empire safe in its hour of greatest peril.—Kingston Whig.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The Government majority in St. Catharines is officially reported as 170. Quite a shrinkage from the 1,528 which Dr. Jessop obtained in the last by-election.

Although a number of returned soldiers were applicants for the position of Sheriff in the County of Grey they were not successful in receiving this Government appointment.

The weather has turned bitterly cold in the West. This fact is mentioned merely as a reminder that there may be still a chance to use some of that coal that was so hard to get last autumn.

A German romancer has been telling of the suffering of German prisoners of war in Canada. Somebody ought to send him a photograph of that corpulent gang which used to inhabit Fort Henry, Kingston.

POLICEMAN IS INDICTED IN BRONX ROBBERY CASE

NEW YORK, Feb. 24. — The Bronx County Grand Jury indicted Policeman John Morris, of the Alexander avenue station, on charges of robbery, grand larceny and assault. Morris was arrested on the afternoon of January 17 after he was alleged to have held up at the point of a pistol Louis Rousseau, clerk in a grocery store at No. 707 Melrose avenue.

After $20 had been taken from the clerk Morris is accused of having endeavoured to escape, but was caught by two detectives several blocks from the scene of the robbery. The policeman came to this country from Ireland fourteen years ago, and for seven years has been a member of the police force.

New Honour Flag For Lakefield

Will Replace One Destroyed in the Recent Fire

LAKEFIELD, Feb. 25.—Mr. Thompson Braden has received from the Victory Loan committee an honour flag with two crowns to replace the one burned in the town hall fire.

Obituary.

The death occurred on Sunday afternoon of Grace Caroline Hampton, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Hampton, aged 21 years. Death was due to pneumonia, which developed a few days ago in a most severe form. Four sisters and five brothers survive, besides her sorrowing parents. The deceased was an active and energetic worker in St. John's church, being a teacher in the Sunday school and the dorcas secretary of the Girls' Auxiliary. Always cheerful and willing she will be very much missed and the family have the sympathy of the community.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Blewett and son, Harry, of Peterborough, spent Sunday with friends in the village.

Mr. John Bickell of Peterborough, is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. E. Bickell for the week end.

Miss Marjorie Laing returned on Saturday from a visit with friends in Montreal.

Mr. E. Tighe was in Peterborough on Saturday.

Mr. Edwin Rowe, of Peterborough, was in the village last week.

Mr. and Mrs. [illegible] went to Norwood on Saturday to attend the funeral of their cousin, Mrs. Alex. Kemp.

Miss Rose Kidd was in Peterborough on Saturday.

Miss Mabel Gray of Peterborough, is visiting her parents in the village.

Mr. Albert Rowe returned to Peterborough on Saturday.

Miss Pearl Kidd, of Peterborough, who has been visiting friends in the village, returned home on Saturday.

Several of the young people of the village attended the dance given by the G.W.V.A. at the "Empress" on Friday night.

Mr. D. W. Edwards of Toronto, who has been visiting friends in the village, returned home on Saturday.

Messrs. J. Walter Greene and Harry Boal, of Peterborough, passed through the village on Saturday en route to visit their cottages at Stoney Lake.

Mrs. Erskine spent Saturday in Peterborough.

Voice of The People

To the Editor:—

Sir: In connection with the plea of The Examiner for better train service, a citizen was looking over some old fyles of the local papers last evening. It is a fact that over forty years ago, this town was, in some respects, at least, better served than it is to-day. In 1875-80, there were in summer time five trains daily to and from Port Hope, and in winter three trains. We have now to be content with two trains. Forty years ago the Toronto papers arrived here, via Port Hope, at 11:45 a.m. In 1919 they reach here at 12.28 p.m.

Would it not be possible for the Board of Trade to persuade the G. T. R. to have a train leave Port Hope about 9:30 a.m., on the arrival of the mail train from Toronto there?

DRUG AND CHEMICAL REDUCTIONS.

Druggists are buying in small lots only to meet immediate requirements. Drug and chemical markets will say to-day: Manufacturers of mercurials have reduced their price in keeping with the lower price of quicksilver. Salicylates are lower, owing to selling competition and the decline in the price of phenol. Medicinal carbolic acid has declined, but principally for small size containers and not for material in drums. Oil of peppermint is higher. Business in fivestuffs is extremely dull, and there is little activity in coal-tar crudes. Napthaline is lower. Toluol is in plentiful supply and price concessions are reported. Intermediates are more active. Some dealers in heavy chemicals have made material reductions in prices in order to realize on stocks, but manufacturers are holding to recent quotations.

A SLUGGISH LIVER CAUSED SEVERE HEADACHES

The duty of the liver is to prepare and secrete bile and serve as a filter to the blood, cleansing it of all impurities and poisons.

Healthy bile in sufficient quantity is Nature's provision to secure regular action of the bowels, and when the liver is sluggish it is not working properly, and does not manufacture enough bile to thoroughly act on the bowels and carry off the waste products from the system, hence the bowels become clogged up, the bile gets into the blood, constipation sets in followed by sick and bilious headaches, coated tongue, bad breath, heartburn, water brash, bad taste in the mouth in the morning, jaundice, floating specks before the eyes, etc.

Miss Dian Clark, Myer's Cave, Ont. writes:—"I take pleasure in writing you concerning the good I have received by using Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills for a sluggish liver. When my liver got bad I would have severe headaches, but I got better after I had used a couple of vials of your pills."

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills gently unlock the secretion, clear away all waste and effete matter by acting directly on the liver, and make the bile pass through the bowels instead of allowing it to get into the blood.

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills are 25c a vial at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

BOLSHEVIKI DOING A 'GREAT WORK' SAYS JOHN REED

Witness Before Senate Committee Declares for Revolution In United States

Washington, D.C., Feb. 25.—John Reed, a writer, who described himself as a "Revolutionary Socialist," told the Senate Committee investigating lawlessness agitation that he believed the Bolshevist regime in Russia was doing "great work" and that he was a firm advocate of a revolution in the United States. He followed his wife, Louise Bryant, on the stand and like her, denied stories of atrocities related by previous witnesses.

On cross-examination, Reed could not recall that he said last Sunday in a speech at Yonkers, N.Y., that "three million rifles are in the hands of three million Russian workmen and soon three million rifles will be in the hands of American workmen in the same thing that is being done in Russia. He also said he "couldn't imagine" himself stating in another speech in New York that he had started the Bolshevist movement and soon expected that there would be "something doing" in New York, Baltimore, Albany, Syracuse, Boston and other cities of the east.

Admits Working For Bolsheviki

Reed, who spent some time in Russia, freely admitted that he was employed in the international revolutionary propaganda bureau of the Bolshevist Minister of Foreign Affairs in Petrograd and told the committee that he expected to start an "information bureau" in New York soon. He said he had discussed the matter with some persons there, and added:—

"There are some wealthy women in New York who have nothing else to do with their money."

The witnesses said he did not speak at the meeting in a Washington theatre which was largely responsible for the present investigation because he was "considered too disreputable, having been indicted for saying things that Senator Johnston has since said in the Senate.

Witness Mentions George Creel

In the course of a long discussion with Senator Wolcott, of Delaware, regarding his beliefs in respect to law, Reed declared that the will of the people would be done, if not by peaceful minds, then by force. He explained, however, that his advocacy of a revolution in the United States meant not necessarily the employment of force.

Albert Rhys Williams, another writer, who spoke at the Washington Theatre meeting, will appear before the committee.

Miss Bryant said Lincoln Steffens came to her from George Creel, chairman of the Committee on Public Information, soon after the treaty of Brest-Litovsk and asked her to cable to her husband and request him to return to Petrograd from Stockholm and "persuade Lenine and Trotzky that President Lincoln was sincere."

Discussing the documents given out by the Committee on Public Information to prove that Lenine and Trotzky were German agents, she said Colonel Raymond Robins, of the American Red Cross, had told her they were forged.

Makes Hubby Happy With Jail Sentence

Wife Is Happy Also As She Will Not Have to Dodge Crockery For Thirty Days.

NEW YORK, Feb. 25.—"I am going to make you both happy," said Magistrate Koenig, to Mr. and Mrs. Joseph O'Brien, of this city.

Husband and wife looked expectant but incredulous.

Joseph had been hailed to the West Side court on a charge of disorderly conduct because of a playful little habit of slinging plates and other crockery at his wife to punctuate his remarks and her cuticle and the court had found him guilty.

"I am going to send you to jail for thirty days," said the magistrate. "That will make your wife happy because she won't have to dodge crockery for a month."

"It may make her happy," said O'Brien, "but where do I come in?"

"Oh, you can consider yourself happy that I didn't sentence you to six months instead of thirty days."

A CHILD HATES OIL, CALOMEL, PILLS FOR LIVER AND BOWELS

GIVE "CALIFORNIA SYRUP OF FIGS" IF CROSS, SICK, FEVERISH, CONSTIPATED.

Look back at your childhood days. Remember the "dose" mother insisted on—castor oil, calomel, cathartics. How you hated them, how you fought against taking them.

With our children it's different. Mothers who cling to the old form of physic simply don't realize what they do. The children's revolt is well founded. Their tender little "insides" are injured by them.

If your child's stomach, liver and bowels need cleansing, give only delicious "California Syrup of Figs." Its action is positive, but gentle. Millions of mothers keep this harmless "fruit laxative" handy; they know children love to take it; that it never fails to clean the liver and bowels and sweeten the stomach, and that a teaspoonful given today saves a sick child to-morrow.

Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on each bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here. See that it is made by "California Fig Syrup Company." Refuse any other kind with contempt.

CAR OWNERS.

THIS LADY WAS REAL ANNOYED

And What She Said to the Custom Collector Was a Shame;

The following letter was received by a Customs official in one of our Western Canada towns not long since:

Collector of Customs,
(Of a Western Port.)

I am in receipt of your letter and contents noted very closely. Now, it seems very queer to me that a man in your position can be so very dense.

Now, this piano you are holding has been lying there for one whole month all for nothing but nonsense. Now, we live ten miles from town, and have been obliged to drive in two different times to have forms filled out for notary public and gone in twice to have letters mailed. Now this could all have been done in one letter and piano shipped before this if there was any business in you. I'd like to be your wife for about ten minutes. I'd beat some sense into that block of yours; it amazes me how you can hold a position at all. You ask for full particulars. They have been given to you already, but seeing that you are so extremely dense and dull I shall have to repeat them once more, and will try and make myself as clear as possible so that you can get it into that nozzle of yours where there is "Nobody home upstairs."

This piano was given to me; that is, my parents made me a present of it (I mean my father and mother) about 10 or 12 years ago; I can't recall the exact number of years, and I don't remember the month, day or hour and I do not know what it cost when new. Anyway it has been my own property for that number of years. The way you act about the matter one would think I had stolen the piano. Now when I came out here 4 years ago we could not afford to have the piano shipped out here, so I left it with relatives and when I went home for a visit I found I was obliged to have it repaired so I sent it to the —— of —— and they repaired it. If you doubt my word write them in regard to the matter. I knew if I should have it done out here it would have taken five years at least, judging from other things, and these people did it in a few days. Now, when this soaks in, and you have kind of come to I wish you would forward the piano as I am sick and tired of writing you about this. I suppose next you will want my pedigree. Wish you were close enough, I'd soon hand it to you. How can you pretend to be a Collector of Customs beats me—must be short of men. Better go home and keep house and let your wife take your place. Now is there any other possible thing you can think of about this piano. I came out here and settled four years ago last April. I don't remember the hour.

CREAM FOR CATARRH OPENS UP NOSTRILS

Tells How To Get Quick Relief from Head-Colds. It's Splendid!

In one minute your clogged nostrils will open, the air passages of your head will clear and you can breathe freely. No more hawking, snuffing, blowing, headache, dryness. No struggling for breath at night, your cold or catarrh will be gone.

Get a small bottle of Ely's Cream Balm from your druggist now. Apply a little of this fragrant, antiseptic, healing cream in your nostrils. It penetrates through every air passage of the head, soothes the inflamed or swollen mucous membrane and relief comes instantly.

It's just fine. Don't stay stuffed-up with a cold or nasty catarrh—Relief comes so quickly.

The Anglican Laymen's Supper Was An Unqualified Success

Interesting Address by Dr. W. E. Taylor, of Toronto — "Why Pigtails Were Abolished."

The supper held last night in St. John's Parish Hall in connection with the Anglican Laymen's Campaign was an unqualified success. The ladies of St. Johns in conjunction with those of the other Anglican congregations of the city, had prepared for 150 guests and it was necessary to set extra places for the later arrivals. Appreciation was on all hands, expressed of the tasteful arrangements and the excellence of the fare. Admirable promptness marked the serving. Mr. C. E. Sisson made an efficient chairman, the seat of honor on his right being occupied by Dr. W. E. Taylor, of Toronto, the speaker of the evening. Another special guest was R. W. Allin, Esq., the Financial Commissioner of Diocese of Toronto. Neighbouring towns were well represented by clergy and prominent laymen during an enjoyable interval after supper songs were rendered by Mr. Arthur Anyan and Mrs. Chandler.

Awake After Sleep

Dr. Taylor in his opening remarks made humourous allusion to the lullaby song, which immediately preceded th espeeches. Anglicans had been too long asleep, but were now, he was happy to say, fast awakening this was the result of his observations as he went east and west through the country. The watchword of the day was "Duty and Opportunity!" If only the fine body of men before him were enthusiastic and united they could do what at the beginning of the Christian era, an earnest group of men had done—"turn the world upside down" or inside out.

Unlimited Opportunities.

The speaker had spent years in China at the period of that giant nation's swift and marvellous awakening consequent upon Japan's victory over Russia. Since the Revolution everything was possible there with unlimited opportunity for Christian influence and help enabled one to realize something of the need and the opportunity now at hand as a result of the world having been revolutionized by the Great War. In China as in the new born world "the thing that will win is Christianity applied in Christian friendship and neighbourliness."

"Jesus Christ, the Only Hope."

This was the theme of the Japanese preacher at a great service in Manila presided over by the famous Bishop Brent, at which the speaker was present and in which clergy of five nationalities took part. The significant thing about the advance of Christianity in China was not so much the work of the missionaries as the rapid growth and strengthening of a national and native church. Many of the leaders of the new China were ardent Christians—C. D. Wong, now representing China at the Peace Conference; Sun Yat Sen, the first president of the Chinese Republic; the head of practically all the departments of the great "Commercial Press." The head of the greatest iron-works in China in accepting that position stipulated that his Christian religion should not be interfered with, and that the works should close down on Sunday! The Chinese Minister of Education promised support to Christianity. The Minister of the Interior actually suggested that Christians hold their meetings in the "Forbidden City". The Minister of War offered 200 army tents to shelter those gathered for Christian meetings. At the Asiatic "Olympic Games" a procession of 400 athletes was led by a Christian.

Why Pig-tails Were Abolished.

An interesting and amusing, but none the less true, account of the abolition of the "queue" was given in this connection. It seems that the competitor who should have won the high-pole jump was robbed of victory by his pigtail striking the bar after his body had cleared it. The resulting indignation started a popular movement so that "queues" were cut off by the million, the police enforcing a regulation to that effect.

Worth of Chinese Character

The Chinese were "a most misunderstood people." They were not to be judged by the few individuals of the lower classes who came to this country, but by their best, the millions of true gentlemen included in their vast population. Not only was the typical Chinese character marked by a high degree o fintelligence, but by a high degree of intleligence, but much to teach us westerners. The Christian religion had at least taught them to be "dependable." Both their instinct for fair-dealing and their moral earnestness were illustrated by the Chinese government having recently sought to put an end to the smoking of opium by burning the whole stock in the country worth $16,000,000, not after confiscating it but having purchased it at a high price from the owners. In illustration of young Chinese readiness to make sacrifices in pursuit of ideals, it was related how one of a band of students cut off a finger in order that a petition to the Government for political reform might be signed in blood. The speaker himself had had charge of 25,000 of such students in their eager seeking to know the truth of the religion of Christ. Ther representative had on one occasion startled a Christian bookseller by asking for 50,000 copies of the Bible in the best bidding at $1.50 per copy. How eager the young Chinese are to learn English was shown by a sign put up by a teacher whose knowledge of that language must have been, to say the least limited: "English taught here up to the letter "G"!

The Call to Canada.

"If you've got the real thing in Canada, give it to us!" that is the call to the church, not only from China but from the needy world. Can we go back to the old indifference of the days before the war?" Let us no longer limit our vision to our particular parishes ,but let us make our parishes strong that we may send help abroad, as we did to Europe! Let us have a larger devotion to Jesus Christ, His Church and His Cause! Let us express that devotion in getting together and in forming and carrying through a practical programme of work!

Mr. R. W. Allin

Supplementing the main address, Mr. Allin spoke a few stirring words. He called for action above all things. A motorist delayed by engine-trouble with his forty-horse power car, when asked what was the matter, replied that thirty-nine of the horses must be dead." Only a vessel under way could be steered. Let us not be afraid of making mistakes. As Chesterton has said, "Anything worth doing, is worth doing badly!" United action was the secret of success. Let our motto be, "the whole worth of the Whole Church!" Both in vision and activity let the men of the Church prove themselves worthy of the churche's women!

WILL APPOINT DEPUTY MINISTER

Feature of the Opening Address Given this Afternoon.

(Canadian Press.)

TORONTO, Feb. 25. — Important announcement of coming legislation, and the usual formal ceremony, marked the opening of the first "peace" session of the Ontario Legislature this afternoon.

Among the new members assembling this morning was a small but portentious United Farmers of Ontario "group," which expects to be an important factor in legislation to be enacted this session. There are also some new members of old line parties elected since the last session, to be introduced to the House.

The opening ceremony took place at 3 p.m., with His Honour Lieut.-Governor Sir John Hendrie, officiating. There were the usual military and civil features.

In the speech from the throne, as already estimated, mention was made of the impending legislation for extension of membership in the House to women, stronger prohibition measures, and other important measures affecting the province as a whole.

Deputy Minister.

One of the surprises in the speech from the throne, was the forecast of the creation of a Deputy Minister of Labour, which it is thought, will have a stabilizing effect on labour during the period of transition from war to peace footing.

Moving Pictures Of Sir Wilfrid's Funeral

Will Be Shown at the Royal Theatre To-morrow Afternoon and Evening

In addition to the regular daily programme at the Royal Theatre will be shown to-morrow afternoon and evening one thousand feet of moving pictures of the funeral of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, which was held in Ottawa on Saturday last.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier was one of Canada's greatest men and in his death, as during his lifetime, he carried with him the great love of thousands of Canadian citizens, irrespective of politics, creed or nationality, and he was honoured at his burial by being shown the tenderest consideration of all our deceased public men. The attendance at the funeral was the greatest in Canadian history and the floral offerings the grandest. You will see it all if you attend the Royal Theatre to-morrow.

President Wilson Asks For Support

People of Country Will Fall in Line With League of Nations Idea.

(Special to The Examiner.)

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25.—President Wilson to-day stated that he was confident that the people of the country will tally with practical unanimity to the support of the League of Nations.

"The President desires to leave for France again on March fifth," Secretary Tumulty stated, "and is making plans to clean up all executive business by that time."

WINTER RHEUMATISM

Rheumatism is a disorder of the blood. It attacks people when the blood is overcharged with acid and impurities, thus setting up inflammation in the muscles and joints. Wet weather or cold weather may start the tortures of rheumatism, but is not the cause. The cause is in the blood and the blood only. Victims of this winter malady have every reason to fear the first dull ache in the limbs and joints, followed by sharp pains through the flesh and muscles; these are the symptoms of poison in the blood which may shortly leave the victim pain-racked and helpless.

There is only one way to cure rheumatism, and that is through the blood. Liniments, hot applications, and rubbing may give temporary ease, but cannot possibly root the trouble out of the system. That can only be done by the rich, red, new blood which Dr. Williams' Pink Pills actually make. This new blood drives out the poisonous acids and impurities, and the rheumatism disappears. If you are a sufferer from this painful malady begin curing yourself to-day by the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and see how soon the pains and stiffness of the joints fade away, leaving behind new energy and new health.

You can get Dr. Williams' Pink Pills from any medicine dealer or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Clemenceau Is Getting Better

The "Tiger" is Anxious to get back to Work.

(Canadian Press.)

PARIS, Feb. 25. — Premier Clemenceau's progress is such that he is now classified as convalescent. The latest report continue to indicate he is improving and that he will soon return to work. The greatest difficulty now experienced by his physicians is in keeping him in his apartment. While at first it was very hard to prevent him from exerting himself and talking, he now wants to be taken out of doors.

WILL IT REPEAT?

A Chatham man recalls that in 1870 the winter was open like that of this year and that on February 27th it froze up—fourteen inches of snow fell and there was good sleighing for five weeks.

Debate May Break Out Any Time

President Wilson's Speech at Boston May Be Part of Senate Debate.

(L. C. Martin, United Press.)

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25.—President Wilson's speech at Boston is to be made part of the Senate debate on the League of Nations to-day. It will be put into the congressional record by some administration senator.

Although no formal League speeches have been announced, there is so much room for argument on the subject that debate may break out any time.

Woman Assails License Inspector Luke

Seized the Rung of a Chair and Hit Him a Severe Blow With It

He Was Searching the Premises For Liquor—Assailant and Spouse Have Since Disappeared.

License Inspector Luke had a somewhat exciting time at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Siblock. He went there on a tour of inspection, and was making a search of the premises for liquor which, it was rumoured, was being dispensed contrary to law. After going through the house and finding no trace of the aforesaid refreshments, he turned to speak to the lady of the house about searching the yard, when she laid hold of the rung of a chair and swung on him with such force that he was reminded that Maud, the mule, a funny paper face, was not the only one that had had a kick with it. The blow landed on his forearm and while it fortunately did not break the bone it left a mark which will not "fade away" for a few days and it is needless to say that the result was not very soothing to Mr. Luke's temper. Brit as some pain-killer appeared to him as the first essential, he went to have the abused member treated, deciding to attend to his assailant later. In the meantime, however, we understand that the "strong armed lady" and her spouse made good their disappearance and are conspicuous by their absence from home since, according to latest reports.—Oshawa Reformer.

SUGGEST PENSION TO LADY LAURIER

Ottawa Papers Urge Government to Recognize Gutteman's Widow

Ottawa, Feb. 24.—The Ottawa Journal on Saturday made the following interesting suggestion: "One of the first duties of Parliament should be to vote a pension to Lady Laurier not less than the salary which Sir Wilfrid Laurier received as Leader of the Opposition.

"Sir Wilfrid gave his life service to Canada. He made no effort to seek fortune for himself in the monetary sense, and no fortune came to him. Canada should see to it that the aged wife whom the dead statesman has left behind should receive the reverence and justice to which Sir Wilfrid Laurier's fifty years and more of stainless public service entitles her who was closest to his heart."

SPECIFIC FOR BRONCHITIS.

The turpentine used in Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine is not the ordinary commercial article, which is little used because of the unpleasantness of taste, but is specially extracted from tamarac and spruce gum and so combined with other valuable ingredients as to be at the same time pleasant to use and wonderfully effective in the cure of affections of the throat, bronchial tubes and lungs.

APPEAL FOR GRENFELL MISSION

Extract from Letter.

"For two weeks we have been working night and day, that is, my secretary Mr. Finley, a Yale man, and myself, around a deep inlet known as White Bay. There we encountered so much real poverty, so much need of even the elements of life, viz., bread and clothes to cover, we came back inclined to wonder if life there anyhow had anything to offer. We saw men and women hungry, with both beriberi and scurvy, from want of food, empty cupboards, and naked children, while the fish, plentiful enough in the north, had partially failed on this part of the coast."

This is the cause to which you contribute when you make your offering to the Grenfell Mission. Leave your offering at the office of this paper and it will be forwarded to Mrs. James Wood, Treasurer, Monaghan Road.

FATHER OF COL. "JOE" BOYLE GETS LETTER AND PICTURES FROM QUEEN OF RUMANIA

Woodstock, Feb. 25.—The splendid service rendered to Rumanians by Col. "Joe" Boyle, and the high place he holds in the opinion of not only the residents of that kingdom, but by the King and Queen, are fully emphasized in a remarkable letter received this week by Charles Boyle, sen., of this city, from Marie, Queen of the Rumanians. The letter, which was written in the Queen's own handwriting is in part as follows:—

"If you are like your son, you will not be surprised to get this letter from me, though certainly it is the last person, probably, you would imagine you would get a letter from. Your son came into my room at an hour when I [illegible] were sorely tried and he [illegible] helping me and my people with the quaintly Irish completeness you probably know of him. At a time when Rumania was completely abandoned by her allies, because her situation was so desperate, your son did not forsake our cause, just because he had shaken hands with me, promising me that he would not do so—and since then at every emergency he has been faithfully at my side.

"Once he was very ill—a sort of stroke, after flying too often and too high in an airplane, as other lines of communication were difficult and slow between Russia and Rumania. I did my best for him during this time which was most trying for a time of this activity. During his convalescence my little daughter and I looked after him for two months, so as to keep him very quiet; and make as a certain degree inaction supportable. Now, since some time he is quite well again and working harder than ever.

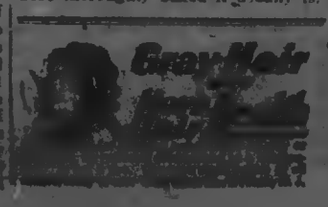
"I cannot explain to you all of his activities. They would fill volumes, but knowing him better than I do, I suppose you can imagine that they are for the good of others, and that whenever a job is either difficult or dangerous it is the one that he is most keen to undertake. After much distress our country has been freed from the invaders, but there is still much to do for it, as the misery is very great. Your son has promised to stand by me and help me to help others as much as he can. I think you must be proud to have such a son."

The letter is signed, "Marie, Queen of the Rumanians."

It will be remembered that Colonel Boyle, at the risk of his own life, interceded for a number of high-up Rumanians, and saved them from being sent to Siberia. For this and other acts he was knighted by the king of Rumania.

Inclosed with the letter were two photos, one of the queen as a Red Cross nurse and the other of her little daughter. Naturally Mr. Boyle is quite proud of having received the letter direct from the queen in her own handwriting.

The smaller the hot biscuit the more thoroughly baked it usually is.



CURES A COLD QUICK AS WINK!

All dealers sell Catarrhozone, large size, which lasts two months, price $1.00; small size, 50c, sample size, 25c.

OTTAWA POLITICS UNCLEAN.

Pastor Albert Hughes Says Decent Men Won't Touch Them.

"If Christ got into Canadian politics there would be a revolution at Ottawa," said Pastor Albert Hughes, at High Park Baptist church, Toronto, Sunday evening. "We send men to Parliament for four years or eight years, and at the end of that time they are able to retire." Declaring that Ottawa politics are so unclean that decent men hate to touch them with a long pole, the pastor intimated that selling timber limits to friends, handing out contracts for boots which fall off the soldiers' feet, or for field glasses at double their value, are samples of the practises which disgust people with affairs at the capital.

16 Reels ROYAL Double Show For Single Admission 16c

William Fox presents "TOM MIX in Western Blood." This is a thrilling story of adventure in the land where the best man wins in 5 Parts. Another William Fox feature is the "Extravaganzas"--Ali Baba and the Forty Thieves." This is a wonder tale of the Arabian Nights in 5 Parts. George H. Wiley also presents Jean Sothern in "A Mute Appeal" supported by a clever cast of Motion Picture Actors in 5 Parts. These are three excellent features to be presented at the Royal To-Night. In addition to this there will be a good one reel "MUTT AND JEFF" comedy. This programme fully sustains the reputation of the management of the Royal for showing the best pictures in the City. It is a well-known fact that programmes similar to the above are shown in the largest picture houses in Toronto, Montreal and other large centres at much higher prices than that charged at the Royal. Sixteen Cents to all.

D. D. Mackenzie Will Be The Floor Leader For Opposition

Committee of Which Mr. Robb is Chairman Will Determine the Policy.

OTTAWA, Feb. 25.—Events took a new and surprising turn late yesterday, when the Liberal members after meeting in caucus morning and afternoon decided on former Judge Lapiel D. Mackenzie, M.P., for North Victoria, Cape Breton, as the Leader of the Opposition in the House of Commons. To assist in the preparation and management of the party's work in Parliament a committee was appointed, the Chairman being Mr. J. A. Robb, M.P., Chief Liberal Whip.

Although no statement was made as to the exact status of this committee, it would hardly be right to call it an Advisory Committee. It is thoroughly understood that all important plans and decisions will emanate from this committee, and that Judge Mackenzie will be the official spokesman on the floor of the House of Commons. This gives the power to Mr. Jas. Robb and the committee, whose personnel is not announced, and the indemnity of $7,000 attaching to the office of Leader of the Opposition to Mr. Mackenzie, or $9,500 including his salary as member. So far as the fortunes of the Opposition are concerned the real power will reside in the hands of old Opposition lieutenants such as Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux, Hon. Chas. Murphy, Hon. Jacques Bureau, Hon. Dr. Beland, Mr. Ernest Lapointe, Mr. W. C. Kennedy, and either Dr. J. P. Malloy or Mr. W. H. White to represent the West, as these were the only two Opposition members elected in December last. This division of power is much more satisfactory to the chief men on the Committee of Management than choosing a temporary leader with untrammeled powers of leadership, would be.

To Settle Temporary Leadership.

The appointment of Mr. D. D. Mackenzie, though not changing the essential idea of committee government, prevents a decision later on in the session for Hon. W. S. Fielding or some other outstanding figure if the nature of the Parliamentary debates smoother the way to such a happening. Mr. D. D. Mackenzie, under the present arrangement, will be the mouthpiece of a committee whose membership can as yet be only guessed at. His choice seems natural to the rank and file of Opposition members, because he had been chosen by Sir Wilfrid Laurier during the last session as deskmate, or, in other words, as his chief lieutenant in the House. Mr. Mackenzie is a Scottish Presbyterian. He is admitted that the new Leader has a caustic tongue at times, and that he has great endurance as a speaker, but for the present session the committee will keep the power with its majority. Not that conflict will ensue, because, if every statement made after the caucus can be believed, the final decision was made unanimous by French-speaking and English-speaking members alike. One English-speaking member said: "I must say that the French-Canadian members, though so greatly in the majority, have been very decent to us."

Mr. D. D. Mackenzie's term of office will end with the session, unless he is chosen again by a national convention, and the success of that convention will depend on the details of representation as arranged by the committee mentioned.

PLACING THE BLAME FOR THE AWFUL WAR

"Responsibility" Report Completed, But Not Made Public.

PARIS, Feb. 25.—The sub-committee of the Peace Conference dealing with the responsibility of the authors of the war has completed its work. Its report has not been made public, but as its meetings and the hearings it gave were attended by nearly all the members of the full committee there seems no doubt that the report will receive formal approval and be laid before the Supreme Council.

It is believed that the sub-committee has made findings only as to the moral responsibility of the authors of the war, and not as regards technical violations of international law by individuals.

Other sub-committees dealing with various phases of responsibility for the war have not yet reached the point of reporting their findings.

The cemeteries of some towns hold out the only inducements worthy of mention to permanent residents.

To-night—Printers vs. Canadian General Electric.

COLLINGWOOD LOOKS GOOD.

HAMILTON, Feb. 25.—Tiger intermediates did not have a chance in the game with Collingwood here last night to decide the winners of the third round. Collingwood started with a three-goal margin, which was increased to ten. In the first game the home team won 6 to 3 and last night the score was 8 to 1 in favour of the Northerners.

From the time the puck was faced the Tigers were played to a standstill, and in the first period the Collingwood boys batted in five. In the second period they played a three-man defense and scored but two, and in the last session added another. Tigers scored a minue before the final bell rang.

KINGSTON WIN FROM OSHAWA

Good Limestone City Sextette Qualify For O.H.A. Semi-finals.

KINGSTON, Feb. 25.—The local intermediate sextette last night qualified for the O.H.A. semi-finals when they defeated Oshawa 16 to 2 in the final game of the third round. The losers gained a one-goal lead in Oshawa on Friday night and their dismal showing proved an unexpected surprise.

All of the local players were at the top of their form and were going strong from start to finish. If they continue at the present pace they should experience little difficulty in winning the O.H.A. title. Hagerman has not fully recovered from his recent illness and was used only at intervals during the game.

Brown and Elmer of last season's juniors formed an airtight defence that bottled up the visiting forwards with apparent ease. "Rube" Millan and his brother Terry stood out above their team mates. Both kept up a regular fusillade of shots on Childs and beat him for the majority of the goals. Smith and Derry did an immense amount of work and their telling backchecking proved a big factor in the result.

The visitors fell far below expectations and were outclassed, but Jacobi on the defence stood up well under the bombardment and never gave up trying. Bone, at left wing, was also up to the mark, but the others were hopelessly at sea.

Oshawa —Goal, Childs; defence, Kempt and Jacobi; centre, Rowden; wings, Bone and Blanchard. Subs—Fair and Jacques.

Kingston — Goal, Walsh; defence, Brown and Elmer; centre, R. Millan; wings, N. Millan and Smith. Subs—Hagerman and Derry.

Referee—Percy Lesour, of Toronto.

"JOCK" HARTY PASSES AWAY

Widely Known Kingston Sportsman Dies in London, England.

KINGSTON, Feb. 25. — Dr. "Jock" Harty, President of the Canadian Locomotive Works, who died in London, England of influenza and pneumonia, was as representative a sportsman as Kingston has ever produced. He was best known as a hockey player and a yachtsman, although he was good at football.

He created a name as centre on Queen's Senior Hockey Team, in 1895, when Guy Curtis captained the Presbyterians, and he continued with Queen's University till after his graduation in medicine, being on several old O.H.A. champion teams before the intercollegiate was formed. Harty was fast and tricky and could manoeuvre his puck on a smaller area than probably any other player and working the rubber through a mix-up of players in a marvellous manner.

He played with Queen's in a Stanley Cup game and then went to a New York hospital to study. While there he played a couple of seasons with the St. Nicholas team. In later years Dr. Harty acted as coach of Queen's hockey team and was responsible for the success of the seven which won the Allan Cup, but finally lost this trophy to St. Michaels' of Toronto, after a close struggle.

President Harty was a clever sailor and took part in many lake yacht races but of recent years he took to motorboat races, and in 1916 his Mott II., won the gold cup at the races at Alexandria Bay.

The deceased was well known in Peterboro having played here on several occasions.

CLOSE SEASON FOR CURLING.

The mild weather has not improved the ice at the curling rink and no games were played last night.

Special Services At The Temple

The services at the Salvation Army Temple on Sunday last were in charge of the officers of the Girls' Guard Troop.

Guard Leader Mrs. Badley and her assistant leader, conducted the morning meeting and a very profitable time was spent by those who attended.

In the afternoon the service was of a musical character. About forty girl guards occupied one side of the platform, and in their handsome guard uniform, they made a pleasing sight. Duets, instrumental and vocal, and solos and recitations, all testified to the amount of talent contained in the troop.

At night the service was also in charge of the guard officers, and in addition to the usual procedure a quartette and also duets by Guards Northcot and Naish was enjoyed by all.

Girl Guards.

The S.A. Girls' Guard movement in this city is a live concern, and under the able leadership of Mrs. Badley and her assistants is forging ahead. Any girl of any denomination, above the age of nine, is invited to join the Guards. Come along at 7:30 on Tuesday night of this or any week, when the practice is held.

Prize-winners At The "At Home"

Following are the prizewinners at the Victory "At Home" held last evening in the St. Alphonsus Lyceum. About one hundred and twenty-five played euchre.

The prizes which were presented by the Sodality and Literary society of St. Peters Church under whose auspices the "at home" was given were first ladies, a wicker lamp made and donated by Miss D. Welch, Mrs. Buchanan, second ladies, a wicker tray also donated by Miss Welch, Mrs. Holland; first gentlemans, Mr. Tooley and second gentlemans, Mr. J. MacDonald.

The rooms were beautifully decoratted in sweet peas, violet, chrysanthemums and flags. The handsome committee badges and programmes were painted by Miss Annie Symons.

The Patronesses

The patronesses were Mesdames Fred Shannon, M. Tooley, T. Lane, Joe White, G. Giroux and John Coughlin. The music which was especially good was supplied by Moher and Fitzgerald.

"WHO IS YOUR TAILOR"

Quality Clothes For Less Money

It sometimes happens that a store like Frank Hourigan's—the one with the Tartan Front—gets real snaps in woollens, and worsteds for young men's suitings. For instance, this week we can offer big values like the following:

MEN'S FASHIONABLE NEW SPRING SUITS, in Fancy Woollens for $26.00

MEN'S STYLISH NEW SPRING SUITS, in Smart Worsteds for $33.00

These Spring Suits will be hand made to your own measure, in any style you like, and trimmed and finished like Quality Clothes should be. Come in and see. We are planning for a big week this week. A Special plan of our own in dealing with returned soldiers, which saves them dollars in buying a new outfit.

Members Added To The Band

57th Regiment Band Will Soon Be Up to Strength

The following additional members have been added to the strength of the 57th Regiment Band since the annual meeting held a week ago:

M. Vanderwater, Napanee, clarinet.
F. Blondin, trombone.
F. J. McDonald, cornet.
S. McCabe, horn.
E. Gibson, euphonium.
H. Gilbert, trombone.

The committee who have charge of the securing of new members are certainly throwing considerable energy into their work and at the rate of progress now being made will soon have the ranks of the old 57th up to strength again. Three of the above are Veterans who crossed the seas to take their part in the Great War.

THE STORY.

CHEYENNE HARRY, millionaire cattleman, decides that he needs a housekeeper for his palatial ranch-house. His cowboys think differently. They decide that he needs a wife and set out to get one for him after their own preference in wives.

Advertising in a matrimonial paper for a suitable wife, they receive an answer dictated to pretty Aileen Judson-Brown by her fortune-hunting mother, Mrs. Judson-Brown.

Harry arrives at the Brown home with his cowboys and marries Aileen. In time a baby is born. The little one becomes Harry's greatest joy and husband and wife live together in complete happiness. Then Mamma steps in with social ambitions and tries to wreck their home to the benefit of a lounge-lizard whom she has picked out as a better husband for Aileen because of his social position.

Harry returns from a business trip to find that Mrs. Judson-Brown has gone away with Aileen and their baby. Through a leaflet of the "faithful" type, Harry learns of the baby. Through a butler of the he locates the place, forces the nurse in charge of the child to confess, and recovers his baby. He stands the lounge-lizard on his oblique head and starts for the Grand Canyon of the Colorado on a belated honeymoon.

Address In The Collegiate Institute

The Work of Victorian Order of Nurses

To promote an interest in the Victorian Order of Nurses, Miss Gibbs gave an interesting address at the Collegiate Institute yesterday afternoon to members of local women's organizations and the girls in the higher grades in the schools. Miss Muriel Wallace occupied the chair. In her address Miss Gibbs outined the work done by the order and gave an interesting account of its organization which dates back to the days of Florence Nightingale. She told of the first visiting nurse who went to the home of a wealthy man in London and of how the realizing the great comfort she had been to him asked Florence Nightingale's co-operation in a scheme to send visiting nurses into the homes of the poor. From that time until to-day visiting nurses have gone out into the world.

Six Hundred Miners Imprisoned

Marauders Destroyed Airshaft at Entrance to Mine in Essen

Canadian Press:
AMSTERDAM, Feb. 25.—A band of marauders in the vicinity of Essen yesterday destroyed the air shaft and other outlets of coal mine and imprisoned six hundred miners who were at work at the time. It will be impossible to release the miners for a fortnight. Explosive magazine of the mine also was pillaged by band.

The Elections.
BERLIN, Feb. 25.—Municipal elections in greater Berlin yesterday showed a remarkable increase in the vote of the Independent Socialists. They led the poll with several thousand votes more than the regular Socialist who made a far poorer showing than in the National and Prussia elections. The killing of Karl Liebknecht Rosa Luxembourg and Kurt Eisner seems to have driven many of the regular Socialists into the radical ranks. Non-Socialist parties fared very poorly in the election. Spartacan appeals for demonstrations did not meet with the slightest success.

Severe Fighting.

WARSAW, Feb. 25.—An agreement was reached at Lemberg Sunday for the cessation of hostilities between the Poles and Ukrainians, beginning Monday evening. The agreement can be denounced by either party on twelve hours' notice.

Still at Liberty.
Canadian Press:
BERLIN, Feb. 25.—According to information obtained from a member of the Majority Socialists in a responsible public position, the attempted assassination of Herr Auer, Bavarian Minister of the Interior, was the work of the revolutionary workmen's council of Munich, which is wholly dominated by Independent Socialists and Spartacans. The shooting of Auer is said to have been done by one Lindner, a butcher of Munich, who is openly boasting of his deed but is still at liberty.

A Coming Event

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., Feb. 24. — The members of Hamilton Sleight Post, G.A.R., of Poughkeepsie, are looking forward with keen interest to next Wednesday night when William Henry Van Nosdall, 74 years of age, a member of the post, will take for his bride Mrs. Eliza Ann Bogardus, 72, widow of one of Mr. Van Nosdall's comrades in the civil war. Mr. Van Nosdall is engaged in the automobile business.
This will make the fourth matrimonial venture which both Mr. Van Nosdall and Mrs. Bogardus have taken. Colonel Harry E. Murray, commander of the Grand Army Post, will act as Mr. Van Nosdall's best man. Mrs. Emily R. Millard, wife of another civil war veterans, will be the matron of honor. The members of the post, will be present in uniform. Mrs. Bogardus has long been prominent as a member of the Women's Relief Corps connected with the Hamilton Sleight Post.

TWO BOYS HELD AFTER HOLD-UP ON "L" PLATFORM

NEW YORK, Feb. 25.—As the result of an attempted hold-up on the northbound platform of the Ninth avenue elevated line at Fourteenth street, two boys were arrested as they were running down the elevated stairs in an attempt to escape by Detectives Renton and McGee, of the West Twentieth street station. The two youths gave their names as John Fiorante, seventeen years old, of No. 139 Chrystie street, and Dominick Fanto, of the same age, of No. 33 Forsyth street, and were held at the West Twentieth street station, charged with assault and attempted robbery.

Cizallo Marco, nineteen years old of No. 344 West Fifty-fifth street, told the police one of the boys drew a revolver on the elevated platform and pointed it at him, while his companion prepared to go through his pockets. Marco yelled for help, attracting the attention of the two detectives.

Put cold water in all sauce or stew pans when finished using.

NUXATED IRON

For Red Blood, Strength and Endurance

THINK of the strong, healthy men and women you know—people who are prominent and who are doing things worth while and you will find that they usually possess remarkable force, vim and energy—the kind that simply brim over when the blood is filled with iron. Iron is red-blood food—it helps put strength and energy into the veins of men and roses into the cheeks of women. Nuxated Iron by enriching the blood and creating new blood cells strengthens the nerves, rebuilds the weakened tissues and helps to instill renewed energy and endurance into the whole system. All people would only keep their blood filled with strength-giving iron by taking Nuxated Iron when they feel weak, run-down and nervous, they might readily build up their red-blood corpuscles and quickly become stronger and healthier in every way. Unlike the older inorganic products it is easily assimilated, does not injure the teeth, make them black nor upset the stomach. Nuxated Iron often increases the strength and endurance of weak, delicate people in two weeks' time. It is dispensed by all good druggists.

Pershing Can Find No Fault With Conditions At Brest

Cables Full Report of Gen. Helmick and Quotes Schwab and Many Other Civilians

ACTED ON WILSON'S ORDER

Washington, Feb. 26.—A denial of reports that conditions at the embarkation camp at Brest, France, are such as to endanger the lives of soldiers and that soldiers and Red Cross nurses have been held there virtually as prisoners, after the time when they expected to sail for the United States, is made in a cable received by the War Department tonight from General Pershing.

The conditions were investigated, General Pershing asserts, by Major Gen. Hemlick of the Inspector General's Department, following the receipt of a cable which was received by President Wilson from a New York newspaper.

The publication of the cable message from General Pershing was authorized tonight by General Marsh, Chief of Staff. It follows:—

"Hundreds of complaints have been made to the Evening Telegram of the conditions at the United States camp at Brest. Soldiers from the front and Red Cross nurses practically held prisoners. If they complain are put at bottom of sailing list. Wounded and ill forced to stand in rain hours for meals. Officers overbearing and harsh and give casuals no consideration. Roofs and buildings leak, barracks filthy, mud everywhere. Can you inspect camp and remedy abuses costing lives of many American soldiers or have camp abolished?

"(Signed New York Evening Telegram.)

"The President sent me the above cablegram and directed me to have a report made on the matter to the Secretary of War. The following is a summary of report of conditions at Brest just received from Major General Eli A. Hemlick, Inspector General's Department, A.E.F., commanding there:

General Hemlick's Report

"'The charges that soldiers from the front and Red Cross nurses practically held prisoners absolutely groundless. No individual has been put at the bottom of the sailing list. One organization was held fifteen days on account of bad state of discipline and neglect of duty, and was released before expiration of time set on account of honest efforts made to correct deficiencies. No man of the garrison of more than 60,000 is required to remain in line over ten minutes. Troops are marched to meals by tie schedules, and the entire garrison is fed within one hour and fifteen minutes.

"'Relative to officers overbearing and harsh and give casuals no consideration, all commanding officers of troops and casual officers passing here have almost within exception voluntarily and without solicitation, visited my office before leaving, and have expressed their appreciation both verbally and in writing for the uniform courtesy and great consideration shown them by all officers on duty at this base section. With the exception of newspaper reporter by the name of Brown of Washington (D.C.) paper every newspaper man that has visited Brest has become an ardent advocate of the organization, efficiency, and human kindness in common at the railroad station, at camp, at the embarkation office, at the pier, and in all offices in Base Section No. 5. Inspections of buildings are made daily and only in rare instances are leaks discovered during the hardest wind and rain storms. In every instance the leaks are immediately repaired, usually before the occupants have had time to report them. As relates to mud everywhere, this is the rainy season. Footpaths and roads were muddy for a time, due to conditions over which no man had control. Even this has been met by laying approximately forty miles of boardwalks along the roadside thruout the camp to storehouses, to incinerators, to laundries, to delousing plants, to mess halls, and along highways.

Can Feed 50,000 In An Hour

"'Thousands of cubic yards of crushed stone have been laid and rolled, so that one may walk over the camp without stepping in the mud. Sheds and messes have been built at the railroad station to serve 50,000 men within an hour after arrival, both day and night. These are located conveniently near the docks, in order to also serve troops embarking in case of necessity. Inclosed buildings and restrooms furnished with heating facilities, such as stoves and open fireplaces, with attractive decorations have been provided at the docks, and are being managed by the Red Cross assisted by commissioned and enlisted details from the army. These facilities are provided with chairs, writing tables, music, light refreshments, benches, and will accommodate 4,000 men. A neat and attractive building has been provided as an infirmary at dock, to which ambulances have access under cover. Sick and wounded are provided with covers from infirmary and hospital boat, which is inclosed and heated. Sick and wounded are removed from hospital to hospital train or ships under cover.'

"Major Gen. Eli A. Helmick quotes the following newspaper men as having no criticisms to make, but much to praise relative to conditions at Brest: Mr. Mellett of the United Press, David Lawrence, Tiffany Blake Mr. Amond of The Chicago Tribune and Raymond Carroll of the Philadelphia Public Ledger.

"Charles M. Schwab went over the entire camp at Pontanazen and made the statement that it is one of the best examples of good organization and efficient operation that he had ever observed, and expressed his intention of reporting the improvements observed on returning to the United States. Mr. Schwab was asked by a newspaper man present if he objected to being quoted as having made such a statement, to which he replied that he had no objection. A report on health conditions at Brest has already cabled you.

"PERSHING."

The Washington newspaper man (Brown) referred to by General Pershing, is George Rothwell Brown of The Washington [illegible], who, upon his return from France several weeks ago, wrote a story for his newspaper making serious charges against the manner in which the embarkation camp at Brest was being conducted.

Sir Thomas White's Tribute To Late Liberal Leader

Sir Wilfrid Laurier Was Actuated by Principles of Liberty—Three Bills Introduced in the House.

OTTAWA, Feb. 26. — Tribute was paid in the House of Commons yesterday afternoon to the memory of the late Sir Wilfrid Laurier. Sir Thomas White, the Acting Prime Minister, said the death of Sir Wilfrid had removed a most distinguished and commanding personality from the stage of public life.

"During his long career," said Sir Thomas, "he had been identified with all the great political controversies since the period of Confederation. His fame has carried far beyond the boundaries of Canada and in Britain, and France and the United States, as in other countries, the name of Sir Wilfrid Laurier has long been respected and admired as one of the outstanding statesmen of the day.

Such a Career.

"With such a career, with such titles to distinction we of this House may well look upon this occasion with profit to ourselves and in appreciation of him examine as to the nature of the political principles to which he subscribed, his characteristics as a statesman, the personal qualities and attributes of the man himself, and the sources of the great power and influence which he exercised within and without the halls of Parliament."

Sir Thomas said the principles which guided Sir Wilfrid's political action where his strong attachment and devotion to the ideals of freedom and liberty, personal, civil and religious. He believed in freedom of opinion, free speech, freedom of conscience. That these were his views might be gathered not only from his own speeches, but from the names of those whom he most admired, Fox, Gladstone, Bright and Lincoln. These names were often on his lips, and he had diligently studied their careers and utterances.

Admired British System.

"From this starting point of attachment," said Sir Thomas, "he was led to greatly admire the British political system and the security and guarantees for liberty which it embodies and affords. He was a great constitutionalist, an ardent upholder of principles of free government, with all that it involves. It seemed to me at times that in his character of constitutionalist and in his continued interest in the constitution he was the dignified and solitary survivor of that great group of statesmen, giants in their way, who after prolonged and fiery discussion and controvery, laid broad and deep the constitutional foundation of Canada's national life.

"National unity he regarded as of paramount important in a country of mixed races and diverse creeds such as Canada. He was regardful for the fights of minorities and a strong advocate of tolerance towards the opinions and convictions of others upon all questions. He was a believer in democracy but there was always in him a moderating and restraining influence, a pragmatical respect for experience and for the past which disinclined him to sudden or violent changes and exercise a steadying influence in the determination of his policies."

Sir Thomas said that the late Liberal Leader took the highest rank as an orator. His style was modelled upon the best examples of English prose. He had left behind him a career unsullied by self-seeking or love of gain.

Three Bills Introduced.

Three bills were introduced in the House and read for the first time. F. B. Stacey (Westminster District) had a bill to change the name of his constituency to that of Fraser Valley to prevent confusion with an adjoining constituency. Hon. Arthur Meighen, Minister of the Interior, had two bills. One will carry into effect in the railway belt, B. C., a principle already in effect in regard to other Dominion lands, enabling the Crown to convey to a deceased entrant. The other so amends the Yukon Act as to reduce the Yukon Council from twelve members to three, thereby reducing the cost of administration.

EX-GERMAN KING ACCEPTS INEVITABLE

BERNE, Feb. 25.—The former King and Queen of Wurtemberg, in taking part in a recent election, gave their names as Herr and Frau Wurtemberg, thus acknowledging the Republic, according to a report reaching here from Tubingen. They appeared before the ballot box in plain citizens without an escort.

Woman's Hair Reaches to Knees

A Year Ago Was Theatened With Baldness, Tells How She Made Her Hair Grow.

Mrs. Esther Emery, now visiting friends in the city, is the fortunate possessor of marvelously beautiful hair which, when loosened from its coils falls to her knees. Moreover, it is of soft, silky, and fluffy texture and in colour a glorious glossy gold. Yet just one year ago she was threatened with baldness. Urged to tell how she had obtained this wonderful growth in so short a time she said: "Had any one told me such marvelous results could be accomplished so quickly, I positively would not have believed it. Twelve months ago my hair, which then reached barely to my shoulders, was falling out at an alarming rate and growing very thin, actually exposing the bald scalp in several spots. It was dull and lifeless in colour, turning grey in patches, and very dry and brittle. My head was covered with dandruff and itched like mad all the time. I tried fully a dozen different hair tonics, but they were all the same and never did me a bit of good. One day I chanced to read in my home paper of a simple home prescription to make the hair grow that was recommended by a well-known physician. It said that by taking ordinary Lavona de Composee and mixing with Bay Rum and Menthol Crystals and applying to the scalp each night with the finger tips that new hair would grow very rapidly. I decided to try it and I had my druggist mix 2 ounces of the Lavona de Composee with 6 ounces of Bay Rum and ½ dr. of Menthol Crystals, and started to use it. My, how quickly my hair did grow. First the hair stopped falling, the itching ceased and the dandruff disappeared. Then tiny hairs appeared all over the scalp. These grew and grew as though nothing would ever stop them. They are growing yet and, while, of course I have used the treatment steadily and expect to continue it, at least until my hair reaches the floor, I might have stopped and been perfectly satisfied at the end of three months. I think that any woman can get long, thick, beautiful hair by using this prescription as I have recommended it to several and all are delighted with the result. The prescription is very inexpensive, and any druggist can fill it.

"Those who use it should be careful not to get it on the face or where the hair is not desired."

HOUSEHOLD NOTES

A hot-water bottle should never come in actual contact with the feet—rather use it to warm that part of the bed where the feet should come.

An Indian stew is made with 1 1-2 pounds neck of mutton, 1-2 pound of good rice, 2 cups of canned peas, 3 large onions. Cut the meat into chops and place in a casserole with onion thinly sliced. Season accordingly, add vegetable stock [illegible] and simmer 3 hours. Add the [illegible] rice and cook 45 minutes.

AIRPLANE TO SPEED 300 MILES AN HOUR

French Invention Enables Machine to Fly Faster the Higher It Goes.

PARIS, Feb. 26.—An airplane with a speed of from 200 to 300 miles an hour which will bring America within a short day's journey of Europe, is the prospect held out by the invention of a French engineer, Auguste Rateau, according to the Matin. The invention of M. Rateau was one of the surprises in store for the Germans which were about to be revealed when fighting ceased.

At the present time without the invention the higher an airplane mounts the less power does its engine develop on account of the varefying of the air. The loss at 15,000 feet, for instance, is 50 per cent.

M. Rateau's device, the paper says, is very simple. It consists of an arrangement by which the exhaust from the engine works a small turbine which compresses the air drawn into the engine to normal pressure so that the engine develops full power no matter what the altitude. As the resistance of an airplane decreases enormously at high altitudes, the Matin adds, it follows that the higher the machine fitted with the new device mounts the greater will be its speed. This fact, it is declared, was demonstrated by the famous German long-range gun.

It has been found that a heavy day bombing machine whose speed at 15,000 feet ordinarily did not exceed 80 miles an hour, made 140 miles an hour when fitted with M. Rateau's invention.

THE WIFE

BY JANE PHELPS

Ruth Tells Brian of Her New Interest

CHAPTER CXXIX

Ruth had written Brian a long, loving letter in reply to the one he sent after he knew of his boy. She had told of all the baby's charming ways, and of how each day he grew to be more like him. She told of her work among the wives of other soldiers, and gave him their names; he might run across some of them and able to cheer them. She told of meeting Mrs. Livingstone, and of how friendly they had become. Of her aunt's generosity, and of Rachel. She spoke of Kenyon Roberts and his wife, of the Curtiss' and others they knew. But she said nothing of Arthur Mandel, nor did she mention Mollie King altho she (Mollie) had asked to be remembered to her.

She did not mention Mandel, as she knew Brian always had a feeling against him, a feeling she laid entirely to his opposition to her work. She said nothing of Mollie, because not yet could she bring herself to think with equanimity of her constant association with Brian. But without reserve she told him of everything else in which she was interested, or which she thought might hold interest for him. It was a long, loving wifely letter, and accompanying it on the same steamer was a package of all the little comforts allowed to be sent to the soldiers. Ruth fairly revelled in purchasing these, getting the best of everything,—all that it was permissable to send.

Then she waited anxiously for her next letter. The casualties had commenced to come in, and there was always a little fear clutching her heart, and showing in her eyes when she opened her daily paper. But she in no wise neglected her duties because of this; neither did she lack for words to encourage others.

Mrs. Clayborne had tried to get Ruth to resign her position. She pleaded her own need of her society, the baby's. But Ruth always refused.

"It is my job, Aunt Louisa. Mr. Mandel has always treated me wonderfully as you know. It would be base ingratitude to leave him now when he is so short of help, and so dependent upon me. And another thing, aunt; I shouldn't be happy without my work. I care no more for my work than I ever did. I dislike it just as much. I am not needed here; Rachel is perfectly competent to carry on the house without me. No, I never was cut out for a housewife; so you may as well make up your minds to it——all of you."

Mrs. Clayborne knew Ruth. She knew her tenacity of purpose. So she said nothing more, really being reconciled to her being with Mandel although she would have been willing now to support both her and the baby.

Mrs. Livingstone had become a great friend of both Ruth and her aunt. She and Mrs. Clayborne were of about the same age, and found each other unusually congenial. Both were passionately fond of music, and what little leisure they had they often spent together at some concert. Ruth occasionally accompanied them, but more often she remained with little Brian. Even when he slept she felt she was caring for him. But she had found a real friend in the society woman, so much older than herself, who, in directing her charities, is introducing her to the world of earnest women who "without money and without price" were giving all their time to working for the soldiers, had done her a real service. Ruth was growing.

At the shop she now nearly ran the business. They were taking on new orders which necessitated her going out of town (as people seemed disinclined to do extensive alterations because of conditions, as there were no new homes to decorate on account of the building laws). But she found plenty to occupy her, right in the shop.

She seemed to grow nearer Mandel—that is, they grew more closely friendly without becoming intimate. He occasionally would refer to Brian, then watch Ruth's face to see if she showed particular interest. He could not understand her. Knowing what he did of Brian's incompetence, thinking he knew that he was more than fond of Mollie King, he had expected that Ruth would certainly sue for divorce long before the time little Brian was born. That somehow put—or seemed to—a different face on the matter. But now once again, he was beginning to hope that something might happen so that he might have Ruth for his own. Her devotion to his interests, her development along other lines, had given him hope that even now he might win her.

Then came Brian's answer to her letter.

To-orrow—Ruth Recalls Brian and Mollie's Friendship

The Best Cough Syrup Is Home-made

Here's an easy way to save money and yet have the best cough remedy you ever tried.

You've probably heard of this well-known plan of making cough syrup at home. But have you ever used it? When you do, you will understand why thousands of families, the world over, feel that they could hardly keep house without it. It's simple and cheap, but the way it takes hold of a cough will quickly earn it a permanent place in your home.

Into a 16-oz. bottle, pour 2½ ounces of Pinex (50 cents worth); then add plain granulated sugar syrup to fill the bottle. Or, if desired, use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, it tastes good, never spoils, and gives you 16 ounces of better cough remedy than you could buy ready-made for five times its cost.

It is really wonderful how quickly this home-made remedy conquers a cough—usually in 24 hours or less. It seems to penetrate through every air passage, loosens dry, hard or tight cough, stops the phlegm from the membranes, and gives almost immediate relief. Splendid for throat tickle, hoarseness, croup, bronchitis and bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, and has been used by generations for throat and chest ailments.

To avoid disappointment ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

A FRENCH LEGEND.

Holy Shadow Supposed to Cure Diseases.

It is a French legend so old that we do not know when it was written, or rather when it grew. We may not believe in the miracle giving, but in the heart of the story lies an exquisite pearl of truth. And thus runs the old legend.

A very long time ago there dwelt upon the earth a saint so good that the angels themselves came down from Heaven to see how any mortal could live so holy and beautiful a life. They found a man, going about his daily duty in simple faithfulness, [illegible] as the star diffuses light, and the flower fragrance without being aware of it. Watching with eager interest, they saw that two words summed up his life. He gave and forgave.

Not that these words fell from his lips, but they were expressed in his pleasant smile, in his kindness, forbearance, and charity.

Then the angels prayed to God, asking, "O Lord, grant him the gift of miracles." The answer quickly came, "I will; ask him what gift it shall be."

So the angels asked the holy man, "Would you like to have the touch of your hands heal the sick?" But he answered, "No; that is God's work." Again they asked, "Would you like to convert guilty souls, and bring back wandering hearts to the right path?" [illegible] "that is also the work of God. I pray; I do not convert."

"Would you like to become a model, by patience, attracting men by the lustre of your virtue, thus glorifying God?" Still he answered, "No; if a man should become attached to me, they would be further from God and estranged from Him. The Lord has other means of glorifying Himself."

Filled with astonishment, they cried, "What, then, do you desire?" The saint smiled and asked in turn, "What can I wish for? That God give me His grace; with that shall I not have everything?"

But the angels insisted that he must choose a miracle, or have one chosen for him.

"Very well," he said at length, weary of their importunity, "I wish that I may do a great deal of good without ever knowing it."

How were they to carry out such a wish? Finally they hit upon the following plan: Every time the saint's shadow should fall behind him or on either side where he could not see it, this shadow would have the power to cure disease, soothe pain, and comfort the sorrowing.

And so the wish was fulfilled. When the dear old man walked abroad, his shadow, thrown on the ground on either side or behind him, made arid withered vegetation, brought back music to the parched, dried-up brooks, and roses to the pale cheeks of suffering little children, and diffused joy everywhere.

The saint went simply about his daily duties, knowing nothing of the blessedness of his fellow shadow. At last his very name was forgotten, and he was reverently called "The Holy Shadow."

Not an Easy Life.

Life at the Home Office is by no means easy. The Home Secretary is, in the first place, a great ceremonialist. It is he who presides at the country items of state intelligence, declarations of war, treaties of peace, and the births and deaths of princes. It will be remembered that, while Mr. Churchill held the office he had the principal speaking part in the investiture of the Prince of Wales, and even had his name printed on the [illegible] of the new Prayer Book—a very safe assurance of immortality.

But these are not the duties which put the Home Secretary into hot water. It is rather that he is responsible for the internal peace of the country, supervises the police, controls the prisons, and carries out [illegible] to pardon criminals, often [illegible] and there are naturally the volcanic regions of public affairs.

As far back as 1866 a certain Mr. Spencer Walpole, who was Home Secretary, got much the [illegible] it in a collision with the reform agitation. Sir William Harcourt had the dynamite outrages in his term of office. Mr. Henry Matthews, the Maybrick case, Mr. Asquith the Featherstone riots, and Mr. McKenna had his troubles with the suffragettes.—Tit-Bits.

HOW SERBIA SUFFERED.

Conquered People Were Victims of Famine and Disease.

The enduring struggle of the Serbian people for the right to live and to be free affords the most heroic page in all the heroism of the war of might against right. There has been no single moment of effort, but a long-drawn, never-ending torment of struggle and battle. They stood for the rights of small nations, a David before the Goliath of Caesarism, and to them has at last been given the dealing of the blow which brings end to war and freedom to peoples.

This [illegible] people, small in number, but great in traditions and courage, made the [illegible] long-planned war on liberty. Exhausted by the war against Turkey and the defence [illegible] Bulgaria, which nation specializes in treachery, the Serbian army and people were called to withstand the onslaught of the armies of Austria, once one of the great powers. Nothing had been left undone to avoid the arbitrament of war. Concessions had been made to the plungers of the world war which transcended any thought possible by a free people, proud of their independence. But war was to come and the Serbian armies, hastily assembled and badly equipped, short of not only luxurious [illegible] but lacking the veriest essentials, for a long year, met and broke the attacks of the flower of the Austrian armies.

The invaders gave a foretaste of their methods in such portions of Serbia as fell temporarily under their sway—Hungarian and Austrian soldiery had full rein to every passion and a visit to the district once occupied by them, when the Serbians had liberated their land, was a heart-rending and unforgetable experience. Belgium's sufferings were witnessed by neutral observers; there was some check upon savagery. In Serbia there have never been any checks or deterrents. The victorious armies, lacking many of their bravest and best who had fallen in the twelve months' struggle, were not allowed to reorganize. Disease succeeded battle and a wave of typhus swept thousands on thousands away. The population, driven from their homes during the invasion, starved, without suitable food, fell an easy victim. It will probably never be known how stupendous were the ravages of the disease.—American Review of Reviews.

THOUGHT IT W

Doctor Said Abscess.

Mr. Gleason R. Young, Kingscroft, N.B., under date of Feb. 8th, 1918, writes us as follows:—"About five months ago, a lump came on my jawbone. I thought it was a boil, and after it had been there quite a while it began to get larger. I went to a doctor and he said it was an abscess, and lanced it. He gave me a wash for it, so I went by his directions until it healed up, but it commenced coming again, and in about three weeks it broke itself. I thought it would get better, but it didn't. A neighbour advised me to get a bottle of Burdock Blood Bitters, so I sent and got a bottle, and by the time it was all gone the abscess had disappeared, and now it is all better."

Burdock Blood Bitters will heal and dry up sores, ulcers, and abscesses, no matter how large or of how long standing. If you have never applied it to a cut, wound, sore or ulcer, just try it and see what soothing, healing, cleansing power it possesses. It takes out itching, stinging and burning, and promotes the growth of healthy flesh. So, too, when taken internally, by its power of eliminating all impurities from the blood and making that vital fluid rich, red and pure, it cuts off the origin and source of the foul matter that goes to make boils, pimples, sores, ulcers, abscesses and the like, and at the same time the purified and enriched blood creates healthy tissue where there was formerly, perhaps, a sore full of pus.

Burdock Blood Bitters has been on the market for 40 years. Manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Romance of History.

Brittany since the earliest times of history, has been the land of romance, saints and archbishops, knights and ladies, hobgoblins and wizards, crusaders and fairies. All these are with beautiful impartiality scattered through the antique records of l'Amorique, as this region used to be called. Even the fabled sunken city of Is and the lost continent of Atlantis are supposed to lie off its coast. First cousins of the Irish and the Welsh, the Armoricans are by tradition, birth and character a race apart, silent, superstitious, devout and obstinate. Fine sailors and tillers of the soil, the Bretons have remained much as their earlier ancestors were. Their native costume prevail throughout all villages and farmhouses. The men in blue blouses and straw hats trimmed with long black velvet ribbons, and knee-length waistcoats, embroidered in bright colors, loaded with buttons, sit beside many a wayside tavern, and the white head-dresses and heavy black serge costumes of the women are the same in cut and quality as in the days of the famous Queen Anne of Brittany.

TURN HAIR BACK WITH SAGE TEA

If Mixed With Sulphur It Darkens so Naturally Nobody can Tell.

The old-time mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur for darkening gray, streaked and faded hair is grandmother's recipe, and folks are again using it to keep their hair a good, even color, which is quite sensible, as we are living in an age when a youthful appearance is of the greatest advantage.

Nowadays, though, we don't have the same troublesome task of gathering the sage and the mussy brewing at home. All drug stores sell the ready-to-use product, improved by the addition of other ingredients, called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound" for about 50 cents a bottle. It is very popular because nobody can discover it has been applied. Simply moisten your comb or a soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also produces that soft lustre and appearance of abundance which is so attractive. This ready-to-use preparation is a delightful toilet requisite for those who desire a more youthful appearance. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

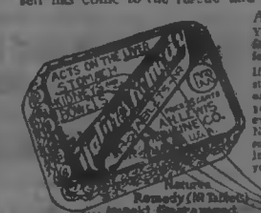
Want to Feel Just Right?

Take an NR Tonight

JUST TRY IT AND SEE how much better you feel in the morning. That "logy," headachy, tired, don't-know-what's-the-matter feeling will be gone—you'll feel fine.

TROUBLE IS, your system is clogged with a lot of impurities that your over-worked digestive and eliminative organs can't get rid of. Pills, oil, salts, calomel and ordinary laxatives, cathartics and purges only force the bowels and prod the liver.

Nature's Remedy (NR Tablets) acts on the stomach, liver, bowels and even kidneys, not forcing, but toning and strengthening these organs. The result is prompt relief and real, lasting benefit. Make the test. Nature's Remedy will act promptly, thoroughly, yet so mildly, so gently, that you will think nature herself has come to the rescue and is doing the work.



And oh, what a relief! You'll be surprised to find how much better you feel—brighter, better every way. If habitually or stubbornly constipated, take one NR Tablet each night for a week. Then you'll not have to take medicine every day. Just an occasional NR Tablet after that will be sufficient to keep your system in good condition—keep you feeling your best. Get a 25¢ Box.

Origin of Christmas Card.

The Christmas card is the legitimate descendant of the "school pieces" or "Christmas pieces" which were popular from the beginning to the middle of the nineteenth century. These were sheets of writing paper, sometimes surrounded with those hideous and elaborate pen flourishes forming birds, scrolls, etc., so unnaturally dear to the hearts of writing masters, and sometimes headed with copperplate engravings, plain or colored. These were used by schoolboys at the approach of the holidays for carefully-written letters exploiting the progress they had made in composition and chirography. Charity boys were large purchasers of these pieces, says one writer, and at Christmas time used to take them around their parish to show and at the same time solicit a trifle.

The Christmas card proper had its tentative origin in 1846. Joseph Cundall, a London artist, claims to have issued the first in that year. It was printed in lithography, colored by hand, and was of the usual size of a lady's card.

Not until 1862, however, did the custom obtain any foothold. Then experiments were made with cards of the size of an ordinary carte de visite, inscribed simply "A Merry Christmas" and "A Happy New Year." After that came to be added scenes and [illegible] dearest and fondest. "I have five original designs before me now," wrote "Luke Limner" to the London Publishers' Circular, Dec. 31, 1883. "They were produced by Goodall & Son. Seeing a growing want and the great sale obtained abroad, this house produced (1862) a 'Little Red Riding Hood,' an 'Hermit and His Cell,' and many other subjects, in which snow and the robin played a part.

Had One Merit.

An accomplished musician was invited by a friend to a church service in order to hear the chorus choir render a special selection. The friend, highly pleased with the rendition, was awaiting with much interest her companion's verdict. It came thus, in a whisper: "They sit well."

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Aunt Jane's Bequest

By JANE OSBORN

Copyright, 1918, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Blaine had talked it over with the station agent in fragmentary conversation during the hour that elapsed after the arrival of her train and the departure of the stage that was to carry her to the old Dunham estate. Madge wanted to find out what people around there thought of the will, so she did some tactful pumping without, of course, letting the station agent know she was Madge Dunham.

To be sure, old Miss Dunham had been an odd character, all the Dunhams were a little queer, she was assured by the station agent, but no one expected she was so parsley mean as all that. She looked good-natured enough in spite of her old age—and she was nearly a hundred when she died, and seemed to have her wits with her, too. In most things, though she surely had shown weak-mindedness in that will. She had left the entire fortune—and it was a lot more than folks ever thought—to her niece, Elizabeth, and Elizabeth Dunham already possessed property that brought her an income about ten times larger than she could ever want.

"Was there any one else who might have had it?" asked Madge with an air of only half-hearted interest.

To be sure there was—there was a granniece and a grandnephew—

Your Labor Counts—every ounce of work you do helps some soldier who is fighting over there! This war is being fought as truly in the household and in the work-shop as it is in the trenches.

Some of our Canadian women are borne down physically and mentally, by the weaknesses of their sex. They suffer from backache, dragging sensation, very nervous and pain in top of head. If they ask their neighbors they will be told to take a Favorite Prescription of Dr. Pierce's which has been so well and favorably known for the past half century.

Weak women should try it now. Don't wait! Begin today. This woman's tonic and nervine will bring vim, vigor and vitality. Send Dr. V. M. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y., 10c for trial pkg., tablets.

Paris, Ont.—"About three years ago I was ill in bed and suffered severe pain. The doctor said I had gall stones, but his medicine did not help me. A neighbor had been taking 'Favorite Prescription' and it had benefited her so much that she urged me to try some of hers, and that first dose helped me so much that I sent at once for a bottle. I was very much surprised at the marvelous relief this medicine gave me after the doctor had failed, and I have never had such spells since, but whenever I feel the least bit run-down or in need of a tonic I take the 'Favorite Prescription' again for a few days. It has never failed to restore me to excellent health."—Mrs. Elizabeth Brown, P. O. Box 788.

lived a good ways off. Stanley Taylor was a professor and the old maid was a school ma'am, and they were both as poor as church mice. They ought to have come in for some of it, but the old lady had cut them off. People knew that, but they hoped she had relented. Might at least have given a little to the Old Ladies' Home.

"Didn't she give those poor relatives anything?" asked Madge.

The station agent chuckled. Well, yes, there was a sort of a provision for them. They had been left the old lady's library, a whole lot of old books that wouldn't sell for enough to pay the trip they'd have to take to get them. The books were to be divided equally between the two, and they had been sent for by Elizabeth Dunham now, who was executrix as well as practically sole beneficiary, to come and select them.

"I wonder," mused Madge, "whether there was any reason why the old lady left them out of her will?"

The station agent lowered his voice. "That there was. Most folks don't know it," he confided, "but the old lady had set her heart on having her niece and nephew married, and she couldn't get them to do it, and that rolled her up so she never had any use for them. She had them out at the old place some 15 years back and tried to make a match, but somehow the feller he wasn't of the marrying kind, and the girl—well, I guess she was cut out to be an old maid."

Madge colored slightly. It had taken an hour to get this much information from the local informant, and she took her seat in the stage to continue her trip to the home of her late great-aunt with an ever increased feeling of resentment toward her. What if she was cut out to be an old maid—hadn't Aunt Jane herself been an old maid and wasn't Aunt Elizabeth an old maid? Even a very little fraction of the fortune would have seemed like wealth to her, and instead all she got was a half of a lot of dusty old books, that would have to be haggled over with Stanley Taylor. Madge felt somehow that if Stanley were at all considerate he would waive his claim to the books. But no such good fortune was in store for her, as he had arrived the day before and was already established in the gloomy old book room in the Dunham homestead making up his mind as to which of the books he would claim.

The only hospitality offered to Madge when she came was that of an old housekeeper. Aunt Elizabeth might have come over from her near-by country place to have made matters a little more cheerful for Madge and Stanley, but she had merely left word with the housekeeper to provide for their temporal wants and to ask them to proceed with the division of the books and to say that the lawyer would be over the next day to settle any legal phrases of the arrangement."

And they got right to work at the books. They at least agreed, apparently, on a lack of disposition to sociability.

"I have been doing what I could without you," remarked Stanley as soon as they had got together in the back room. "I made a pile of books here that could not possibly interest you. I will take them, and over there are some that could not possibly interest me—"

Madge looked at the first pile. There was an old edition of Fielding, Smollett and Richardson, a stack of French poets and philosophers and some heavy tomes of history that had apparently never been opened to the light of day. In the other pile could be seen bound volumes of the Ladies' World for the past 25 years, a rather complete set of cookery books, the works of George Eliot and Maria Edgeworth.

"But I detest George Eliot—and the rest isn't worth the freight to take them home," insisted Madge, and Stanley was really embarrassed, for he had frankly thought that his cousin would find this second pile of books entirely to her liking.

Three days later, after hours and hours spent together in the book room, Madge called on Aunt Elizabeth Dunham, excusing herself from her cousin on the ground of needing a little diversion before going on with the selection.

"One thing we agreed on," she assured Aunt Elizabeth, "and that is on books, for every book that appeals to me appeals to him, and while he is perfectly gentlemanly about it, we both set our hearts on the same books. It really seems a shame to separate the collection. They are quite remarkable. I didn't realize that Aunt Mary Jane was so booky."

"I suppose Aunt Jane might have left them to a library," commented Aunt Elizabeth with a smile that puzzled Madge, "but she thought that you two school teachers might like them."

"We do like them—it's dividing them that makes it hard."

"Oh, well, perhaps you'll find a way," was all Aunt Elizabeth suggested."

Two days later Stanley Taylor, on the pretext of wishing a little diversion, made his call on Aunt Elizabeth. He had met her scarcely three times before in his life, but as one of the few surviving Dunhams he felt that she would be able to give him advice. Still, he was amazingly embarrassed when he got right down to the matter about which he wanted advice. However, he got to the point in short order."

"You know, it all started this way," Stanley began. "When Madge came back the other day she told me where she had been and she said that all the help you would give was to say perhaps we'd find a way. She told me that and then she laughed and turned her head away and blushed. Madge is very pretty when she blushes—she has improved immensely the last few years since that time Aunt Jane had us here to try and get us to fall in love. I think the Dunhams do improve with age." And Aunt Elizabeth said undoubtedly they did.

"What I want to know is what you meant, and what Madge meant," continued Stanley. "The more I have thought of that remark—well, the truth is it put all sorts of ideas into my head that had been shaping itself ever since Madge got here. We have tastes very much in common—the very fact that we can't divide the books shows that, and of course the books wouldn't have to be divided if we—well, hang it all, Aunt Elizabeth, you're a woman. Do you think Madge would have me?"

Aunt Elizabeth wasn't at all sure, but when Stanley took his question to Madge that evening back in the dimly lighted library, Madge needed no urging. Her only regret, she said, was that it might seem that she was accepting him on account of the books, whereas she wanted him for his own dear self. Stanley had never realized what an ecstasy of contentment there was in being called a "dear self" by a woman before. In fact it was an entirely novel experience.

They hurried to Aunt Elizabeth with their good news and Aunt Elizabeth was ready then to play her surprise on them. Yes, Aunt Jane's fortune—really, my dears, quite staggering in size—had been left to her, but only until the match could be made. Really, old Aunt Jane was pretty shrewd, even if she was near the century mark. She had made up her mind a little while before she died that if the cousins could be brought together over a library of books that way they would do—exactly what they had done. So she sent to a book collector in Boston and told him just what she wanted. Of course, Aunt Jane had never had any books to speak of herself.

"And if we hadn't decided as we did then you would have had the money, or was there some other provision?" asked Madge, the full enjoyment of her good fortune marred a little by the thought that some one else might be robbed by it.

"I asked Aunt Jane what to do with the money if you didn't earn it, and she said there could be no if. She said she'd been an old maid nearly a hundred years and I had for fifty, and it was time some of the Dunhams got married."

Various Ways to Drink Coffee.

On the East side of New York there are eating places, or coffee houses, as they are known, for all nationalities. Each has a different custom for serving and drinking coffee. Take, for instance, the Arab; when he sips his beverage he makes the same noise as a man with a hirsute appendage does when he is wading through a plate of soup. And what is more, declare the men of the desert, those who do not make a noise like a drowning man, when sipping coffee, which they regard as a luxury, are absolutely ill-bred. The most popular dish served by the Arabs is called pilaf. It is made of olive oil and a few nut kernels mixed with rice. When one tackles a mess of pilaf the sensation is the same as one experiences when going from soup to nuts in a "red-lak" emporium, only pilaf is not quite so filling.

Figures are naturally truthful, but unscrupulous statisticians often lead them astray.

IN MISERY FOR YEARS

Mrs. Courtney Tells How She Was Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Oskaloosa, Iowa.—"For years I was simply in misery from a weakness and awful pains—and nothing seemed to do me any good. A friend advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I did so and got relief right away. I can certainly recommend this reliable medicine to other women who suffer, for it has done such good work for me and I know it will help others if they will give it a fair trial."—Mrs. LEWIS COURTNEY, 106 8th Ave., West, Oskaloosa, Iowa.

Why will women drag along from day to day, year in and year out, suffering such misery as did Mrs. Courtney, when such letters as this are continually being published. Every woman who suffers from displacements, irregularities, inflammation, ulceration, backache, nervousness, or who is passing through the Change of Life should give this famous root and herb remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, a trial. For special advice write Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass. The result of its long experience is at your service.

A RICH PRIZE.

The Caspian Oil Fields Are Very Valuable.

There have been several reports of battles in Baku, and recently an account was published of the setting fire to Baku oil wells by Turkish troops, and the statements that this action adds another complication to diplomatic problems in the Caucasus.

A few years ago William Eleroy Curtis published a book, entitled "Around the Black Sea." Mr. Curtis did not confine his story to the Black Sea, but writes of the whole region. The following paragraphs with reference to the oil wells and the development of the country as it was six or eight years ago are of interest:

"Petroleum has been known in the foothills and along the (Caspian) sea coast at the eastern extremity of the Caucasus Mountains from the earliest times.

"There is a railway on each side of the Caucasus Mountains. That on the northern side runs from Baku, the oil centre, to the city of Rostov, at the mouth of the River Don and the head of the Sea of Azov. That on the south runs from Batoum on the Black Sea to Baku, and is the principal thoroughfare for the shipment of oil to other parts of Europe than Russia. The annual shipments of refined petroleum from Batoum to the rest of the world have averaged about 4,000,000 barrels, but the Russian refiners cannot compete with the Standard Oil Co., either in the quality or the price of their product. Russian oil has practically been driven out of all the European countries except Turkey, Roumania, Hungary and Russia, and the Standard Oil Company is now 'the light of Asia,' without a rival flame.

"After leaving Tiflis we were passing through a beautiful and highly cultivated agricultural country. When we awoke in the morning we were in a desert, and everything smelled of oil. The first thing I saw, looking out of the car window, was a long caravan of camels, loaded with cans of refined petroleum, plodding through the sands on the shores of the Caspian Sea.

In ancient times, for thousands of years—no one knows how long—the Persians used to come up to the shore of the Caspian Sea, where the city of Baku now stands, and scrape from the ground the seepage from the springs of oil that were found near the water. They used these scrapings for lubricating purposes, for fuel, for light, for healing wounds, and for various other useful purposes, and exercised much ingenuity in cleaning and applying them.

"At some remote date—it may have been as far back as the time of Daniel the Prophet—the wire worshippers, the followers of Zoroaster, found here several oil springs on fire. The naphtha must have caught fire by accident, but they considered it a miracle, and through many centuries made pilgrimages to worship and adore the flames. Ultimately they built a temple, a square structure of brick, with a dome and four chimneys, through which, in some ingenious manner, they conducted the natural gas which exhales from the naphtha springs, and thus were able to maintain four bright flames.

"The development of the petroleum industry was very slow and began late. The inhabitants of the old Persian city of Baku utilized the oil for light and fuel gas undisturbed until 1866, when a Russian named Kokreff and an Armenian named Mirzoeff obtained a concession from the Russian Government to operate wells and to refine the product. The specific gravity of the Baku oil is said to be much higher than that of the American oil. It has a naphthic basis, while the American oil has a paraffin base. The oil is more like that of California. It is better for fuel than for illuminating purposes, and is used for steaming on railways, and steamships in this part of the empire."

Heart Palpitated

Could Count Every Beat

When the heart begins to palpitate, it will beat fast for several seconds, then slow, then start to flutter, and a feeling of utter depression will come over your whole system, accompanied by weak, fainting and dizzy spells.

When the heart gets into this condition, you become weak, worn and miserable, and are unable to attend to either social, business or household duties.

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills will give prompt and permanent relief to all sufferers from any heart weakness or nerve derangement.

Mrs. Walter Greives, Apsley, Ont., writes:—"I had been run down, and doctors told me I was anaemic, but did not help me with their medicines. I could not sleep nights, my heart palpitated so, and I could count every beat.

I used to have such dizzy spells I would have to go to bed. I was not able to do any work for eight months. A cousin of mine had taken Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills and told me what they had done for her. I took eight boxes of them, and now I am able to help every day with the work. I am so thankful to tell others what they have done for me, so that they may try this great and wonderful remedy. I hope this may prove good to some one who is suffering the way I did."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 60c. a box at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Few People Know This

Large doses of pills for the liver are not as efficient as small doses.

The big dose purges its way through the system fast, but does not cleanse thoroughly.

The small dose (if right) acts gently on the liver, and gives it just the slight help it needs to do its own work, and do it well.

Take one pill regularly, until you know you are all right.

It takes a joint of beef to make a bottle of Bovril

Bovril contains the goodness of the beef.

THE vital elements that give beef its special place and value as a food are concentrated and stored in Bovril.

Just as the equivalent light of 32 candles is concentrated in one electric lamp, so the vital elements of beef—of many pounds of beef—are concentrated in a single bottle of Bovril.

But Bovril is not merely a precious food in itself; it possesses the peculiar power of enabling you to extract more nourishment from other foods. This gives Bovril its wonderful body-building power, proved by independent experiment to be from 10 to 20 times the amount taken. Bovril, therefore, in the true sense of the word, is a Great Food Saver.

Always keep Bovril in the house.

THE OLD GENERALS.

Young Soldiers Suffered Eclipse In Great War.

"Old men for counsel and young men for war," is an adage old as history. Nearly all wars have been fought by young men. The young men had a great part in the present war, although the age percentage was higher than in wars of the past, because of the enormous demand for men. But the distinction of this war is the fact that most of its generals in high command were men of mature years. Several were taken from the retired list after the great war began. Most of the great martial figures in history had their marked success while young men. Alexander died at thirty-three, Hannibal crossed the Alps at twenty-nine. Charlemagne began the conquest of Saxony before he was thirty. Godfrey of Bouillon was made king of Jerusalem at thirty-eight. There are only a few early exceptions. Caesar was fifty-one when he crossed the Rubicon and Cincinnatus was sixty-one when called from the plough.

Three of the great figures at Waterloo, Napoleon, Wellington and Ney, were each forty-six. Washington became commander-in-chief of the revolutionary armies at forty-three.

At the beginning of the great war Kitchener was 64. Haig will be 52 next June, Petain is 62, De Castelnau is 67. Foch was 67 last October, while Hindenburg was 71 on the same day. Pershing is 58. Mangin and Ludendorff are each in their mid- [illegible] advanced age. The conditions of fighting were such that line and brigade officers were subjected to the severest examinations to determine their physical fitness. The age of retirement was placed low, with the general in command held personally responsible for exceptions. But it is clear that the men who had the planning to do were unusually mature. The theory that older men would be unable, because of fixed habits of thought, to adapt their plans to the changed conditions of war-making is completely refuted by results.

Cost of Wreck Films.

Nowadays, through the medium of the cinema, it is possible to experience all but the unpleasant sensations of a great battle, a terrible railway smash, or a devastating explosion.

The heroism and financial expenditure required in the production of such films are scarcely realised.

Arranging a railway wreck is a simple matter. Cleaning up the debris is quite another. A train may escape comparatively unharmed in real life. In "reel" life the film critics are not satisfied unless it is all "busted up."—Tit-Bits.

ITALY VERSUS GREECE

ONE OF THE PROBLEMS BEFORE PEACE CONFERENCE.

Two Countries Desire to Secure Control of Portion of Albania and Dodecanese Islands In the Aegean Sea—Greeks Are Opposed to the Imperialistic Ideas of the Italian Government.

NO one expects any peace conference to be peaceable. But a peace conference which must carve up the earth and give everybody all they want has an impossible task. As the weeks go by it is becoming evident that the Versailles Conference is bound to leave a lot of people dissatisfied. The Central Powers, who will have to pay the piper, are sure to be peeved. But that is inevitable, and presents a less serious problem than the fact that some of the Allied Powers are also going to feel peeved. For now that every country is stating what it really wants, it is apparent that there are several claimants for every choice piece of real estate. For example, China wants Kiao Chao. It is Chinese territory. Germany took it from China, and in 1914 Japan declared it would give it back to China. But Japan has instructed its peace commissioners to insist that Kiao Chao be allotted to Japan. Either China or Japan must be disappointed. A similar issue about which much less is generally known has arisen between Greece and Italy with respect to the Epirus and the Dodecanese. Italy wants them for strategic reasons. Greece wants them because they are inhabited by Greeks.

Northern Epirus or Southern Albania lies between Greece and Albania on the eastern shore of the Adriatic, while the Dodecanese are a group of islands in the Aegean Sea. The two questions which at once suggest themselves are: (1) To whom do these territories now belong? (2) To what country should they rightfully belong? In answer to the first question Italy is in present possession and thus has nine points of the law in her favor. She has occupied the Dodecanese ever since the war between Italy and Turkey, and has been in a position to dominate Epirus ever since she drove the Austrians out of Albania. But Italy has an even stronger claim than one based on mere possession. She obtained from Russia, Great Britain and France a deed in fee simple to the Dodecanese and a part of Albania as items of the price she exacted for entering the war on the Allied side. The Secret Treaty of London, signed on April 26, 1915, by France, Great Britain, Russia and Italy, which enumerated the various payments of territory and money to be made to Italy for making war against Austria-Hungary, declares in paragraph vii.: "The southern coast of Albania, from the frontier of the Italian territory of Valona to Cape Stilos is to be neutralised."

In plain terms, this means that Greece is not to have it, and that Italy will dominate it. The fate of the Dodecanese is settled by article viii. of the same secret treaty: "Italy shall obtain full possession of all the islands of the Dodecanese at present occupied by her." The cynical may remark, "What's a treaty between friends?" but European statesmen take even a secret treaty seriously. Arthur J. Balfour is the British Foreign Minister, and will represent Great Britain at the Peace Conference. He was asked about the secret treaty with Italy in the House of Commons on June 20 of last year and said: "To these treaties we stand, the national honor is bound up with them. We mean to keep to the full the bargain we have made." But Great Britain also accepted President Wilson's fourteen specific points, together with the amplifications of later addresses, as the basis of the peace presently to be made. And so did Italy. What if the agreements of the secret treaties to which Britain and Italy are bound to conflict with the Wilson principles to which Britain and Italy are also bound? Which takes precedence?

There certainly is a conflict. At least that is the impartial conclusion after a scholarly investigation of the issues by a Balkan specialist who has looked into the matter for the benefit of President Wilson and the American Peace Commissioners. Prof. Stephen P. Duggan, of the College of the City of New York, one of the experts who has been working out peace problems for Col House, summarizes his conclusions as follows: "Northern Epirus, inhabited by Hellenized Albanians who desire incorporation with Greece, was merged in independent Albania by the powers in 1913 upon the demand of Italy for strategic reasons, namely, in order that Greece might not occupy both shores of the Straits of Corfu, and thereby allow Greece, either by itself or by other powers acting through its agency, to use the Straits as a naval base for operation against Italy.

"Such use, it was claimed, would rob Avlona of its value and threaten Italian control of the Adriatic. The people of the Dodecanese — the twelve islands of the Aegean taken from Turkey by Italy in the Tripolitan War—are wholly Greek in race, tongue and sentiment and clamor for union with their motherland. It would be absurd for the Italians to appeal to the principle of nationality in the case of the Trentino and Trieste and refuse such an appeal in the case of the Dodecanese." If Italy retains this territory it will be against the wishes of the inhabitants and against the wishes of Greece. Given President Wilson's principle of self-determination and the conclusion of American investigators the U. S. Commissioners would side with Greece. France and Great Britain, committed to Italy by the secret treaty, are in a different position. Where is the way out?

It isn't what man doesn't know that worries him, but what he knows others know he doesn't know.

CLEANSES YOUR HAIR MAKES IT BEAUTIFUL, THICK, GLOSSY, WAVY

Try this! All dandruff disappears and hair stops coming out.

Surely try a "Danderine Hair Cleanse" if you wish to immediately double the beauty of your hair. Just moisten a cloth with Danderine and draw it carefully through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; this will cleanse the hair of dust, dirt or any excessive oil—in a few minutes you will be amazed. Your hair will be wavy, fluffy and abundant and possess an incomparable softness, lustre and luxuriance.

Besides beautifying the hair, one application of Danderine dissolves every particle of dandruff; invigorates the scalp, stopping itching and falling hair.

Danderine is to the hair what fresh showers of rain and sunshine are to vegetation. It goes right to the roots, invigorates and strengthens them. Its exhilarating, stimulating and life-producing properties cause the hair to grow long, strong and beautiful.

You can surely have pretty, soft, lustrous hair, and lots of it, if you will spend a few cents for a small bottle of Knowlton's Danderine at any drug store or toilet counter and try it as directed.

Had No Gas Mask.

The war being now virtually over, the following story, recently related with great gusto by Gen. Petain, is perhaps a bit out-of-date. But it is a rattling good one, so here goes:

An American soldier in a front line trench (said Petain) was smoking furiously one of those big, black cigars our trans-Atlantic allies so greatly favor.

Suddenly he took it from between his lips, and offered it to a French soldier standing next to him.

"Here, Leon," he said, "hold this cigar a moment while I heave a bomb into the German trench."

But the Frenchman recoiled in dismay.

"Non, non, monsieur!" he loudly ejaculated. "Non, non! I will hold zee bomb, while you throw zee cigar."

Hair Often Ruined By Careless Washing

If you want to keep your hair looking its best, be careful what you wash it with. Don't use prepared shampoos or anything else, that contains too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and ruins it.

The best thing for steady use is just ordinary mulsified cocoanut oil (which is pure and greaseless), and is better than anything else you can use.

One or two teaspoonfuls will cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, which rinses out easily, removing every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves the scalp soft, and the hair fine and silky, bright, lustrous, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulsified cocoanut oil at any pharmacy, it's very cheap, and a few ounces will supply every member of the family for months.

WANTS TO CARRY POCKET ARTILLERY

In View of the "Hold-ups" in the Kingston District.

As a result of the "hold-ups" in the Kingston district, quite a number of people have been making application for permission to carry firearms. Justice of the Peace Geo. Hunter has had many appeals made to him, but he has only given permission to those whom he thinks should carry weapons.

A foreigner, who lives in Kingston was endeavouring to get a permit to carry a revolver on Wednesday morning, stating that his wife had been threatened.

BIG EATERS GET KIDNEY TROUBLE

Take a Glass of Salts Before Breakfast If Your Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers You.

The American men and women must guard constantly against Kidney trouble, because we eat too much and all our food is rich. Our blood is filled with uric acid which the kidneys strive to filter out, they weaken from overwork, become sluggish; the eliminative tissues clog and the result is kidney trouble, bladder weakness and a general decline in health.

When your kidneys feel like lumps of lead; your back hurts or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment or you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night; if you suffer with sick headache or dizzy, nervous spells, acid stomach, or you have rheumatism when the weather is bad, get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate clogged kidneys; to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure, makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water beverage, and belongs in every home, because nobody can make a mistake by having a good kidney flushing any time.

INCREASE YOUR PROFITS

Repairing and Renewing Broken Equipment in Time.

Handy Hints for Repairing Machinery, Harness, Gates and All Other Breakable Farm Equipment—If Work Is Done Before Spring Rush Many Valuable Hours Will Be Saved at a Time When Delay Spells Greatest Loss

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

THE time for a systematic overhauling of the farm equipment is at hand. Repairing at home means saving in two ways—a saving of expense and a saving of time.

Before attempting to take a machine apart it is well to thoroughly look over it to gain a clear idea of the general arrangement and location of the parts. Machines with few parts or parts whose relations are quite obvious, do not require to be marked, but machines whose parts are numerous and similar in size and in appearance should be given distinctive marks—similar marks being put on adjoining parts. These marks may be centre-pops arranged in devices so: ..... or letters stamped upon surface of the parts where there is no frictional contact.

In the stress of a busy season a broken tooth of a gear can be fixed up in a few minutes, and if properly done gears so repaired will often last an indefinite time—often many years. Chip and file the broken tooth down to the root. Draw centre line of tooth across width of rim. Drill the required number of holes, according to width of rim. A pin of wrought iron stock may be driven gently into the holes and filed to shape to match the other teeth. A better job may be made by tapping the plugs into the rim (Fig. 6).

To mend harness by sewing procure a couple of strong needles, a ball of high-grade flax shoe thread (No. 8), a ball of cobbler's wax, a straight and bent awl, and a clamp to hold the work. The clamp can be made from two oak barrel staves (Fig. 1). The thread should be made in length and strength according to the work to be done. For light work from 3 to five strands will suffice, for medium, like lines and girths, from 6 to 8 strands; and for heavy stitching, as tugs and breeching, it will require from 9 to 15 strands.

Break the thread by rubbing it down upon your knee, with your right hand, and give it a sudden jerk. It should break in a long ragged end. Wax ends enough to [illegible] together so as to form a long tapered point. Hold strands together in your left hand. With wax in right hand draw it over the ends a few times, enough to keep them together. Now throw strands over a nail, draw ends even, twine the end in left hand over forefinger, and rub the other end down on the right knee with the right hand. When well twisted rub on more wax. Thread a needle on each end, draw the thread through the eye for about two inches. Bend back the points of the thread and twist them well into the body of the thread (Fig. 1a).

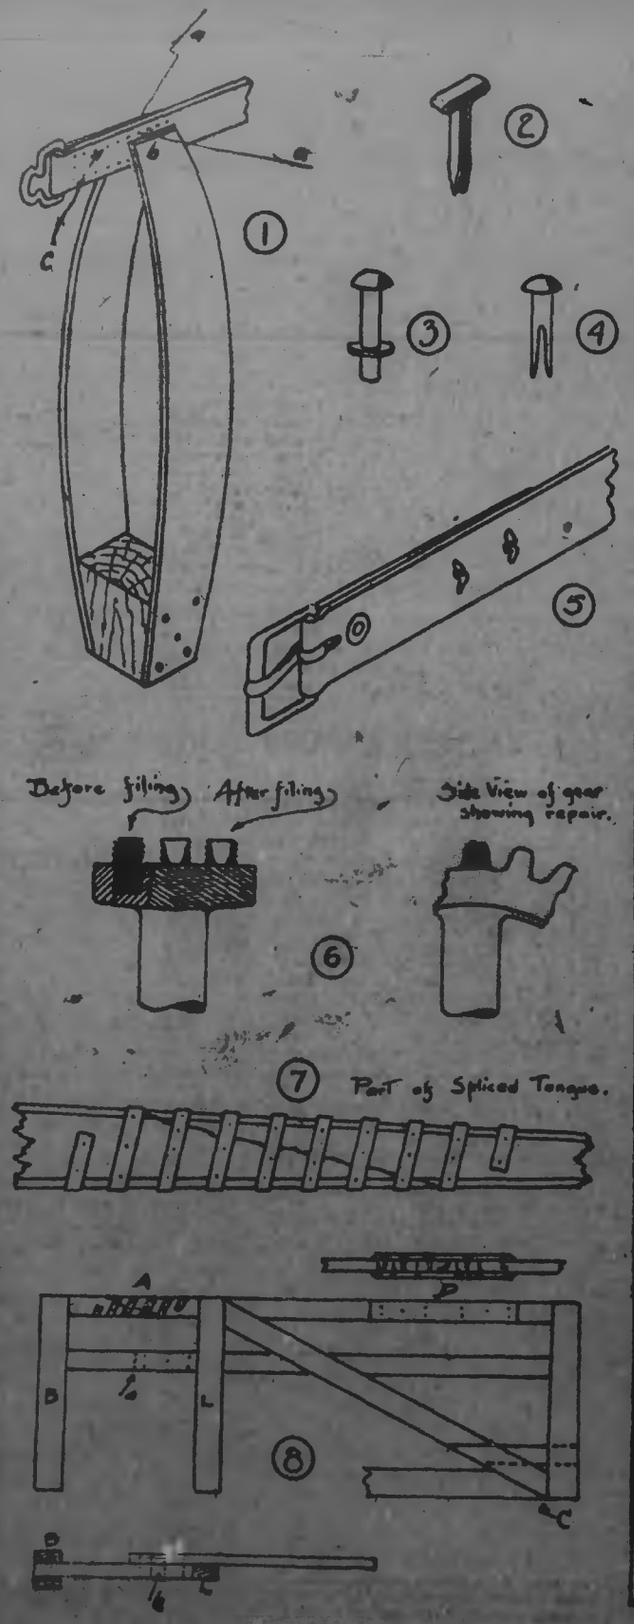
Pierce a hole in the work with a straight awl and insert a needle into the hole drawing the thread halfway through (Fig. 1b). Pierce another hole and pass a needle through for two or three inches. Through the same hole draw the other needle. With a thread in each hand pull them both quite tight. Repeat. Keep stitches straight and uniform in length (Fig. 1c).

For joining two pliable surfaces together in emergency there is, perhaps, nothing so handy, so strong and so neat as a rivet. An assortment of rivets should be kept on hand, both of soft iron tinned and of solid copper (Figs. 2, 3, 4). The split end clincher rivets are suitable for leather or stout woven material, as saddle girths and head halters; iron or copper flat head washer rivets may be used for leather, cloth, thin metal and for even thin strips of wood (Fig. 5).

The wagon is an important factor in the daily routine work of the farm, and should be kept in good running order, but it requires special consideration and experience to profitably repair the wheels, for unless the proper taper and "gather" is given to the spindle, and the axle set the right way, it will result in a hard-running wagon, the wheel grinding on the collar or nut instead of playing easily between them. The farmer, however, can attend to loose spokes, tires and hub bands, checked hubs, etc. After renewing the broken parts and tightening up tires and loose skeins, clean the wagon thoroughly, fill the checks with some good filler and give the whole a coat of paint. This will preserve the wood and prevent shrinking. A broken shaft or tongue may be efficiently spliced with hoop iron as shown in Fig 7. The iron can easily be bent round close by fixing one end first and then pulling it over with one hand and tapping it with a hammer at the same time.

Assume a broken rail of a gate, hay or stock rack. The old bar or rail is sawn off about a foot from the down rail L as shown by dotted line in sketch 8a. A short piece of new stuff is then driven into the mortice in the head (B) and cut off the right length; the two are then nailed together as shown at 8b in part plan. If broken at A (Fig 8) the splicing may be made as shown in sketch by wrapping hoop iron round it, or by nailing on each side strong strips of hardwood as at D (Fig. 8).

One of the first places for a gate to get rotten is at the junction of brace and bar or back caused by wet lodging there. The only way to fix this is, as shown at C (Fig. 8) by nailing strip of hardwood firmly to brace as low down as bottom rail will allow.—Prof. John Evans, O. A. College, Guelph.



All Fat People Should Know This

The world owes a debt of gratitude to the author of the now famous Marmola Prescription, and is still more indebted for the reduction of this harmful, effective obesity remedy to tablet form. Marmola Prescription Tablets can now be obtained at all drug stores, or by writing direct to Marmola Co., 864 Woodward Ave., Detroit, Mich., and their reasonable price (75 cents for a large case) leaves no excuse for dieting or violent exercise for the reduction of the overfat body to normal proportions.

Ignorance may be bliss but one's knowledge of one's ignorance is what blisters.

"Le Canada" Suggests That Parliament Cut Down on the Overhead Expenses

TOO MANY OFFICIALS

(Special to Examiner.)

MONTREAL, February 26. — Discussing the reconstruction of the Cabinet, which it says is necessary because during the war the Ministry was augmented by Departments not now needed, Le Canada says the maintenance of twenty-three Ministers is costing the country dear.

The first thing to do is to get rid of Rowell, President of the Council, whose duties will revert to the Prime Minister. Perhaps that would help to keep "that great vagabond," Borden, more at home. The Ministry of Customs and Inland Revenue could be permanently united; the Secretary of State become Minister of External Affairs; abolish the Ministry of Overseas Militia; allow the Minister of the Interior to take charge as formerly of Colonization and Immigration, and give him the task of looking after the repatriation of soldiers. The posts of Parliamentary Secretary of Foreign Affairs and of Militia it also considers should be abolished. It is necessary, Le Canada, concludes that the Ministers set an example of economy.

Comment On Wilson's Speech

French Press Not Interested in Political Fights in United States.

(United Press.)

PARIS, Feb. 26.—"The home affairs of the United States are none of our business," declared the "Temps," in discussing President Wilson's Boston address. "We will not try to know if the campaign in the United States against the League of Nations is really aimed against the covenant, or if it is only the pretext for a fight between political parties. Let us simply be allowed to observe that, seen from this side, where the world conflict was born and where might rise worse conflicts in the future, the League appears to be a necessity against which no consideration of party could prevail. "We wish, and confidently wait, for American public opinion to ratify the League."

WASHINGTON, Feb. 26.—Secretary of the Navy Daniels, speaking last night before the National Press Club, declared that the American people today were face to face with making a choice either of a League of Nations to safeguard the peace won by valour, or of entering upon a career of such naval and military expansion as would "enable us single-handed to guarantee American rights and American interests from Halifax to Tierra Del Fuego."

THE IRISH QUESTION

Serious Crisis May Result From Action of the War Cabinet

REQUEST REFUSED

(United Press.)

DUBLIN, Feb. 26. — A serious crisis was believed to have arrived to-day as the result of the war cabinet's rejection of Lord French's request that the Irish recruiting council undertake the re-employment of ten thousand Irish soldiers in connection with demobilization in this country. Chief Secretary McPherson has informed the Council that its services are no longer required.

The soldiers may be so neglected that they will join the Sinn Feiners, said Captain Gwynn, a member of the Council.

Discharge Pay For Soldiers

New Arrangements Have Been Made by the Authorities

Considerable dissatisfaction has been felt on the part of returned men in the city on account of the fact that in many cases men who had applied last for gratuity money from the Government had received it first. This Captain Morrison explained was accounted for by a lack of system in Kingston and matters had been so far straightened out of the apparent chaos that all gratuity money will be paid and settled in the course of the next ten days.

Post Discharge Pay.

In reference to the post discharge pay which through some mismanagement had been so handled that the returned man received the whole cheque, Captain Morrison said that the matter had been arranged so that, taking for example the case of the man who was entitled to five months' pay and had already received $300 while his wife received nothing, this man will still have $200 coming to him. Of this $100 will be paid to the man and the balance paid in five monthly installments of $20 each to his wife.

Meeting of The Board of Works

Committee Will Not Permit Gasoline Tanks on the Street

At a meeting of the Board of Works held last evening, Fitzgerald and Co., Carriage manufacturers, corner of Brock and Water streets, asked permission to place a Bowser gasoline tank on the street. The City Clerk was instructed to write Fitzgerald's reminding them that a by-law is now in force which provides that all gasoline tanks now on the streets must be taken off six months after the conclusion of the war. Mr. J. J. Duffus and the Hicks Coal Company were refused the same privilege last year under the same by-law.

New Tank Wanted.

A new tank suitable for holding road oil will be needed very soon by the city and the Peterboro Machine and Lubricating Co. offered one to the city for a small yearly rental or offered to sell it outright. This tank is not in good condition, and City Engineer Parsons was not in favour of buying it. The Henry Hope Company also have a tank for sale. Chairman Phelan and the City Engineer will approach the Henry Hope Company with an offer of $300.

A new team of horses for the Board of Works will also be bought.

A rock drill for some of the city streets will be purchased.

The front axle of the road roller is in need of repairs, and the City Engineer will have it done at once.

Illuminated Signs.

Alderman Edgar moved, supported by Alderman Garside, that a by-law be prepared by the City Engineer and the City Solicitor, stating definite hours in which all lighted signs in the city must be illuminated for a certain period each night. The motion was carried.

A request was received from His Lordship Bishop O'Brien that a number of trees be removed from in front of the Priests' and Bishop's residence. The request was granted.

Tenders for road oil for 1919 were read to the committee, and Alderman McIntyre moved that the tender of the Imperial Oil Co. be accepted. The price under this tender is 10½c for an Imperial gallon with 40% alsphaltic content. Alderman Turner seconded the motion and it was carried.

A number of applications for the removal of trees were also received and Mr. Parsons was instructed to look into the matter.

Creation Of National Workers' Soviet As Lower Legislative Branch Of German Government Is Favoured By President

Ebert Believes That the Soviets Cannot Be Crushed-Soviet Would Not Have Power to Veto Measures Passed by the National Assembly.

THOUSANDS OF SOVIETS THROUGHOUT GERMANY

(By Frank J. Taylor, Copyright 1919, By the United Press.)

WEIMAR, Feb. 26.—Creation of a national workers' soviet as the lower legislative branch of the German government is favoured by the President as the only solution of the political and economic situation.

Ebert believes that the Soviets cannot be crushed, and that they will not be pacified until they are formally recognized and given governmental responsibilities. According to his plant the proposed national soviet would deal with all industrial questions, but would have no power to veto measures passed by the Reischstag which would remain the sovereign department of the government. The Bundesrat, which is powerless and virtually useless, might be abolished to make way for the national soviet.

Deny Necessity.

Chancellor Scheidmann and other members of the cabinet have not yet accepted the President's radical scheme. They deny the necessity for recognizing the Soviet, hoping those bodies will disappear gradually or be crushed. But many strong leaders in the Reichstag, (National Assembly), are inclined to side with Ebert and there are indications to-day that the issue may shortly be forced to a decision.

While the delegates are tediously haranguing over the details of the constitution, which ignores the existence of thousands of Workers' Soviets throughout Germany, the political and economic situation is becoming more and more acute, bringing with it the realization that positive steps must be taken soon in one direction or the other. The matter is carefully avoided in public discussions, but under currents are revealing the growing split regarding the Soviets.

Forced to Return.

The Bavarian Reichstag delegates, who left for Munich immediately after the assassination of Premier Eisner, were stopped by Bavarian frontier guards and forced to return to Weimar. Official reports received from Munich to-day said the Soviets had formed a coalition with the Socialists there and that affairs were being administered amicably by both factions.

This situation has put the Weimar government in a quandry, for while it has declared it will not recognize a Soviet republic in Bavaria, it has gone on record as favouring the Socialist control. It can be stated, however, that under no circumstances will Prussian troops be sent into Bavaria, owing to the bitter feeling in that country against Prussia.

Radicals and Conservatives, although actuated by different motives, are consistently opposing the constitutional question being advocated by the dominating coalition of Majority Socialists and Democrats.

Minister of the Interior Preusse made a lengthy appeal to the delegates to break away from old traditions, and pointed out the necessity for socialization of public utilities, including railways and telegraphs. He encountered considerable opposition, principally from the Bavarians.

John Collins Was Remanded

Accused is Being Held on a Charge of Evading Military Service Call

Thomas John Collins, who was arrested some time ago at an auction sale near Omemee appeared in police court this morning on a charge of being a defaulter. The evidence of Serg. Carmody, M.M. of the Military Police, was heard telling how Collins was taken into custody. Mr. F. D. Kerr conducted the defence and Mr. Fordyce Strickland acted for the Crown Attorney. The Crown has completed its case but the defence asked that the case be enlarged till more witnesses can be secured.

After some argument the enlargement was made until March 4.

"The Ides of March", said Mr. Kerr quoting Shakespeare's classic," That bodes ill for the prisoner. But both the prisoner and the defence counsel were supremely confident.

Collins has not elected yet. He may elect to be tried before Magistrate Dumble, before Judge Huycke, with or without a jury or by the circuit judge. His bond of $2000 was renewed by his bondsmen.

PREPARATION OF THE PEACE SETTLEMENT WITH GERMANY

(By Fred S. Ferguson, United Press)

PARIS, Feb. 26.—Preparation of the preliminary peace settlement with Germany was continued to-day. The work at present is largely in the hands of the various committees handling such details as reparation and responsibility for the war.

Marshal Foch has personally conferred with the Supreme War Council on matters affecting Germany's military status after the peace is signed.

The committees individually report rapid headway. All members of the Committee on Reparation have been asked to submit figures representing their ideas of the damages which should be collected from Germany, together with the method of collection. In the meantime, the committee is said to be approaching the basis of direct damages for which America stands.

Responsibility for War.

The Committee on Responsibility for the War is understood to have reached the point when the degree of culpability of various individuals is being discussed. Territorial questions are progressing rapidly toward adjustment. An open door policy regarding Morocco was clearly established when the question was first presented to the "Big Five."

John O'Kelley, representative of the provisional Irish republic, has not yet appeared before the American delegates, but it is said he will be received the same as any one else if he asks for an audience. The general opinion seems to be that the Irish question will be taken up in the conference eventually.

Original Cost Of Hunter St. Bridge Reduced By Large Amount

New Tenders Will Be Called For —No Change in the Plans—List of Reductions.

TROLLEY LINES

A reduction of $72,016 in the total cost of the new Hunter street overhead bridge was submitted to the Special Bridge Committee and the Board of Works, yesterday afternoon and evening by Mr. Frank Barber, the consulting engineer. The reductions are not based on a change in the plans, on decorations, the width, of the approaches or the roadway but are reductions in costs and charges usually thought inseparable with such a structure. The following list of reductions was submitted by Mr. Barber:

Reductions.

Trolley poles	$ 3400.
Overestimate on cement	4516.
Six months penalty	6000.
Bond against collapse	2000.
Filling at 90c. sq. yd.	4600.
Maintenance of traffic	4600.
Arch at east and west end...	17600.
On cost plus basis	20000.
Steps of Wood	1300.
Ramp on south side	8000.
Total .. .. /.....	$ 72016.
Low Bid	$372380.
Less	$ 72016.

Original Plans.

1. The original plans call for trolley poles on the new bridge but these will be eliminated as the railway will not be laid over the bridge immediately after it is completed. This would make a reduction of $3400.

2. Mr. Barber in his original plans estimated cement at $2.70 a barrel but different cement companies offered cement at $2.50 a barrel which would reduce the cost of cement by $4,516.

3. The city allow the contracting company one year to build the bridge The lowest tenderer asked for a period of 18 months. He would therefore have to pay a penalty for 6 months which if reduced from the total cost would amount to $6000.

4. A guarantee bond against collapse could be eliminated. The guarantee bond is good after the bridge has stood for one year for a period of five years and never yet has a concrete bridge collapsed within the time that a guarantee bond specifies. The contractors are also better satisfied because it does not affect their credit in any way. This would make a further reduction of $2000.

5. Filling or gravel would ordinarily cost $1.50 a square yard but if the filling in Agnour's Hill could be obtained from the Board of Education the haul would be very shorter and consequently much cheaper; a saving of $4600.

6. The temporary bridge could be constructed at London street instead of Hunter street. Under the agreement with the Quaker Oats a bridge must be constructed across the Otonabee at London street. But if they build this bridge at once two birds will be killed with one stone, the agreement with the Quaker Oats will be fulfilled and traffic will be maintained while the new structure is being built. This will cause a further reduction of $4600.

7. Filling would only cost 90c a yard. If it is taken further east and west on either side and filling is used instead of constructing arches a total of $17600. would be eliminated.

8. Under the "Cost Plus" basis a tenderer would be offered the actual cost of the bridge plus a lump sum (likely $25,000) which would be clear profit. If this was done instead of handing over the total from which

Prisoners Are Missing

Three Thousand British Prisoners of War in Germany Are Unaccounted For

(Canadian Press.)

LONDON, Feb. 26. — Replying to a question in the House of Commons, Captain Guest said that a number of officers and other ranks officially accepted as war prisoners, who had not yet been accounted for by the Germans, approximated 3,000, including Imperial and Colonial troops and the navy. It was not expected that many were alive. As a result of a recent search in Germany, sixteen sick and wounded prisoners were reported and remained, because it was thought not advisable to move them.

Funeral Of Hugo Lundgren

The Deceased Was An Expert Ceramic Engineer

The funeral of the late Hugo Lundgren took place this afternoon at two-thirty o'clock from the residence of Mr. A. F. Lane, 226 Brock street, to Little Lake cemetery.

The late Mr. Lundgren graduated from the high school in Harnosand, Sweden, and from there went to Upsala University. He then went to a technical college at Hola and received his engineering degree. From Hola he went to Germany to gain more experience and subsequently specialised as a ceramic engineer. Before leaving Germany he held a position in Aachen, near Belgium, as engineer of a concern manufacturing porcelain products for electrical purposes. After a short stay in his native land he came to America, and after holding a position for a short time in the United States, accepted a position with the Canadian General Electric Company of this city, which position he held at the time of his death.

It had always been the ambition of the late Mr. Lundgren to attain the highest possible standard of efficiency in his work. He was considered one of the best experts of ceramic engineering on this continent and on frequent occasions had given interesting papers concerning this subject to engineering societies in New York, Chicago, Buffalo, Toronto, as well as in Peterborough. He had a brilliant future before him and his death at such an early age will be deeply regretted by all who knew him.

Souvenir Hunters Carried Away the Flowers—Candles from Church.

OTTAWA, Feb. 26. — Souvenir fiends have stripped the grave of Sir Wilfrid Laurier of the floral tributes which came from all parts of Canada, taking all except the crest sent by the city of Montreal. They also operated at the Basilica, taking the remains of the candles.

STRIKE AVERTED

Parliamentary Commission Will Investigate the Mining Situation and Make a Report

ACTION POSTPONED

(United Press.)

LONDON, Feb. 26.—Premier Lloyd George's assurance that the Parliamentary Commission which will investigate the mining situation, will report by March 20, may avert the threatened miners' strike, it was intimated to-day. Miners' representatives at their conference to-day, were expected to recommend that the strike, overwhelmingly voted by 800,000 miners in the recent ballot, be postponed until after the Commission's report. In case the Commission advises accession to most of the miners' demands, it is assumed that the walk-out will be called o.

The bill providing for the Commission passed the House of Commons last night, and was to be taken up by the House of Lords to-day. In case the miners do go out, they have been practically assured of the backing of the railway and transport workers.

Grenadier Guards Return Home

Were Given an Enthusiastic Reception in London.

(Canadian Press.)

LONDON, Feb. 26. — The Second Battalion of Grenadier Guards received an enthusiastic welcome on its return to London from Germany yesterday. Although no ceremony had been arranged and the hour of arrival was uncertain, immense crowds assembled at St. Pancras station, which was thronged, large crowds being congregated outside. Massed bands played "See the Conquering Heroes Come" as the men left their train. General Fielding, the commandant of the London district, welcomed the battalion on behalf of the King, and then the Guards began a triumphal march across London to Chelsea barracks, precedented scenes were witnessed as the troops proceeded through the crowded streets.

Of the original unit that left England in 1914, only twelve men survived to take part in this homecoming.

(United Press.)

BERLIN, Feb. 26. — General Ludendorff, who has been refused permission by the Government of Sweden to remain longer in that country, has written to President Ebert saying he has completed a book justifying his actions during the war and that he desires to return to Germany to publish it and resume his services to the Fatherland.

"The interests of Germany are my interests," he wrote. "It is necessary that light be thrown on the work I accomplished in the four years of the war on the origin of our misfortunes."

A Coalition Government Is Assured

Different Parties Repudiate Monarchistic Tendencies—Socialists in Majority.

(United Press Service.)

BERNE, Feb. 26. — A coalition government in Austria is now assured, despatches from Vienna stated today. It was said that the Socialist Democrats who won a large majority in the recent elections to the National Assembly, have agreed to cooperate with the Christian Socialists on the condition that the latter will not oppose the union with Germany. The Christian Socialists have publicly repudiated charges of Monarchistic tendencies.

National Schools Debate in House

Member for Frontenac will move for Discussion in Commons—Question will also come up in the Senate.

(Canadian Press.)

OTTAWA, Feb. 26. — F. Edwards of Frontenac, intends to test the opinoin of the House of Commons on the principle of National Schools and will move a resolution in the House to secure a discussion on the matter at an early date.

In the Senate yesterday Hon. Rufus Pope of Bedford, Que., undertook to move a similar resolution, but owing to some irregularity in the wording, withdrew it for the moment.

It is evident that the question will be debated in both Houses.

A FITTING TRIBUTE.

The proposal made by the Ottawa Journal that the Dominion Government should vote a pension to Lady Laurier equal to at least the salary which Sir Wilfrid received as leader of the Opposition, has been, as was to be expected, enthusiastically received by the press of Canada. Liberal and Conservative journals alike acclaim the suggestion, and Canadians as a whole would be delighted to hear that the Government has acknowledged the great debt that this country owed to the famous statesman by providing an adequate allowance for the wife whom he loved so dearly. Sir Wilfrid Laurier served Canada, and Canada alone, during his whole life. The energy and ability and talent he devoted to furthering the welfare of the Dominion would have won him a fortune probably had they been used in his own private interests. But to enrich himself was the thing that was furthest away from Laurier's thoughts. His one aim was to serve Canada. "He found the colony and left it a nation," to quote from the eloquent funeral oration of Monsignor Burke. It is as a tribute to the memory of Canada's greatest statesman that the people of the country are now asking their representatives in Parliament to give practical demonstration of the Dominion's gratitude by voting an adequate and substantial yearly allowance to Lady Laurier.

PETERBORO'S CLAIM

The announcement that Peterboro has been chosen as a demobilization centre for the 2nd Battalion has aroused the keenest interest in this city. The people of Peterboro would welcome an opportunity of receiving in a fitting style the unit with which the military careers of so many of Peterboro's soldiers have been connected. The battalions of the 1st Canadian Division were formed the constituents recruited in Aug-

use, 1914, by the 57th Regiment, Peterboro Rangers, became No. 1 Company of the 2nd Battalion and when the eight company plan was dropped in favor of four companies of 250 men each, Peterboro's quota was united with a Toronto detachment to form A Company. It fell to the lot of Major Geo. W. Bennett of Peterboro to command this company and when the test came in the Second Battle of Ypres that very gallant officer fell while leading his men in a desperate charge in the early morning of the fateful 23rd of April. Many a well known Peterboro boy died that day, others were so badly wounded that they never returned to the line. A few fell into the hands of the Huns and after nearly four years imprisonment are now, thank God, coming back to us. That was the first battle test of the 2nd Battalion. Since that terrible second battle of Ypres the Iron Seconds have fought on many a field and taken a glorious share in many a success and never without Peterboro soldiers playing a notable part in every action. The gaps have been filled by new drafts and Peterboro is still well represented in the 2nd Battalion. Capt. Hubert Eastwood M.C., Regimental Sergt. Major Ernie Nicholls D.C.M., whose story at the front is that of the Iron Seconds because he has been with them from the first, and many other gallant soldiers from this city are still carrying on with the Eastern Ontario unit. And for this reason and because of Peterboro's splendid record as a recruiting centre, this city has claims to be used as a desperate centre for the 2nd Battalion at least and possibly for other units as well that cannot be too strongly pressed upon the authorities. It is expected that the effort to have the 2nd Battalion demobilized here will be urged upon the military authorities as persistently and effectively as possible. Peterboro wants an opportunity to receive the Iron Seconds with open arms and by the warmth and enthusiasm of the reception to be given this unit to show what she thinks of all her citizens who went out to be soldiers and made a good job of it against the professional soldiery of Prussia.

CAIRO TO AUSTRALIA BY AIR-PLANE.

In an address to Australasians in London on February 20, General Sir Frederic H. Sykes, Controller of Civil Aviation, announced that the British Government had been giving a good deal of attention to establishing an air route from Cairo to Australia for commercial uses. Doubtless some of his hearers were mildly amused. Aviation on such a scale they were unable to visualize; the distance was immense, the difficulties were insuperable. Yet Major General Salmond, commanding the Royal Air Forces in the Middle East, flew from Cairo to Karachi in the Bombay Presidency, 2,548 miles, with stops, in thirty-six hours in December last. The distance traversed was more than one-third of a direct route to the northwest coast of Australia. Other aviators could have taken up the enterprise where General Salmond paused on his journey to Delhi, crossed India to Calcutta; skirted the northern shore of the Bay of Bengal into Burma, steered for Rangoon, and made their way down the Malay Peninsula to Singapore, without flying over any water. Between Singapore and Sumatra the Strait of Malacca is only fifty miles wide, less than one hour of flying.

Four hundred and fifty miles southeast of the point where aviators would reach Sumatra in Sunda Strait, twenty miles wide, separating Sumatra from Java. Beyond Java, 600 miles long, the other and smaller Sunda Islands stretching out, Bali, Lombok, Sumbawa, Flores, Adenara, Lomblen, Panta, Ombay, and Timor, with only narrow channels between them. Between Amanton in Timor and North-Western Australia there are 300 miles of blue water. From Cairo to Singapore there is no sea for the aviator to cross, and from Singapore to Australia the Sunda Islands, for 2,000 miles, afford what is practically an all-land route. At Amamaboag the flying man would only have to tighten his belt and settle himself for a four-hours' sprint.

It is, of course, true that before so long a journey through the air could be attempted the way would have to be blazed by engineers and mechanicians, whose concern it would be to map out and construct landing stations; and before them would go pioneers, chiefly men of the diplomatic service, to arrange terms and conditions in Asia Minor, Persia, Beluchistan, and in the Sunda Island archipelago; elsewhere the aviators would pass over territory of the British Empire. Negotiations with the progressive Dutch in the Sunda Islands would take little time, and there should be no problem in those lands in Western Asia where British influence is now paramount as a result of the great war.

Nowhere along the route is there dearth of places of importance, although it is obvious that the line of travel would be irregular. To India it would run through Jerusalem, Damascus, Bagdad, Ispahan, Shiraz and thence through Southern Persia to Bela in Beluchistan, which is less than 200 miles from Karachi. Over India, Burma, and the Malay Peninsula British organization would have a clear field, and in the Sunda Islands the Dutch would provide landing stations in the principal towns. Propaganda and some expenditure of money would be necessary, no doubt, among tribes that the Dutch govern with more or less friction, the aviator not always being sure of coming down in centres of civilization. Plenty of flying men would volunteer for the Cairo-Australia air route. Preparations might take a year; probably less, for enterprises of greater difficulty were pushed through during the war in an amazingly brief time.

To read the elaborate report of the Civil Aerial Transport Committee, organized in the summer of 1917, is to understand how thoroughly the British are in earnest about converting the airship to commercial uses. On that committee are some of the most eminent soldiers and civilians of the Empire. They have studied civil aerial transport from every point of view, the engineer's, the manufacturer's, the merchant's, the lawyer's, the financier's, and the statesman's. They are not dreamers but practical men, and they believe that the airship can be used for transportation all over the earth as an auxiliary to the railway train, the motor vehicle, and the steamship. They have faith that the time is not far distant when the airship will play an important part in the affairs of the world. A London to Capetown service may be established before the end of the year. Pioneers are already in the field in Africa between Cairo and the Cape of Good Hope, and they are not letting the grass grow under their feet. I would be well for us in America to consider this observation in the British committee's report: "It is scarcely necessary to point out the extreme importance to this country "(England) of being first in the field "in the matter of aerial transport."—New York Times.

Beefsteak and Mashed Potatoes

Bill of Fare For A Peterboro Soldier Overseas.

In a letter received recently by Mr. Alex. O'Brien, 450 Driscoll street, from his son, Pte. Charles Francis O'Brien, who is at present at Crepey France, with the American Expeditionary Force, Pte. O'Brien gives a graphic description of conditions as he has found them overseas. "For a couple of days," he said, "all his division had to eat was 'canned Willie' and French hard tack, however, later the mails improved and to-day, we had beefsteak and mashed potatoes, bread, coffee and apricots.

In describing Crepey, he said, "this town is about twenty kilos from Toul. Since we came here we have been sleeping in hay lofts with pigs, sheep and cows. It is getting cold here, and the ground is all frozen up." Pte. O'Brien concluded by stating that he expects to return to the States where, according to information that he has received the Americans are to parade in Philadelphia, Pittsburg and New Jersey.

To-Morrow's WAIST Sale

We find much pleasure in giving good service

Creating a New Standard of Value in the

Voile Blouses at $2.65 each

If you tried, as a matter of fact several times to find a real good blouse at $2.65, then we invite your particular examination of these.

First of all, many stores, even in New York, where the waists are made, would not think of selling these blouses for $2.65. They belong in the class of high-priced blouses. Made of plain white or colored voile, striped voile and a number of other effects, with or without collars. Some of the striped voiles have white collars. A number are very prettily trimmed with lace, showing the new collar effects. All exceptionally well made. These blouses at $2.65 are such splendid values we feel certain they will be sold quickly. Whether we can get another lot or not depends on conditions arising. So then you can't possibly go wrong if you buy one or more. Other prices are $1.89, $2.65, $3.45

Work Waists $1.25 each

FORMER CHATHAMITE IS SHOT BY POLICE; HE SHOT UP HOTEL

TOLEDO, Ohio., Feb. 25.—Following a revolver duel with police officers at the Waldorf Hotel here, James W. McGregor, former Detroit saloon keeper and a native of Chatham, was shot and killed after he barricaded himself in his room in the hotel and defied the police to arrest him.

For several days McGregor has been indulging heavil yhere his friends say, and he was believed to be on the verge of delirium tremens, when shortly before noon he pulled a revolver from his pocket and began firing it in the lobby of the hotel. Women guests screamed, while the bullets flew wildly about the place, but fortunately striking nobody.

Then McGregor made a rush for his room as the police arrived, and flinging himself inside the room, snapped the lock and declared he would never be taken alive. After breaking in the door, the officers attempted to seize the crazed man who began firing again. The fire was returned, and McGregor fell with three bullets in his brain. The body will be sent to Detroit for interment.

When a man knows he is wrong he can nearly always prove that he isn't by arguing the matter with his wife.

CHIEF ENGINEER ALMOST GIVES UP

Thought He Would Have to Stop Working—Tanlac Makes Him Well Again

"To my mind Tanlac is the greatest medicine in the world," said O. H. Mahaffey, chief engineer of the Life & Casualty building, Nashville, Tenn.

"For two years," he continued, "I suffered awfully with the worst kind of stomach trouble and went down until I lost forty-eight pounds. My back ached terribly and I suffered so much misery from indigestion that I thought I had ulcerated stomach and was actually afraid to eat anything but a little oatmeal and sweet milk. I got weaker every day till finally, as nothing I took did me any good, I thought I would have to throw up my job.

"My wife read in the papers where a man who had suffered like I was had been helped by taking Tanlac, and she begged me to try it. After I had taken Tanlac a few days I began to get hungry and started in eating like I was starved, and nothing hurt me a bit. Soon those awful pains in my stomach and back were gone, I sleep fine at night now and get up in the morning full of life and energy and ready for my work."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. B. Warne Drug Co., Ltd., in Havelock by A. C. Denike, in Lakefield by Tanner Drug Co., Ltd., in Fowler's Corners by W. A. Hunter, in Gelert by A. J. Scott, in Westwood by G. Pringle & Son.

May Be Plenty Of Snow Yet

The Renfrew Mercury says that the local weather observer goes back to the winter of 1868 for a comparison to this winter. Snow falling in November and December, 1868 did not amount to much in the matter of volume, and there was but little during January, 1869—just as we see it to-day—but in February of 1869 there came a prodigious downfall. It commenced on February 15th, continuing all day, and also on St. Valentine's day. Thereafter until late spring there were minor snowfalls, giving the country more of "the beautiful" in 1869 than it has ever since had in any one winter.

Crops garnered in the fall of 1868 were very poor and so scarce was feed that stock owners went to their wood-lots and cut branches from the trees for cows to browse upon. In the lumber camps, corn imported from the States was fed to horses, on account of a lack of oats. A bountiful crop was next autumn harvested; so that when snow fell in plentiful quantities in the winter of 69-70 no one was inconvenienced through the lack of feed for live stock. Winters of deep snow are usually followed by good crops in the autumn next succeeding, and, if a scarcity of snow spells a scarcity in the crop yield, then we can all have a welcome for a snowfall which should fittingly mark the semi-centennial of that of 1869. Foster, the weather prophet, who through ouija board or otherwise has been forecasting weather conditions fairly accurately, says we are this winter to get our snow in March.

Always speak to your barber when you meet him on the street. It's about the only time you can get in a word.

German Government Threatened by Spartacans

Extremists Are Now Active in Saxony—Cut Off Railroad Communication.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

BERLIN, Feb. 25.—The Spartacans and Radical Socialists have launched a movement to overthrow the existing government in Saxony, where the newly-elected Diet was to assemble yesterday. A general strike has been proclaimed and railway communication with Halle, one of the principal junction points in Saxony, has been broken. The Spartacans are reported to have taken possession of Plauen and other industrial centres.

The Independent Socialists in Leipzig have issued a manifesto demanding the retirement of the Weimar government, declaring that is is "an impediment to the Socialist and the liberation of the proletariat."

No Chinese Coolies As Canadian Labour

"Rot" Is Term Used in Regard to Maxim's Statement.

(Special to The Examiner.)

OTTAWA, Feb. 26.—The statement of Hudson Maxim to the effect that a million coolies are to be imported into the Dominion is characterized here as "rot." The only Chinese coolies being allowed into Canada are children under 16 years of age who desire to secure education here. It is probable that a number of the coolies used in France may pass through Canada on their way home, but most of them will go by the Suez, but in any case none will stay in Canada.

ARMISTICE SIGNED ON EASTERN FRONT

Poles and Ukrainians Make Terms.

(Special to The Examiner.)

WARSAW, Feb. 24.—(Delayed)—An armistice was concluded between the Poles and Ukrainians last night, effective at six o'clock this evening, according to an official telegram received from Lemberg to-day.

APPEAL FOR GRENFELL MISSION

Extract from Letter.

"For two weeks we have been working night and day, that is, my secretary Mr. Finley, a Yale man, and myself, around a deep inlet known as White Bay. There we encountered so much real poverty, so much need of even the elements of life, viz., bread and clothes to cover, we came back inclined to wonder if life there anyhow had anything to offer. We saw men and women hungry, with both beriberi and scurvy, from want of food, empty cupboards, and naked children, while the fish, plentiful enough in the north, had partially failed on this part of the coast."

This is the cause to which you contribute when you make your offering to the Grenfell Mission. Leave your offering at the office of this paper and it will be forwarded to Mrs. James Wood, Treasurer, Monaghan Road. 3d46

Victories of Peace

If Canada is to share in the Victories of Peace she must translate into industrial activity the spiritual valor of her men. War developed untold possibilities in human energies.

They and we know the part that engineering played in war, but they and we know that its part will be infinitely greater when applied to the arts of peace.

Men who did big things are not going to let their energies lie fallow because the conflict is done. Already they are grasping industrial opportunities, and the driving force and the unconquerable spirit that kept them at the big task overseas will make them formidable competitors here.

Men contemplating new enterprises or the re-establishment of old industries are invited to visit us and draw upon our experience in all matters pertaining to Power Transmission Engineering.

We welcome them back into industrial life, and we offer them the best that we have to aid them in re-establishing their industrial footing.

We have made great strides in productive capacity in the past four years; and we are eager to match this capacity with the initiative and ability of new forces in the industrial world.

There Is Not Likely To Be A Fixed Price For Wheat

Westerners Are Apt to Throw a Scare Into the Government—Unionists Are Beginning to Scan the Horizon.

(Special to The Examiner.)

OTTAWA, Feb. 26.— To-day sees a shifting of the limelight from the Opposition to the Government. Preceding the general caucus of Unionist members to-morrow, there is in progress to-day an informal conference of western Unionists. This brings to the fore the problems of the prairie provinces which, to a surprising extent, affect the whole country.

Among the subjects discussed to-day were the War Times Election Act, the tariff, provincial natural resources and the price of wheat. The last is perhaps the most immediate, although not the most important subject, and one of which there is much difference of opinion in the west. In its recent phases, it is involving the tariff. There is a government fixed price of $2.24 a bushel on the 1918 wheat crop. Should there be a fixed price for 1919? Within the month both the Manitoba Grain Growers and the United Farmers of Alberta in their conventions, decided against asking for any such guarantee.

War Time Measures.

They said that the original enactment was a war time measure, not intended for peace times. Moreover they did not want to ask protection for themselves at the time they were demanding less protection for other industries. Both these resolutions were passed before the Canadian Manufacturers' Association issued its recent statement, pointing out why, in its opinion, there shouldn't be a lowering of the tariff at this time. When the Saskatchewan Grain Growers met last week they passed a resolution calling for a fixed price on wheat, accompanied by strong speeches on the subject. The interpretation put upon this action by a number of western papers and authorities is that the Saskatchewan agriculturists resented the campaign of manufacturers and were demanding privileges for themselves too. The Winnipeg "Free Press" says: "The battle appears to be on."

Other western members say that the C.M.A. manifesto has nothing to do with the Saskatchewan attitude, and that there already was a difference of opinion between western provinces.

In the States.

The United States is guaranteeing the price of this year's wheat crop also at $2.24, but the Argentine price is said to be down to $1.44 and the U. S. government will have to make up the difference to farmers out of public revenue. The general opinion here is that the government is averse to a fixed price this year, but the growing storm in Saskatchewan has to be reckoned with. An argument advanced by one of the western members to-day is that, at a time when the financial problem is serious enough at any rate, the farmers of the west should not, and probably will not, make the burden all the heavier by pressing a line of action which will cause further demands on the treasury. Hon. Mr. Danning, of Saskatchewan, however, is quoted as saying the other day, in rather a belligerent way, that every industry seems able to get protection except farmers.

Tariff Issue.

The main tariff issue was also discussed at to-day's caucus. A summary of opinion seems to be that is the Union government wishes to maintain its present hold on the west (it has what amounts to a solid delegation west of the Great Lakes) it has to revise the tariff downwards, and that a definite step in this direction must be taken at this session. Some of the Ministers feel that the appointment of an able and conciliatory commission to go into the whole problem, with the probability of a lower tariff recommendation later as a result, would satisfy the west, but members interviewed say that isn't enough. They think such a commission wouldn't be a bad thing, but that, as an earnest of good intentions, the government must do something new.

Free Implements.

Some suggest cutting off the extra seven and a half per cent. Others say "free agricultural implements" would be sufficient at this time. Various temporary expedients are suggested. There is another shade of belief which thinks it not absolutely necessary that tariff readjustment take place at once, but a definite policy pledging such a course should be announced this session, to come into effect at a fixed time in the future, when the immediate financial difficulties of demobilization and reconstruction are past.

It is understood that Winnipeg opinion, financial and commercial, is that the west will not be satisfied with the continuation of present conditions and that ultimate stability would be helped by concessions to the farmers now, rather than by any stiffening against their demands. One of the strongest arguments advanced by those who say there should be no change this year is that the finances of the country couldn't stand the decrease in volume. As one rebuttal to this contention, westerners say that the income tax is not beginning to bring in the money it should, and that there has been an inexcusable delay in enforcing the tax. Case after case is cited where men haven't received papers, and others where preferred taxes would not be accepted because the machinery wasn't ready.

Status of the New Irish Fund

If Raised For Military Uses It Would Violate Federal Law

Washington, Feb. 26.—In the absence tonight of Frank L. Polk, the Acting Secretary of State, it was impossible to obtain official comment on the action of the Irish Convention at Philadelphia in adopting a declaration of principles which included the statement that "a state of war exists between England and Ireland,' which was followed by the raising of $1,250,000 to aid the movement to free Ireland.

The exact use to which this fund is to be put is not understood here, but if it should be used to promote any military purpose it is very probable that the Washington Government would find it necessary to take action.

Section 5,281 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, which has been on the law books since April, 1918, and which has been enforced from time to time provides:

Every person who, within the territory or jurisdiction of the United States begins or sets on foot, or provides or prepares the means for any military expedition or enterprise, to be carried on from thence against the territory or dominions of any foreign prince or state; or of any colony, district or people with whom the United States are at peace, shall be deemed guilty of a foreign misdemeanor and shall be fined not exceeding $3,000 and imprisoned not more than three years.

This is one of the sections of the neutrality laws which the American Government in the past has been very rigid in enforcing.

Section 5,283 of the Revised Statutes, also passed in 1918, and in effect since, prohibits the arming of vessels for use against any people with whom the United States are at peace.

COPENHAGEN, Feb. 26. — The National Assembly at Weimar has passed a bill providing that the German army shall not exceed a third of the pre-war strength according to despatches received here to-day.

The peace footing of the German army in 1914 was 36,088 officers and 769,938 men.

Health Conditions In Peterborough

City is Free From Influenza Says Dr. C. H. Amys

From a standpoint of health, the city is in a satisfactory condition at present, Dr. C. H. Amys, M.O.H., stated to-day. So far the outbreak of diphtheria has been confined to the Orphanage, with only one suspected case of the disease in East City.

Influenza in the city has become practically a memory only, though Doctor Amys found two cases this week. In the north country a serious outbreak of it is reported, especially about Lakefield.

London Doctors To Form Union

Largely Attended Meeting has Approved of the Move

London, Feb. 26.—In view of the impending establishment of a Ministry of Health and its consequent effect on the medical profession, a mass meeting of London physicians, both men and women was held yesterday and a vote of 207 to 30 passed a resolution favoring the immediate organization of the profession on a trades union basis.

As the meeting was distinctly representative of the profession, the formation of a Medical Union may be expected immediately. Its purpose is to safeguard the interests and the dignity of the profession, which the speakers said, had been injured by various laws in recent years.

Twenty thousand members are expected to join the union.

An amendment urging that the Medical Union join the Trades Union Congress and become regularly affiliated with the Labor Party was rejected by a large majority.

JUG HANDLE CRACKS ANB FIVE GALLONS FLOOD SIDEWALKS

LONDON, Feb. 25.—Five gallons of whiskey, in other words twenty perfectly good quarts of nose-paint, went floating way down the sidewalk in front of a Dundas street physician's office one day last week.

How did it happen? The doctor told how between warm words, as the crowd gathered. It had been a defective five-gallon jar. He had gone to the licensed vendor's and deposited the jar in the tonneau of his car by the sweat of his brow, on arriving in front of his office he yanked the jar with its precious contents out on the sidewalk and had just nicely lifted it when the handle gave way. It was to weep.

Can he hold the licensed vendor responsible for the accident? This is the question that is bothering the doctor, who may yet bring the case to court.

ROBBED OF $10,000 IN OPEN DAY IN DETROIT

DETROIT, Mich., Feb. 25.—Two armed bandits, shortly before noon yesterday, held up T. A. Starke, Treasurer of a local creamery company, and robbed him of $10,000, which he carried in a small satchel. Starke had started from the company's office for a down-town bank, when the two men jumped from an automobile and at the point of revolvers forced him to surrender the satchel.

INDUSTRY WILL NOT LEAVE BOBCAYGEON

The Magnet Toy Company, which located in Bobcaygeon some time ago is not going to Peterborough, as was reported some time ago. A change in the management, it is understood, is about to be consummated, and a resident of Lindsay has been asked to become interested in the concern.—Lindsay Post.

Advocates Motor Driven Sprinkler

The Chairman of the Lindsay Board of Works has asked the council to take into consideration the advisability of purchasing a motor for the sprinkler. There was now a greater area to be sprinkled, and with a motor driven sprinkler less water would be used while the sprinkling would be more uniform. He asked the members to think over the matter.—Lindsay Post.

Delicate Children Vinol is What They Need

More than eight thousand druggists recommend Vinol because it contains in deliciously palatable form the oldest and most famous reconstructive tonics known to medicine. During the last sixteen years it has brought health and happiness to thousands of puny, ailing, anaemic children.

Middletown, Conn.

"I used Vinol for my little girl five years old for a rundown, nervous condition. She was thin, irritable all the time and had no appetite. In a week I noticed an improvement and now she has a good appetite, has gained in flesh and strength and is much pleasanter."—Mrs. C. B. Wilkinson.

Manville, R.I.

"The whooping cough,—and later the measles left my little boy of eight years with no appetite, thin, frail, delicate and tired all the time. After everything else had failed Vinol gave him a hearty appetite, restored his strength and he is now as well as ever."—Mrs. James H. Hall.

For all run-down, nervous, anaemic conditions, weak women, overworked men, feeble old people and delicate children, there is no remedy like Vinol.

Trinity Church Choir Concert

Notwithstanding the fact that weather conditions last evening were the worst perhaps this winter, the attendance at the Trinity church choir concert held in Trinity Methodist church was such that not only were all the pews crowded, but several chairs had to be carried in to accommodate the late comers. Those who braved the stormy evening were amply repaid by hearing one of the finest concerts given in the city for some time.

Distinguished Baritone.

The choir gave some selections which could not, in the opinion of those who attended, be surpassed by any of the choirs in the big cities. Mr. George King, organist, has chosen some good talent for his choir and with his skillful training the members have reached a high degree of success. Added to the attraction of hearing the choir and Mrs. George King, Mr. Frank Oldfield, the distinguished baritone of Toronto, sang several splendid solos and took the solo in the anthem, "A Song in the Night," which was sung by the choir. He needed no introduction to his Peterborough audience, having already become a favourite during his previous visits to the city. Mr. Oldfield possesses a voice of unusual power and clearness of expression. In responding to the several insistent encores, which he did very generously, Mr. Oldfield always chose a song of contrasting nature to that which preceded his second appearance, and which lent a pleasing variation.

Warmly Received.

The hearty applause which greeted Mrs. George King in the numbers she contributed to the programme would have dispelled any doubt that could have been felt as to her popularity with the Trinity congregation and the city generally in which in less than a year she has made a warm place for herself in the hearts of all music lovers. Her sweet voice was heartily appreciated in all her selections last evening and the audience seemed determined that she should not stop singing, recalling her after each number.

The Accompanist.

As an accompanist Mr. George King, the organist of Trinity church, left nothing to be desired. His sympathetic accompaniment to the different numbers was a feature of the concert, which could not fail to have been appreciated by all who are familiar with the skill required in such a capacity.

FORESTERS HELD SOCIAL EVENING

Officers Were Elected – New Members Initiated

The members of White Lily No. 86, Juvenile Branch of the Ancient Order of Foresters, held their regular monthly meeting last night. Chief Supervisor Tom Hendry was in the chair. A special feature of the evening was the initiation of six new members. There was a large attendance of the boys and plans were made for future gatherings of a social nature. Arrangements were also made for an open meeting to be held on March 25th. This will take the form of a social evening.

Officers Elected.

The following officers were elected last evening:
Chief Supervisor, Tom Hendry.
Chief Ranger, P. Dallin.
Sub: C. R., S. Lowes.
S. W., J. Ward.
S. B., E. Williams.
Chaps., H. Ebbs.
Sec., A. R. McWilliams.
Treas., H. McWha.

PETERBORO' MEN RETURNING HOME

Two Local Men Who Were Through Some Heavy Fighting.

Among the Peterborough men returning on the Empress of Britain today was Pte. Montgomery, 716 Park street, who has been overseas with the 8th Canadian Mounted Rifles for 42 months. He returns unscathed, although he served with his regiment in France for thirty-four months. Pte. Montgomery served nearly three years in South Africa with Baden Powell's scouts. Pte. Josh Johnson, 87th Battalion, was overseas three years. He was wounded in the leg at Vimy and in the side at Cambrai.

The list of names of Peterborough men returning on the Empress of Britain appeared in yesterday's issue.

PRICES OF SHOES ARE GOING UP

That shoe prices will be higher than at present is the opinion of shoe merchants. The prices for the fall goods now being bought are from thirty cents to $1 a pair.

The public has been expecting a reduction in prices generally, but this announcement takes away all hopes in the shoe line. The explanation given by the merchants is the fact the firms from France have placed orders for over two million pairs of shoes to shod their civilian population. All these orders will have to be filled while local buyers are being accommodated, and the scarcity of leather and labor has brought this increase in price.

It is stated that the winter goods of next year will be the first to respond to a decrease in prices, which will later become general.

COULD NOT SLEEP.

Miss Gertrude Pratt, Wolseley St., Barrie, Ont., writes: "I was very much run down and could not sleep either day or night, and my arms and legs ached so that life was very miserable. After using six boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, I feel well and strong again."

Original Cost Of Hunter Street Bridge

the whole cost of the bridge must be met and the profit be taken the contractor would take a smaller remuneration if he felt sure of a certain profit which he wouldn't be under the sum paum plan. Fifteen per cent. which is the contractor's profit on a $300,000 bridge would amount to $45,000. If he were offered the actual cost plus $25,000 a saving of $20,000 would be effected.

9. Under the original plans concrete steps were provided which would connect the residents whose homes were below the level of the bridge with the roadway of the bridge. The buildings which would be affected in this way are very old and in a few years will very likely be rebuilt and in that case the property would be levelled with the bridge and the steps made useless. Wooden steps could be used as a temporary expedient which would make a reduction of $1300.

10. The ramp on the south side of the street on the west side of the river could be eliminated according to Mr. Barber as it would have to be built so steep that it would be no inducement for the farmers to risk their horses' necks while on their way to the Quaker Oats with grain Mr. Barber said that he didn't think that the Dominion Railway Board would allow the ramp to be constructed. Instead he suggested that the city buy a 20-foot right of way on Simcoe street which would serve the Quaker Oats as well.

The Ramp.

The elimination of the ramp met with serious objection by all members of the Committee. They pointed out that the plans under the agreement must be submitted to the Quaker Oats and that they would insist that the ramp be built. The Simcoe street right of way would not be accepted by them.

The committee finally decided to recommend the following to the city council:

1. Ask for new tenders for the bridge taking into consideration:
1. Six month's penalty.
2. Bond against collapse.
3. Maintenance of traffic.
4. Steps of Wood.

Last time only 3 tenders were received the lowest one being $337,330. Added to this would be added, cement tests, land damages, etc., a total of $35,000 which would bring the low tender from $337,330 to $372,330.

Items From the Bridge

If all reductions taken into consideration were deducted from the lowest tender the total cost of the bridge would be $300,322. Mr. Barber's estimate of cost and profit is $260,000.

Under the "Cost Plus" basis the contractor would still be made to sign for a time limit and give a "performance" bond.

Mr. Barber says his total reductions are very conservative. They would likely be more than that.

The sidewalk on the new bridge will be six feet wide except where the abuttements in the centre of the bridge will take off one foot.

"Provision shouldn't be made for two lines of rails. They will never be needed within the next hundred years," said Ald. Hamilton.

During the pour down the centre of the bridge between the two lines of track was objected to by the City Engineer Parsons. "They are dangerous and would cost from fifteen to twenty thousand dollars more." Ald. Turner was in favour of the idea. If the poles were placed down the centre of the bridge there would be only one line and not two as there would be if they were placed along the curb. Also, under the rules of the Dominion Railway Board a distance of 13 feet from centre to centre between the two railway tracks must be made, his space could be used for no better purpose than placing the poles there.

"As long as we can dig up the money go ahead and do it," said Ald. McIntyre, opposing the idea of building the bridge narrower.

All tenders must be in by April 1. The work will be at a standstill until that time.

The Special Bridge Committee will met the Board of Education at their next monthly meeting to see if the fill in Armour's hill could be secured for the new structure.

Mr. Barber estimates that the land damages will be in the neighbourhood of $15,000. Twice that sum is thought to be a conservative amount by the Mayor and some of the Aldermen.

The city will likely have the option of buying the frontage of the lots owned by the Hydro-Electric Commission near Bathgate's horse-shoeing establishment.

George street is 43 feet six inches wide from curb to curb. The new bridge from curb to curb will be 42 feet.

Daylight Saving Depends On U.S.

No matter what stand the Canadian people take on the day-light saving question Canada will depend on the stand taken by the United States Congress. If Congress decides to repeal its daylight-saving measures, it is felt here that merely confusion would be created by putting Canadian clocks forward for an hour during the summer months.

The logislative situation in the two countries differs. The act passed by the Dominion Parliament last session empowered the Governor in Council to bring daylight-saving into effect for last year only. A new act will be necessary for continuation of daylight-saving this year. In the United States daylight-saving again comes into effect on the last Sunday of March unless repealed by act of Congress. But, as a result of protests from farmers, considerable opposition has already developed at Washington. A motion favoring repeal of the act was unanimously carried by the Senate Committee on Agriculture, and some doubt is felt whether the act will be permitted to stand.

In the circumstances action by the Dominion Government will be deferred pending a more definite attitude by Congress. If daylight-saving is continued across the line it will be continued here.

A great deal of opposition has developed to the measure in Canada from farmers, labour men and women where there are children in the house hold, whose rest and actions are not controlled by any measure of Parliament.

Former Director Offered Portfolio

Dr. Muehlen, Who Exposed Old German Government is Offered Ministry of Foreign Affairs in Bavaria—Will Consider Offer.

(Special to The Examiner.)

TO RELIEVE CATARRHAL DEAFNESS AND HEAD NOISES

If you have Catarrhal Deafness or are hard of hearing or have head noises go to your druggist and get 1 ounce of Parmint (double strength), and add to it 1-4 pint of hot water and a little granulated sugar. Take one tablespoonful four times a day.

This will often bring quick relief from the distressing head noises. Clogged nostrils should open, breathing become easy and the mucus stop dropping into the throat. It is easy to prepare, costs little and is pleasant to take. Anyone who has Catarrhal Deafness or head noises should give this prescription a trial.

Dr. H. D. Girdwood, B.A., L.L.D., F.R.G.S., with his big nine reel production with the Empire's Fighters, will be the attraction at the Grand Opera House for two nights, March 3rd and 4th. This great Photoplay was made by the Doctor himself, and his lectures during the progress of this wonderful film will carry all his audience with him to all the scenes. The Indian and Canadian soldiers all take a prominent part in this story and should be a more than welcome entertainment, owing to the fact that the Doctor is a Canadian by birth, and is the first Canadian to be honoured by having his film played under Royal Command.

Headworks of Power House.

Peterboro Contractors Complete Power Development Contract at Drummondville, Quebec

Southern Canada Power Company Is Building Concrete Dam, 1,700 Feet Long, Extending Diagonally Into St. Francis River, and New Power House With Capacity of 18,000 Horsepower.

PICTURES OF THE WORK

At Drummondville, P.Q., on the St. Francis River and about sixty miles east of Montreal, the Southern Canada Power Co., Ltd., of Montreal, is constructingfi a hydro-electric power development. At that point, the St. Francis River has a fall of about 32 ft., comprised mostly of rapids below the present timber dam, which is about 5 or 6 ft. high, supplementing the head for the power plant now in operation. The ultimate capacity of the development is to be 18,000 h.p., but at present only one-third is being utilized.

The accompanying plan gives a general idea of the scheme, which consists of a concrete power house and dam, the latter running diagonally across the river, diverting the flow to one side of the main channel and to the forebay.

The dam is built entirely of concrete, and is on solid rock foundation. It has a total length of 1,700 ft., of which 1,440 ft. is an overflow section, having a maximum height of 16 ft. (see drawing). The stop-log section is 100 ft. long. The latter consists of [illegible] 6 ft. wide and 30 ft. long, with a abutment at the junction with the spillway at each end.

The piers are spaced 26 ft., centre to centre, providing a clear opening of 20 ft. The apron is at the same elevation as the bed of the river, the stop opening beneath the deck being 10 ft. The flow will be regulated by timber stop-logs bolted together in sets, handled by an electrically-driven lifting machine operating on a track along the length of the deck.

Access to the deck, which is 6 ft. higher than the crest of the spillway, is obtained through a tunnel 4 ft. wide and 7 ft. high through that part of the spillway extending to the forebay walls at the railway crossing. The land entrance is at the ground level behind the bulkhead wall, which extends to meet the crib protection work parallel to the railway. The other end of the tunnel terminates in a well 4 ft. wide and 16 ft. long, exit being by means of an iron ladder.

Electric lights are placed at frequent intervals throughout the tunnel. A drain is provided to take care of any seepage. This section of the spillway, owing to the tunnel through the centre, is made wider than the regular section, and also is reinforced with steel.

The water diverted by the dam passes underneath the Canadian Government Railway, Montreal-Halifax Line, which at this point crosses on a deck plate girder bridge 105 ft. long, comprising two spans of 70 and 35 ft., respectively, base of rail being 12 ft. above pond level. These are supported on masonry abutments and a steel bent on pedestals.

The canal, which passes under the 70 ft. span, was formerly the channel conveying water to a grist mill, on the site of which the power house is being erected.

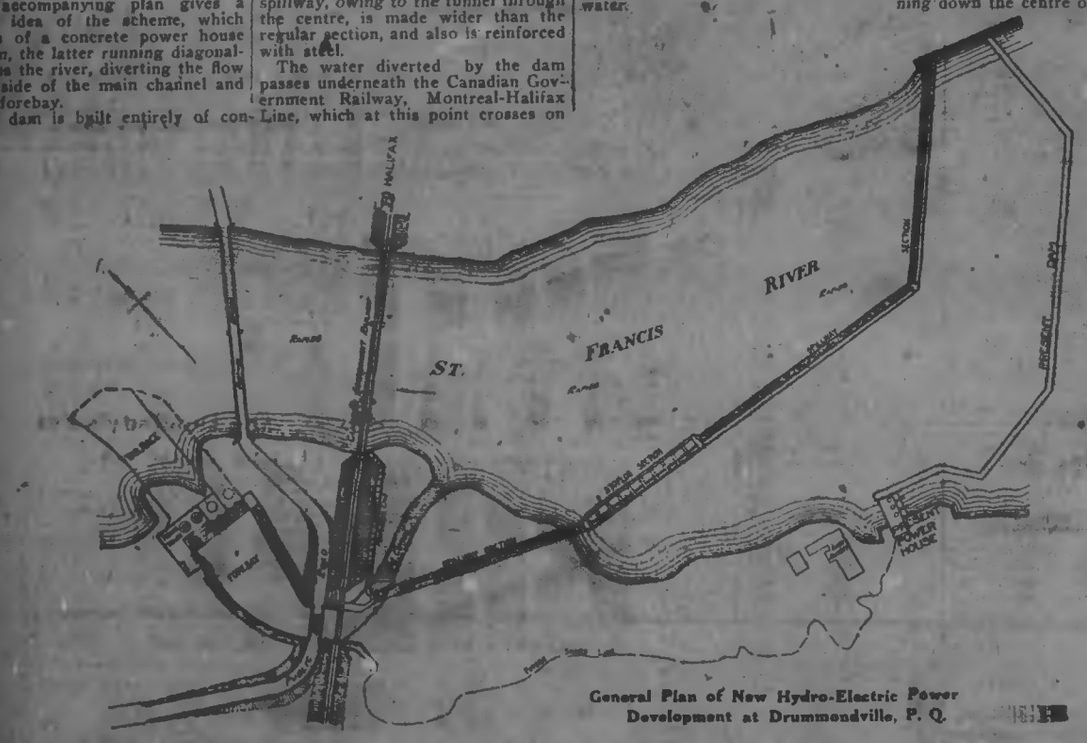
The concrete wall on the east side of the channel completely encloses the steel bent and pedestals, and that on the west side is carried in front of the abutment, thoroughly protecting the bridge foundations.

Immediately south of the railway bridge, the canal walls terminate in a bridge abutment on the west side and a pier on the side adjoining the dam.

This layout conforms to the plans of the Canadian Government Railways for a bridge on a proposed grade revision, and the work was performed under agreement with the railway company. For the present, the concrete work is only poured to the same elevation as the forebay walls. The necessary additions to complete the work up to the bridge seats, etc., will be done later by the railway company.

North of the railway, the canal was crossed by the public highway on a single arch concrete bridge at an elevation about 9 ft. below the top of the existing walls. This bridge was demolished and replaced by a two-span, reinforced concrete bridge 65 ft long, with a roadway width of 24 ft. The floor is 8 ins. thick, supported by seven concrete beams 16 × 27 ins., sealed on the under side by a 4-in slab in order to prevent any accumulation of debris during high water periods. The approaches to the bridge are earth with a top finish of broken stone, and are constructed to a grade of 1 in 20.

The forebay wall between the bridge and the transformer house has a retaining wall section, and averages 18 ft. in height. The batter on the stream side is 1 in 12, and on the back 4 in 12. That part of the wall on the opposite side, extending 168 ft. from the power house, is a spillway section, the crest being 2½ ft. higher than that of the main dam, and is intended to take care of abnormal flood water.



General Plan of New Hydro-Electric Power Development at Drummondville, P. Q.

The construction of the intake to the power house provides for four units, the ultimate capacity of the plant, but at present only two are being installed. The headworks for the other units consist of piers and deck constructed as far as the back of the future gates, and provide for the installation of stop-logs.

The power house and transformer house adjoin and are under one roof. The former, including the generator room and gate house, is 71 × 66 ft., and when completed to house the four units will be 71 × 140 ft. The transformer house is 37 × 101 ft., and is large enough to contain all necessary transformers, switches, etc., for the operation of the plant at its full capacity.

All construction is of reinforced concrete. The intakes, scrollcases and draft tubes are formed in mass concrete. Structural steel is used for all roof supports, trusses being used in the generator room and part of the transformer house, and 24-in. I-beams in the gate house and upper roof of the transformer house.

The present proposed installation consists of two 3,150-k.v.a., 60-cycle, 2,300-volt, alternating-current generators, with a speed of 100 r.p.m. Each of these is directly connected to a vertical turbine rated at 3,500 h.p. under a 32 ft. head. Two 100 k.w., 125-volt, d.c. exciters are provided, one being motor driven at 870 r.p.m. and the other direct-connected to a horizontal turbine with a speed of 400 r.p.m. The latter is placed in the basement of the transformer house, 15 ft. below the main floor level, the intake for the water wheel being through the side wall from intake for unit No. 1, and immediately in front of the gate.

This floor also contains the water intake and filters which supply the transformers, the oil pressure tank, the coal bunker and the boiler supplying steam for the heating of the building.

The transformers are 1,000 k.v.a., oil-insulated and water-cooled, stepping the voltage up to 48,000, at which it is transmitted. These transformers are placed at the west end of the building, directly under the high tension gallery, and are mounted on rails at right angles to a main track running down the centre of the building, on which a track operates to convey any of the transformers to a point beneath a travelling crane.

The high tension apparatus is placed on a gallery that is 28 ft. above the transformer floor and that occupies the full width of the wing of the transformer house. The transmission exits are through the roof.

The switchboard panels are located on a gallery at the opposite end of the transformer house, and so situated that the operator has a full view of all parts of the generating room and transformer house above the main floor. Low tension switches are in concrete compartments beneath the gallery, and are operated electrically from the board, as are also the high tension switches. The switching apparatus installed provides for operating the plant at its ultimate capacity.

A 60-ton overhead travelling crane operates over the generator room and across one end of the transformer house, and a similar crane of ten ton capacity handles the work in the gate house and that port of the building adjacent to the transformers.

The gate for each intake is 12 × 26½ ft., constructed of steel and operated from the deck of the gate house by an electrically-driven worm gear.

The electrical equipment is being supplied by the Canadian Westinghouse Co., Ltd., Hamilton, Ont., and the turbines and intake control machinery by the Boving Hydraulic & Engineering Co., Ltd., Lindsay, Ont.

W. C. Hawkins is president and F. W. Teele, vice-president and engineer, of the Southern Canada Power Co., Ltd. The plant was designed by Wm. Kennedy, Jr., consulting engineer, Montreal, who is represented on the work by E. Loignon. The contractors for the plant or Morrow & Beatty, Ltd., Peterborough, Ont., of which firm T. A. Morrow is president and J. A. Beatty vice-president. The resident engineer for the contractors is James Dick, to whom The Canadian Engineer is indebted for the above information.

Your Home is what you make it.

BE it "ever so humble," or an expensive mansion, good lighting makes all the difference in the world. Good light in your home spells comfort to yourselves, hospitality to your guests, and good sense all round.

There are two ways to ensure proper lighting in your home. The first is to have the lights well arranged and the second is to select only the best lamps.

Don't buy poor lamps. Cheap lamps mean poor lamps—they cost less to buy, but they give inferior light—the bulbs soon begin to blacken and the lamps burn out quickly.

Discriminating people buy Hydro Quality Lamps, for Hydro Lamps not only give better, brighter light, but they last 50% longer—they are more comfortable to read by—they impart an air of cheer and thorough enjoyment to your guests.

EQUIP EVERY SOCKET IN YOUR HOME WITH A HYDRO. IT WILL BE BETTER ECONOMY IN THE LONG RUN.

WINTER EASY ON THE RAILWAYS

It is an ill wind that don't blow somebody good. While the fuel merchant, the furrier, etc., have been hit as a result of the unprecedented mild winter, it has proved a veritable blessing to the railroads. A G.T.R. employe in Lindsay states that not a single snow plough has been used on the lines in this district this year. The ploughs in the Lindsay yards had been put in condition early in the season, but none of them were used. This is an unusual situation, as every year the railroads have expended considerable money in keeping their tracks clear of snow. Last winter was a particularly trying one for the railways.

ROYAL THEATRE

All Star Actors

FOR THE NEXT THREE DAYS, commencing TO-DAY, the Royal has provided an extra special programme, consisting of Forty Reels of the finest pictures that can be produced. Included in the special features will be Charlie Chaplin, in his second million dollar picture "SHOULDER ARMS." This is a muddy story of trench life, cooties, camouflage, rookie training and Hunnish influence. This feature has been secured by the Management of the Royal at a great expense. It is in three parts.

Another feature to be shown to-day and To-morrow is a thousand foot film of THE FUNERAL OF THE LATE SIR WILFRID LAURIER, which was held in Ottawa on Saturday last.

No expense has been spared to make these three days the best in the history of the Royal Theatre from the standpoint of its patrons. There will be a show every afternoon and evening, starting to-day and lasting until Friday night.

"A VAGABOND OF FRANCE" is another five reel production to be shown. This is a Pathe drama. A vitagraph feature, "THE IRON TEST," in two parts is another feature. A blue ribbon feature, featuring Bessie Love in "The Enchanted Barn" in five parts will complete one of the cleanest and best shows ever presented in the Royal Theatre.

The above programme is equal to that shown in the largest theatres in Toronto, Montreal and other cities, for which an admission of 50c is charged.

For this special three-day schedule the following prices will prevail:—MATINEES in the Afternoon—Sixteen cents to all, this includes war tax. EVENING Performance—Twenty-five cents, including war tax. On Monday next the Royal will resume its old price of Sixteen cents to all, both afternoon and evening. Patrons are asked to attend the Matinees for the next three days as much as possible and avoid the rush in the evening. You can save money by attending the afternoon show. For the benefit of the school children we are retaining the Charlie Chaplin feature which will be shown at a special Saturday morning show, opening at nine-thirty. Admission ten cents.

District Cup Is Off Again

Ladies' Tankard is Also Postponed Owing to Lack of Ice

TORONTO, Feb. 26.— District Cup finalists were notified by wire yesterday that the games scheduled to take place in this city, to-day had been postponed to Thursday. The ice-makers at the various rinks declare that even with lowering temperature to-day it will not be possible to have suitable ice before to-morrow morning. The Ladies' Tankard games, which were also to have been played to-day, have been postponed. The draw for this competition will not be made until the rinks arrive in town.

Secretary G. S. Pearcy has arranged the District Cup draw and instructed the rinks to be here to-morrow morning and ready for play at 9 o'clock, unless otherwise advised. The draw is as follows:

At Granite Rink.

Ice 2 and 3— High Park v. Owen Sound.

Ice 4 and 5—Orillia v. Guelph Royal City.

At Victoria Rink.

Ice 1 and 2— Cobourg v. Peterborough.

Ice 3 and 4—Dundas v. London Thistles.

Peterborough Ladies' Curling Club will not send rinks to Toronto for the Ladies' Tankard, but Toronto Granite, Toronto Queen City, Kingston and Toronto Curling Club ladies will compete, this expected.

PRINTERS DEFEAT LEAGUE LEADERS

The Printers and the C. G. E. teams met in a ten-pin league fixture last night at the Water street alleys. Much interest was taken in this match as the above teams are the league leaders. The Printers won two of the three games and are now tied with the C.G.E. for the top rung of the ladder.

For the Printers Kirn was high with 545. Fielder had 509 for the C.G.E. and Jackson came in for a high single of 222.

The score was as follows:

Aura Lee Outplayed by "Prep" School Champions and Lose 7-6

TORONTO, Feb. 26.—This season has been one of surprises, but U.T.S. capped the climax last night when they defeated Aura Lee, 7 to 6. They won strictly on their merits, and many who saw the game voiced the opinion that the Blue Shirts will win the round. The losers were favoured to win by a wide margin, but disappointed a host of supporters by their wretched showing, particularly in the early stages. The same teams meet in the final fixture to-morrow night, and one of the most exciting battles of the season should result.

University Schools played combination and got results. Their passing was superb, and Coach Frank Carroll, the man responsible, deserves every credit for this achievement. On several occasions the Aura Lee defense were made to look foolish by the easy manner in which they were drawn out. The first two goals of the night were scored by Jeffreys and Aggett on pretty passes from Munro and Powell.

KITCHENER WORKS IN WATERY GOING

KITCHENER, Feb. 26.—The O.H.A. senior champions are practising under disadvantages every night this week for the crucial game with St. Patrick's on Saturday night in Toronto, but all the members of the team are in the best of condition. Last night the team worked out on ice covered with water. To-night the champions will play a practise game in Preston with the intermediates of that town. It was expected that the team would go to Toronto on Thursday in order to get a few good practises at the Arena, but owing to the inability of three or four of the players to get away from their work, this proposal had to be abandoned.

A large crowd of Kitchener fans will accompany the team to Toronto on Saturday. Nearly three hundred tickets have already been disposed of. Arrangements have been made for a special train service to the game.

McKENZIE WOULD DO AWAY WITH ORDERS-IN-COUNCIL

Replies to Mr. Burnham's Queries Regarding Factories—Sir Sam Hughes Expected to Speak To-day.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

OTTAWA, Feb. 26.—Hon. F. P. Carvell, Minister of Public Works, and Sir Sam Hughes, former Minister of Militia, are expected to speak in the Commons this afternoon. Carvell had the floor when the House opened and he will be followed by J. S. Sinclair and Dr. Sheard. If Sir Sam is not heard to-day, he will probably be the first speaker, to-morrow. A movement is on foot to provide an annuity for Lady Laurier, but it is not known whether she would accept it. Sir Wilfrid left considerable life insurance.

At the evening sitting D. D. McKenzie continued the debate on the address in reply to the speech from the Throne. He opened his speech by explaining his position, which he said, is that of temporary leader. He would occupy this position until such time as the Liberals could obtain a free opportunity for selecting a permanent leader.

The two young men who had moved and seconded the address deserved congratulations, said Mr. McKenzie. He gathered from their remarks that they were possibly rather dissatisfied because the Government was so slow in taking effective means for helping the returned soldiers.

"If these young men could only find some panacea or medicine to stir up the Government to really do something we would be heartily glad," said Mr. McKenzie. "We have tried to do what we could as an Opposition, but with little result."

The Department of Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment, he said, appeared to have established nothing but the salary of the Minister in charge. A wide-awake and capable young man from the Maritime Provinces (F. B. McCurdy) had found it necessary to resign from this department because it was accomplishing nothing.

Mr. McKenzie warned the Government that the country would suffer if something was not done to counteract the flow of the population from the farm to the factory. The tendency now was for people to leave the farms and congregate in the cities. Thus the production of food was decreasing and the prices consequently increasing.

Mr. Burnham (Peterborough): "Would you reduce the number of factories, then?"

Mr. McKenzie: "I would reduce the number if there were too many. I wish the Government would institute machinery for doing something other than turning out orders-in-Council. That is one kind of factory I would be quite willing to see done away with."

Franchise Bill.

Mr. McKenzie went on to refer to the new franchise bill which the Government proposed to bring down. He was glad, he said, to see a Conservative Government which was willing to extend the franchise. Their policy in the past appeared always to have been restriction of the franchise rather than extension. The Government, he said, should not go in for making new voters' lists. There was no necessity, he argued, of duplicating voters' lists.

With regard to the proposed vote for the building of highways, Mr. McKenzie said there was a constitutional question involved. They were breaking into provincial matters, and it was his view, as it had been the view of Liberal Unionist members, that they should leave with the provinces the question of the expenditure of road moneys.

Dealing with the question of public health, he drew the attention of the Government to the fact that the provinces deal at present with questions of public health. He declared himself opposed to duplication of authority.

Mr. McKenzie invited speedy action if money was to be spent on technical and vocational training. He hoped that action would be taken to bring about a better understanding between capital and labour. He said he could not remember anything that the Government had done to bring this about.

Mr. McKenzie, in concluding his speech, issued a naive invitation to Liberal Unionists on the Government side to come back to the fold, and the House fairly rocked with laughter as he said "The war is over. The light is in the window for you. The latch-string is on the outside and you are all welcome."

Lava Liquor And Bog Booze May Paint Towns Red

NEW YORK. — Happy the man who has a volcano in his back yard after July 1st. That is if the man in question is an old crony of John Barleycorn. If you think you cannot get along without old John, better beat it to the best remaining hope of the alcoholic—a volcano or a volcanic neighborhood.

It has been discovered that volcanoes are veritable hotbeds of alcoholism. In Sweden they are manufacturing alcohol in large quantities from lava.

Now we know what was wrong with the poor volcanoes when they acted that way. We used to think Mount Pelee, for instance, was just naturally mean. Nothing to it. It is such a nice mountain when it is sober but once in a thousand years, of course it does get full — and then it's lighted up for fair. Afterwards it gets so sick, and then the fireworks!

All on account of alcohol, it must be. For it is now scientifically established that the lava put forth by the volcanoes is rich in alcohol, and the Swedes are turning the seemingly worthless lava of their mountains into alcohol to run motorboats and automobiles.

Lava moonshine has not been tried yet, but along about next summer certain deserted places where nothing could ever be produced on account of the lava formations may feel a quickening of the spirit. There is a large tract of lava rock in Texas, about 100 miles north of El Paso. It is in a lonely little travelled almost inaccessible country and moonshine detectives would find the sharp rock outcroppings very hard on feet and tempers. It is estimated that there is enough volcanic moonshine in these Texas lava beds to supply a genuine Broadways New Year's the year around to the entire population of the earth. But then almost any ingenious citizen may find not far from home some traces of one of these red nights when some old volcano, now resting in a drunkard's grave, got so full that he literally burned up the town. True some of these old volcanoes are apt to preach a very solemn sermon to the lava hunter. They lived while they were alive, but, oh, blooey! how dead they are now.

Old Mother Earth contains another kind of hope for the disciples of ultra-wetness, too. It is the peat bed.

Score another for Sweden, boys. The Swedes driven by the scarcity of driving power are making alcohol from peat. Of course, as in the case of the lava alcohol, this product is strictly a mechanical convenience. But it opens up a vista of possibilities. Have you a neat little peat bog in your home?

In the Swedish process the peat is boiled under pressure with sulphuric acid, the acid is neutralized with lime, the sugar resulting from the boiling is made into alcohol, and the residue is made into fuel briquets.

Here in New York one sees many little supreme councils holding forth each night as the farewell draughts are carefully poured down. And they do say that there is talk of an exodus. Who knows but that these modern pilgrims may set up their little outposts of joy away out there in the bogs and the mountains where Nature has still a few billion headaches stored against the day of dearth?

TO ATTEMPT FLIGHT FROM IRELAND TO NEWFOUNDLAND

Sydney, N.S., Feb. 26.—Major Morgan, of the British Naval Air Service, is at St. John's Nfld., where he is selecting a site for the landing of a British Government hydroplane which will soon attempt a flight from Ireland to the Ancient Colony. It is likely that a plateau at Freshwater Bay, about three miles from the city, will be selected for the landing.

As soon as weather conditions permit, the trans-Atlantic flight will be attempted. The British air service has a machine equipped and ready for the trip.

MR. HAROLD JOLIFFE ADDRESSES HUSTLERS

Last evening, despite the inclemency of the weather, a large number of the Murray street Hustlers turned out to hear Mr. Harold Joliffe speak on his experiences overseas.

Mr. Joliffe spoke of the dispiriting effect of the German superiority in the air during the earlier part of the war, and of the thrill of watching our airmen chasing the Hun when our machines gained the superiority.

Next week's meeting will be of a social nature.

SUBJECT OF JOHN KENDRICK BANG'S LECTURE.

Mr. Bang's subject for his lecture on Friday evening of this week in the Opera House will be "Salubrities I Have Met." This is one of his finest lectures, in which he gives personal recollections of what he calls "more or less distinguished people." Among them are Winston Spencer Churchill, Richard Harding Davis, Rudyard Kipling, Henry M. Stanley, Richard Henry Stoddart, A. Conan Doyle, Carnegie, Rockefeller, Mark Twain and others.

Those in the city who have heard Mr. Bangs lecture, tell us we will be missing one of the greatest treats of the season if we fail to hear him.

GOOD WORK IS APPRECIATED.

In a speech recently made in New York the president of the State University of Missouri, mentioned among the various services rendered the country by the university during the war, the work of Dr. M. D. Dover, of East City, who is a member of the staff of the Department of Chemistry of that institution. Dr. Dover was given leave of absence to take charge of the women chemists employed by a well known powder company operating a [illegible] powder plant and was chemist in charge of the administration laboratory of the plant. Dr. Dover recently returned to the University of Missouri to resume her teaching work.

MR. CHAS. INNES

Had a fine audience last night in spite of the fearful weather. He spoke on the Prodigal Son away and coming home, illustrating in a wonderfully intreating style all the various temptations and allurements of the downward course of any who chooses the down-grade life. Mr. Innes said he was amazed at the patience of God when man has rebelled against him with a high hand, yet His patience prevented his judgment from falling.

Repentance was explained as a change of mind towards God, including sorrow, and a determination to return. This is the picture of Luke 15.

To-night the subject is. "The Prodigal at Home." This is the best of all and speaks of the joys of a redeemed soul. All should hear the remaining addresses. Only three more nights this week. Mr. Innes makes the picture live before the audience like a moving picture.

OBITUARY

ALEXANDER EASON

Yesterday the death took place in Pittsburg, of Alexander Eason, son of the late Thomas Eason of Asphodel. The deceased who was forty-seven years of age, has resided in Pittsburg for the past sixteen years. He leaves a wife, also mother, who resides with her daughter, Mrs. G. A. Rutherford, 525 Bolivar street. Mr. George Eason, 35 Cricket Place, East City, is a brother. The remains will arrive in the city at noon Friday on the C.P.R. and the funeral will take place to Little Lake Cemetery following the arrival of the train. Rev. Mr. [illegible] will officiate.

The Land Settlement Scheme

At the annual meeting of the Local Council of Women, held on Thursday afternoon last, the following resolution concerning the civil re-establishment of soldiers, was read by Mrs. James Kendry, and after discussion at the executive meeting at Mrs. Kendry's home yesterday, unanimously adopted:

"Whereas, the most important question confronting the government of Canada at the present time is the successful re-patriation of our returned soldiers and their re-establishment into the national life of the Dominion in a manner compatible in some measure with our national gratitude and honour and the very best interests of the men themselves;

"And, whereas, the Federal Government has expressed its purpose to provide land for every soldier who wishes to settle on same;

"Therefore be it Resolved, That we the Local Women's Council of Peterborough do request our National Executive Council of Women to petition the government that said land be operated on the Community Group System in sections of not more than ten miles square or six thousand four hundred acres.

"This land if at all possible to be distributed throughout all the Provinces of the Dominion. That the number of sections in each province to be determined by the number of men desiring to settle in that province. That this plan of distribution be worked out between the Federal Government and the Provinces on a fifty-fifty basis of cost.

"That as soon as possible this scheme be put into operation and the soldiers placed on their own sections for such a term of time as will be necessary to make the section comfortable for occupation by preparing homes, roads, schools and churches, the wages of the men for said term of time to be paid by the Government at a minimum wage of not less than $3.50 per day.

"That the interest of the Government investment in this matter we submit should be appropriated as follows, namely, that two-thirds of the interest should be applied to principal, to each soldier's credit, and the remaining one-third should be appropriated to the Government credit."

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

SEE FOUL PLAY IN DRIVER MISSING AND AUTOMOBILE STOLEN

Connecticut Youth Disappears—Wealthy Man Arrested Here Says He Bought Vehicle.

NEW YORK, Feb. 25. — In the strange disappearance of Charles Cappola, of South Norwalk, Conn., and the attempted sale in the city of his automobile, alleged to have been stolen from him, followed by the arrest here of Arthur William Pratt, a wealthy resident of Darien, Conn., are elements of mystery puzzling the District Attorney's office and the police of two States. Foul play is suspected by Cappola's family and the authorities.

Cappola, who is nineteen years old, assisted his father in running a "jitney" from South Norwalk to Norwalk. On February 13 the father purchased a new Maxwell automobile for $900, and the following day Cappola disappeared. That afternoon Pratt was arrested at the Rhinelander Garage, No. 243 East Sixty-fifth street, where, it is said, he tried to sell the automobile for $300. Detective John Armstrong arraigned Pratt in the Yorkville Court and he was released in $1,000 bail for a hearing next Tuesday.

Pratt, whose wife inherited a fortune from her father, Andrew Taylor, of Darien, told Detective Armstrong that he bought the automobile from a man in front street, this city, for $750. John Minton has been retained as counsel for Pratt. Randolph A. Gerard, of this city, and Salvatore Genuarui, of Norwalk, are attorneys for the Cappola family.

Alfred J. Talley, Chief Assistant District Attorney, said that after he had discussed the matter with counsel for the Cappola family and Detective Sergeant Thomas Hunt, of South Norwalk, he was convinced that the missing Cappola youth had met with foul play.

Mr. Gerard said that on the afternoon of February 14 three persons in Darien saw Pratt and another man in an automobile driven by Cappola going in the direction of New York city. Pratt, for whom a warrant has been issued in Connecticut alleging larceny of the automobile, denied at the time of his arrest that he had been in Cappola's automobile that day.

Pratt has not been seen here or in Darien since he was released, and his wife and daughter, eight years old, are grief stricken. His relatives believe he may have gone to Pratt Island, in the Sound, where his mother owns several cottages.

Free Farms For Soldiers

Quebec Government Proposes Granting Land to All Honorably Discharged.

QUEBEC, Feb. 26.— A bill setting aside certain areas of farm lands for free grant to soldiers honorably discharged after serving on any of the fronts of the great war was introduced on the order of the day in the Quebec Provincial Legislature this afternoon by Hon. L. A. Taschereau, Minister of Public Works and Labour.

The generosity of the bill goes far, granting farms, free of any obligation, to soldiers of whatever nationality among the allies of the British Empire and to soldiers of any and all of the Dominions and colonies of the British Empire who serevd in the great war, and who were previously residents of Canada.

REFRIGERATOR SHIP IS DESTROYED

New York, Feb. 26—The army refrigerating ship Sixaola was sunk at her pier in Hoboken to save her from flames which were raging in her holds. Two members of the crew, an officer and a boatswain's mate, who were helping fight the fire, are missing, and are believed to have perished. The vessel was loaded with beef and lard and was about to sail for Brest.

The cargo, valued at $3,000,000 will be a total loss, the origin of the fire has not been determined.

DIED.

COOLEY—On Wednesday, February 26th, at 498 Aylmer street, Thomas A. Cooley, aged 43 years. Funeral notice later.

Box Will Play In Hamilton To-night

TORONTO, Feb. 26. — Nation-wide interest is being evinced in the Dental-Hamilton final play off game on the latter's ice to-night. The Dentals have a goal lead to work on, and it may be enough to carry them through, if the games played to date in the Ambitious City serve as a criterion. Tigers were defeated in the first engagement, 4 to 3 and lost the second by the same score. If the teams repeat to-night the worst the locals can get is a tie on the round.

IN MEMORIAM.

A tribute to him who has lived his life a worthy example to those whom he has preceded into Eternity; whose creed was his duty to his God and his fellowmen; to whom unswerving adherence to principles of honour, justice and right was a stay in the Path of Life; who was sublimely happy in this world of sorrow, because his was the glorious happiness attained from untiring efforts to bring joy to others; who got the most out of life, because he so freely gave of himself to the welfare of others—Hugo Lundgren. May God rest his generous, loving soul.—E.B.C.

GRAIN MARKET

Cash corn markets closed easier, and the February option practically cash, was a cent off from Tuesday's close. The question of a fixed minimum price on hogs for March is again a factor in the corn market. Reports as to what action the Food Board will take were yesterday conflicting, but the market seemed inclined to the belief that the fixed price policy will be abandoned. The wheat flour situation is looking a little brighter, since the Export Company has announced that it is now in the market for Ontario fall wheat flour, as well as for Manitoba. Some of the millers were becoming apprehensive that no action would be taken, and were evidently preparing to get out their holdings at any price. The Government's announcement will stiffen the market again, though yesterday Ontario flour was quoted easier.

Manitoba wheat—In store, Fort William; No. 1 northern, $2.24 1-2; No. 2 northern, $2.20 1-2; No. 3 northern, $2.17; No. 4 wheat, $2.11 1-2.

GOT RID OF BRONCHITIS.

Mr. W. H. Walker, Calmar, Alta., writes: "I am pleased to say that Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine has done much good to myself, wife and children. My eldest girl, seven years old, had bronchitis and the doctor who attended her did not seem to do much good. We got Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine for her and she soon got well. We always keep this medicine in the house now ready for use and find that it soon cures coughs and colds."

PRINCESS OYAMA DIES.

Vassar Graduate and Among First of Japan's Wards Here.

TOKIO, Feb. 26.—Princess Oyama, widow of Field Marshal Prince Oyama, who commanded the Manchurian Army during the Russo-Japanese War, has died of influenza. She was a graduate of Vassar College. The Princess took a prominent part in the work of the Japanese Red Cross and was an active supporter of the American Red Cross here.

Princess Oyama, whose maiden name was Sutematsu Yamagawa, was one of the first Japanese women to be educated in the United States. She was born in the Province of Aizu and was a descendant of a Samurai family.

At the age of 10 she was chosen as the most clever among a thousand little girls and was sent to the United States by the Japanese Government to be educated. This was in 1871, and in 1876 she was baptized in the Christian religion.

When she was 19 years old she entered Vassar and graduated four years later with high honours. Soon after her return to Japan, in 1886, she was married to Prince Oyama, who was then Minister of War in the Japanese Cabinet.

The Princess Oyama was about 60 years old at her death, being some twenty years younger than her famous husband, who died in December, 1916. The only son of Prince and Princess Oyama was killed in the explosion aboard the cruiser Mutsushima in April, 1908.

NATION WITH MOST AIRPLANES CALLED VICTOR OF NEXT WAR

NEW YORK, Feb. 24. — That the nation which has the largest number of airplanes in commercial use will be the quick winner of the next war, and that the United States' government should regulate the kind of airplanes to be manufactured and make rules governing air transportation, were the outstanding points of the speeches made at the eleventh annual meeting of the Aeronautical Society of America, in the Engineering Societies Building, No. 29 West Thirty-ninth street.

Leon Cammen, associate editor of the Journal of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, declared that the country equipped with the most commercial airplanes capable of instant conversion into fighting craft would be a certain winner within six weeks, from an enemy less strongly entrenched. Charles Wesley Howell said that with men to whom time is valuable the question of economy will not be considered in air travel.

Officers and directors were elected for the ensuing year, including Frederick W. Barker, president; Paul W. Wittemann, treasurer; Arthur H. Fisher, secretary, and Walter L. Pyne, counsel.

The Anarchist Capture Was Of Great International Importance

Agents of Terror Once Lived in Nihilist Hotbed in Spain—Had Plenty of Money.

New York, Feb. 27.—After a day spent in questioning the fourteen Spanish anarchists arrested on Sunday in raids that are thought to have thwarted a possible attempt to assassinate President Wilson, police and Secret Service officials were convinced that the capture was of great international significance.

Questioning revealed the fact that the nihilists of Barcelona, Spain, which city and the surrounding province of Catalonia is known to the police of the world as the stronghold of anarchism, not even surpassed by Petrograd, are seeking to extend their machinations to the United States. Some Barcelona anarchists, it was recalled, were found to have associated with Russians in the recent Bolshevist risings in Buenos Ayres.

All but two of the fourteen men arrested in New York have admitted that they came to this country from Barcelona or nearby in the province. They do not speak modern Spanish, but the Catalonian tongue, which is a combination of provincial French and ancient Castilian.

These Catalonians would be particularly inimical to President Wilson, it was said yesterday by a prominent Spanish citizen, because he did not obtain for that province the autonomy from the Madrid government for which a movement had been launched when the principle of self-determination was first advanced by the President.

Had Plenty of Money

The police theory that the men arrested belong to an international body of anarchists was strengthened by their investigation into the habits of the men. It was disclosed that the prisoners seldom worked at the simple trades they gave as their occupations for more than two or three days at a time, yet they always seemed plentifully supplied with money. The police believe that the financial assistance came from the international body.

Another development of the day which indicated that the prisoners have strong support somewhere was the appearance at Police Headquarters of Harry Weinberg, a lawyer known on many occasions to have been counsel for radicals. Weinberg refused to tell by whom he had been retained, but demanded to talk to the prisoners. His demand was not complied with. He then consulted with Joseph A. Bordeau and Ben A. Matthews, Assistant United States Attornies, at the Federal Building, seeking to have the men arraigned at once. He said he was prepared to furnish bail for them. The federal officials were not ready to arraign the men, however, and Weinberg left.

The prisoners may not even be arraigned to-day before Samuel M. Hitchcock, United States Commissioner unless the various agencies, who are examining the men at Police Headquarters complete their work. They are seeking information that might enable them to press other charges against the men other than the blanket one of possessing or circularizing seditious literature.

Philadelphia Police Here.

Thinking that the prisoners, especially the two men who arrived from Philadelphia Saturday, may have knowledge of the bomb outrages in Philadelphia on December 30, when infernal machines exploded in the homes of the Superintendent of Police, a judge and a prominent citizen and for the conviction of the perpetrators of which a reward of $10,000 has been offered, police of that city came to New York yesterday and joined in the investigation.

Representatives of the Secret Service, the Department of Justice, the immigration service and the local police passed ten hours yesterday in questioning, at the end of which time they had examined only seven of the prisoners. The interrogation was slow, due to the desire of the officials to find out about the antecedents of the anarchists.

Five of the men, it was said, admitted their sympathy with anarchistic beliefs, and said that even now they are desirous of continuing their studies of the nihilistic doctrines. Their admissions were sufficient to insure their deportation as soon as evidence is presented, officials said. Two of the men, however, asserted that they had been born in Puerto Rico, of Spanish parents, and as such are citizens and cannot be deported.

One man, it developed, had obtained his first papers as a citizen, but withdrew them when this country entered the war and he learned that he would be expected to fight if he became a full citizen. Two others, the police learned—Placidio Sant Maria and Federico Madini Bertier—were wanted as draft dodgers. They had registered at Board No. 106, Manhattan, but failed to respond to calls for physical examination and classification. They said yesterday that they were conscientious objectors.

Calls Machine an Invention

Bertier was questioned at length concerning the pieces of machinery that were found in room at No 412 West Fifty-third street where he, Santa Maria and the two anarchists from Philadelphia, the chemist and the machinist, were arrested. He offered the explanation that he was an inventor and that the machinery was an "improvement on a motor" which he was seeking to have patented.

The fourteen prisoners were placed in the "lineup" at Police Headquarters yesterday and were inspected by hundreds of members of the department. Only one man was recognized, Policeman Polignani, who took part in a general rounding of radicals following the finding of a bomb in St. Patrick's Cathedral in March, 1915, declared that the man who described himself as Patrick Martin and who said he had been in the country only thirteen months, had been a member of the notorious "Bresci group" of anarchists back in 1915.

The prisoners were captured on Sunday.

Authorities had not an opportunity to investigate carefully the Spanish literature, pamphlets and letters seized Sunday. Some of the documents were given to translators last night. Included were copies of the Spanish magazine, "El Corsario," which Jose Grau, one of the prisoners edited, and of which Pedro Martin was associate editor and business manager.

Another magazine, copies of which are being translated, is one called Freedom, the Journal of Constructive Anarchism. Hundreds of posters describing the magazine and telling where it may be bought or subscribed to were found on one of the prisoners.

Celestino Granda, one of the seven prisoners questioned yesterday, stuck to a story that he had lived with the Lexington avenue band only two weeks and was not an Anarchist like them. His explantion of why copies of seditious books and pamphlets were found in his pockets did not satisfy the police.

Despite the refusal of the Secret Service officials in this city and Washington to confirm the report that a plot on President Wilson's life had led to the raids on Sunday here and in Philadelphia, other government and police officials expressed the belief that such had really been the motive. The "tip" on which the raids had been made, another official said, as that a bomb for the President was to be made in Philadelphia carried to New York by two men and on to Boston by a third, chosen here.

NEW WILSON GRANDCHILD

President Notified of Birth of a Son To Mrs. Sayre

ON BOARD U. S. S. GEORGE WASHINGTON, Feb. 26.—The first word from shore received by President Wilson when his ship arrived in Boston Harbor, was that he had a grandson, Woodrow Wilson Sayre. The infant is the second son of his youngest Daughter, Jessie Wilson Sayre, wife of Francis Bowes Sayre.

Philadelphia, Feb. 26.—A son was born to Mrs. Francis B. Sayre, daughter of President Wilson, at the Jefferson Hospital here. Mother and child are doing well. This is the President's fourth Grandchild. Another is Ellen Wilson McAdoo.

Mrs. Sayre's first child, Francis B. Sayre, Jr., was borne in the White House on Jan 17, 1915. The second, Elanor Axson Wilson Sayre was born at Jefferson Hospital, March 26, 1916.

The President, of course, has been notified, and it is possible he may stop at Philadelphia on his way from Boston to Washington in order to see his daughter and her second son.

The following message was received by Mrs. Sayre from the President: "Highly pleased and send affectionate greetings."

RAILROAD DICKS ARE ON TRAIL BUSY CAR THIEVES

BRIDGEBURG, Ont., Feb. 26.—Officials of the Michigan Central, Grand Trunk and Toronto, Hamilton & Buffalo railroads are making a determined effort to break up car thefts that have cost the three companies thousands of dollars in the last few months.

Three railroad employees were before Judge House on charges of receiving stolen property and 30 search warrants were issued by the court to railroad detectives on the trail of goods from rifled cars. Burt Warden, one of the railroad men, was convicted and fined $50. J. W. Reid, a Grand Trunk man, was committed for jury trial to county court. The third was acquitted.

The latest raid was reported when detectives found that a through Buffalo-Detroit refrigerator car had been opened. Thirteen cases of dressed chickens and two crates of eggs were missing. The eggs were found under a barn a short distance from the place where the car was robbed.

Ruth Resents Brian and Mollie's Palship

CHAPTER CXXX

Brian had written:

"Dear Ruth: "We are just going into a fight. It promises to be a stiff one. Some of us naturally never will come back. Yet I have a feeling I shall come thru safely. But I want to tell you that I have taken out as much insurance as I could get, for you and the boy. I hate to think that, should I be taken, you would have to care for and educate him. Not that you are not entirely capable, but that, in some way, I want a hand in his up-bringing, if only to supply a little of the cash.

"I think of you two constantly. I haven't amounted to much, Ruth. Even if I come back I am not sure that I ever shall. The leopard and his spots, you know. Yet, dear, I haven't meant to be a bad husband. Circumstances, natural inclination have been just a little too much for me, I guess. Sometimes when I lie awake at night I try to figure out how much better things would have been had I done differently; and I someway cannot feel that I could have greatly improved matters.

"You have been very brave, very efficient, Ruth. I sometimes wonder how you kept going right up to the time I left. But your bravery equals that of any soldier. And I appreciate you if I do not often tell you so. Perhaps I am afraid of spoiling you.

"I have told Mollie some of my plans for our boy, should I never come back. She will tell you if it ever becomes necessary. She is a wonderful little pal, and has helped me to overcome an occasional fit of homesickness for you and the kiddie more than anyone else could have done.

"I am hazy in thinking that your aunt is with you and will remain. I never bore her a grudge because she thought me a sort of worthless scamp not worthy of you—I never was. But this is getting to be a very solemn letter. I didn't mean to have it so. I only wanted you to know that I was thinking of you and the kiddie the last thing when I went over the top with the boys. I shall do my duty as a soldier, Ruth—though I may have failed as a husband. Failed in many things. Tell the kiddie that I'll bring him a German helmet; he'll like it in a few years. Good night, dear wife. I kiss you and our boy over and over again in my heart, Brian."

Ruth was more frightened at the danger Brian was in than she ever had been before. To go "over the top" sounded ominous to her—when Brian was to be one of those who went. She shuddered as she thought of him—wounded, perhaps dying. Then resolutely tried to turn her thoughts to the brighter side of his letter. His faith that he would come through unscathed; and his thought for her and little Brian. She smiled through her tears at the idea of a German helmet for the cooing infant in his crib, then sobbed aloud as she re-read of the kisses in the soldier's heart.

"Oh, I pray he may come back!" she said, snatching the baby to her so forcibly he whimpered.

"He's your daddy, darling, and he's going over the top and perhaps he'll never come back to us, and you'll never see him, and he'll never see you! Oh, baby, it is terrible to have him a soldier, yet you and I wouldn't love him as much if he wasn't! We couldn't, could we, baby?"

Ruth stopped suddenly. Into her temperamental mind had come what Brian had said of Mollie King. She was to be the bearer of his messages if anything happened to him; she knew what he wanted to say to her—his wife—and to his boy. She, Mollie King, would see and talk with him, perhaps, just before he went into the big fight he had told about. Oh, it was unbearable, Ruth thought, her ignorance of the rules of warfare almost, if not quite, went as far as the trenches with Brian.

He had called her "a wonderful little pal."

"She has always been that to him," Ruth said bitterly. "His pal, while I was only his wife." Dully she wondered which position she would rather occupy. "He tells her things he won't tell—or doesn't tell—me. He has a better time with her than he has with me. It must be my fault. For had he not thought he liked me better than he did her, he never would have asked me to marry him. He would have married her." So eliminating Mollie, her preferences, entirely.

What had Mollie done when Brian was homesick?

Perhaps could Ruth have known that the brave little nurse had worn herself out—had bored herself almost to death, talking of her (Ruth) and of the baby whom Brian never had seen—she might have felt more kindly toward the girl Brian had called "a wonderful little pal." But Brian and Mollie were three thousand miles away. So how was she to know any of these things that might have brought her comfort?

To-morrow—Brian, Now Lieutenant Hackett, is Decorated for Bravery

Mother Not Important.

In a certain Western city a man of exceedingly boastful disposition was recently made justice of the peace. His family was much impressed by the honor conferred on the father, but most of all who showed pride was the twelve-year-old son. It was he who opened the door to one of the suffrage petition bearers. She explained her errand and asked for his mother.

The little boy puffed up very much as did the father on occasions. "You needn't waste any time with her," he told the woman. "She isn't anything important. Just me and pop are 'somes.'"

Monte Carlo Put to Good Use.

Monte Carlo, the once famous gambling place, is still crowded, but there are no players there now. The tables, instead of being loaded down with chips, are piled high with offerings for the wounded; with cushions for wounded limbs, crutches, ice bags and pneumonia jackets. And instead of the crowded heads that once frequented the resort the new patrons wear a "jewel" above the forehead in the shape of a Red Cross.

In a Fix.

"Why don't you go to work? You know that worry kills more people than work does."

"I've heard that; but the trouble is, nothing worries me so much as work."

PICTURESQUE BRUGES

TWO FAMOUS OLD CITIES OF BELGIUM.

Ghent and Bruges, With Their Winding Streets, Their Beautiful Belfries and Their Famous Pictures Will Now Be Familiar to Canadian Soldiers Who Were "In at the End."

THE evacuation of Bruges sounded the death knell of German rule in Western Belgium, to the rhythmical tread of the British soldier in the narrow, sleepy streets of this mediaeval town. With the advent of peace, Bruges, haunt of the artist and tourist, will fall asleep again — a sleep that has been disturbed since the sixteenth century only by the great world war.

From now on, no doubt, the streets of all the cities and towns of Belgium will resound, during recreation periods, with the laughter, slang and daredevil pranks of "our boys," many of whom already have observed that there is a great difference between the art and architecture of France and Flanders. The history of Belgium, especially her cities, explains these differences. Instead of regal palaces like Versailles, castles of princely grandeur like Fontainbleau, splendid murals like the Puvis de Chavannes, the Canadian soldier will see quaint gabled roofs, belfries, Gothic churches and cathedrals, town halls and guild halls, many of them containing portraits of successful merchants, or devotional pictures which a merchant giver presented to the patron saint of his town or business. Over all the art and architecture of Belgium is written commercialism.

The commercial supremacy of Bruges and Ghent harks back to the days of the Hanseatic league, when they were the chief stations in the confederation of cities formed for the protection of northern trading centres. At this time the Rhine constituted the great central waterway of Europe. The Flemish towns were its ports and its manufacturing centres for Flanders and the Duchy of Brabant, half independent under their own rulers or counts, occupied a middle position, geographically and politically, between France and the empire.

As the Canadian soldier jokes and smokes his way about the winding streets of the various cities he will stumble, now and then, upon unexpected bits of odd architecture. These will arrest his attention long enough for him to say, "Some building, that!" and then he will pass on. Most of the landmarks of a past civilization need an interpreter, but the belfries, symbols of freedom, with their lovely chimes, do not. The chimes of Belgium and Switzerland are famous, and most tourists count the hearing of them among their choicest memories. In Bruges is an especially fine old belfry whose bells are charming. The largest of the 49 bells of the belfry was christened Mary, and was cast for the Church of Notre Dame in 1660, but it was not placed in the belfry until 1803, at which time it rang in celebration of the signing of a treaty between Britain and France.

In the same town is another reminder of the past, the Chapel of the Holy Blood, built by Theodoric, a distinguished Crusader who, on his return from the Holy Land, brought with him, so the legend says, some drops of the Holy Blood of the Saviour, which had been preserved by Joseph of Arimathea. Whether the legend is true or not, the Church of Saint Sang, with its dainty little oratory, bears testimony to the belief of the people of that time.

In the thirteenth and fourteenth centuries Bruges and Ghent were important cities, Ghent carrying on a considerable trade in textiles. In the fourteenth, these two cities and the territory of Flanders and Brabant came under the rule of the Dukes of Burgundy, who occupied debatable land between France and Germany. The Dukes of Burgundy established a brilliant court at Bruges, although the capital of Flanders was Ghent. And it was under their rule that a group of famous artists adorned the towns with most of the buildings which beautify them. The dukes left a reminder of their rule in the town hall (Hotel de Ville), one of the most beautiful gems of Gothic architecture, around which centered the life and love of the people. The Hotel de Ville is one of the finest pieces of civic architecture in Belgium, and is famous for its facade, which, in the main, is of original design.

Three painters who helped to beautify Belgium are associated with the Burgundian dynasty in Belgium—Hans Memling and the Van Eycks, Jan and Hubert. The works of the first of these has in it characteristics that are typical of early Belgian art, the love of detail. All the pictures painted by early Belgian artists are full of details of fur, brocades, jewelry, gold, silver, Oriental rugs and richly carved furniture. This pleasure in the outward appearance of things is noticeable in Memling's "Virgin Enthroned," in the Hotel Gallery, at Bruges. The geometric pattern of the rug, the violin, the apple, the castle in the background and all worked out with photographic realism. Memling's delight in the surface of things is that the pleasure a merchant feels when he fingers a fine piece of textile.

Working with Memling in Bruges were the Van Eycks, Jan and Hubert, in whose pictures is seen the beginning of that delicate and minute workmanship linked with a peculiar idealism that is one of the chief characteristics of Flemish art. In the Cathedral of Ghent "our boys" will find the best example of the work of these artists — a polyptych of the "Adoration of the Lamb."

The theme of the painting is based on a passage in the Apocalypse: "I looked, and lo, a Lamb stood on Mount Zion, and with him a hundred and forty thousand, having his Father's name written on their foreheads. And I heard a voice of harpers harping with their harps." In this altar piece we get our first glimpse of the mysticism that later on cropped out in this practical people. The same feeling of the supernatural, the unexplainable, has seemed to affect our soldiers when they lay wounded in "No Man's Land." More than one wounded soldier has told of the appearance of the "Comrade in White" to him.

Under the rule of Charles the Bold, the power of the dukes of Burgundy reached its height, and then began the collapse. Flanders passed under the dominion of the House of Hapsburg, a little later under Spanish rule, and then with the Spanish Netherlands under Austrian rule. Then it was that Rubens was appointed court painter by Albert, and went to live in Antwerp. At this time Rubens was only 35, and still under the influence of Italian art. One of the first works painted by him after his arrival in Flanders was the "Descent From the Cross," the central panel of the great triptych of St. Christopher, in the cathedral of Antwerp. The Canadian soldier will not longer long over this famous painting. Their eyes have been pained too long by real tragedies to look with interest on painted ones.

Instead of studying the miles of pictures which will, no doubt, be returned to the galleries from their hiding places, they will knock about the quaint old towns of Belgium. They will hear about the wonderful old cloth halls, where lovely embroideries and wonderful brocades were bought and sold; of the tapestries that were woven by great and wonderful artists; of the exquisite laces made in dark cellars, and a thousand and one other interesting things. Then the commercial stamp of the past will gradually dawn on them and they will agree with the writer's estimate of Antwerp, which is also true of other cities of Belgium:

"It is a burgher ledger of bales and barrels, of sale and barter, of loss and gain; but in the heart of it there are illuminated leaves of missing vellum, all gold and color, and mouldish story of heroic ballad, that could only have been executed in the days when art was a religion."

A CHILD GETS CROSS, SICK AND FEVERISH WHEN CONSTIPATED

Look, Mother! If tongue is coated clean little liver and bowels.

If your little one's tongue is coated, it is a sure sign the stomach, liver and bowels need a gentle, thorough cleansing at once. When your child is cross, peevish, listless, pale, doesn't sleep, eat or act naturally; if breath is bad, stomach sour, system full of cold, throat sore, or if feverish, give a teaspoonful of "California" Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the clogged-up, constipated waste, sour bile and undigested food will gently move out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again.

Sick children needn't be coaxed to take this harmless "fruit laxative." Millions of mothers keep it handy because they know its action on the stomach, liver and bowels is prompt and sure. They also know a little given to-day saves a sick child to-morrow.

Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which contains directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on the bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here. Get the genuine made by "California Fig Syrup Company."

PUT STOMACH IN FINE CONDITION

Says Indigestion Results from an Excess of Hydrochloric Acid.

Undigested food delayed in the stomach decays, or rather, ferments the same as food left in the open air, says a noted authority. He also tells us that Indigestion is caused by Hyper-acidity, meaning, there is an excess of hydrochloric acid in the stomach which prevents complete digestion and starts food fermentation. Thus everything eaten sours in the stomach much like garbage sours in a can, forming acrid fluids and gases which inflate the stomach like a toy balloon. Then we feel a heavy, lumpy misery in the chest, we belch up gas, we eructate sour food or have heartburn, flatulence, water-brash or nausea.

He tells us to lay aside all digestive aids and instead, get from any pharmacy four ounces of Jad Salts and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast and drink while it is effervescing and furthermore, to continue this for a week. While relief follows the first dose, it is important to neutralize the acidity, remove the gas-making mass, start the liver, stimulate the kidneys and thus promote a free flow of pure digestive juices.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and sodium phosphate. This harmless salts is used by thousands of people for stomach trouble with excellent results.

BUDAPEST CROWD LYNCHES BELA KUN, RED LEADER

LONDON, Feb. 26. — The Communist leader, Bela Kun, of Budapest, has been lynched, according to a despatch from the Berlin correspondent of Reuter's Limited, quoting a message from the Hungarian capital.

The action was said to be the result of popular indignation at the attempts of the communists to undermine the existing order. The entire Hungarian press, including extreme Socialist organs, is unanimous in condemning the communist agitation, the despatch stated.

Other advices say that the proletariat has organized a strike as a protest against the energetic measures taken to suppress the communists, which include the arrests of forty-two raidicals, according to the Budapest advices received by way of Basle.

The Minister of War denounced the communists in an address delivered in Parliament Square to many thousands of workmen who adopted a resolution calling upon the government to use all the means at its disposal to end the communist plots.

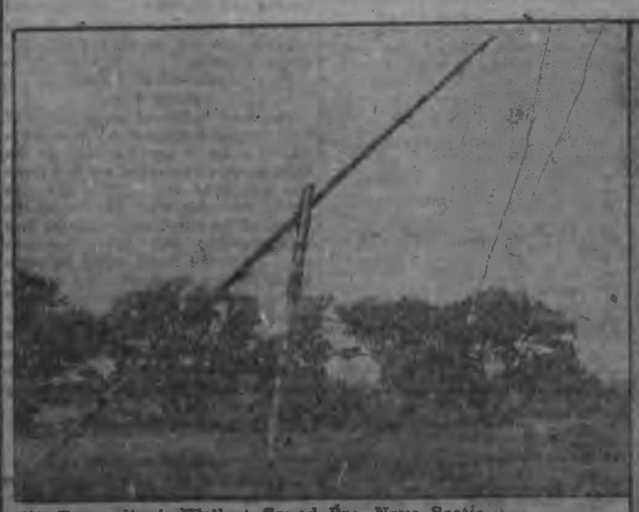
Evangeline Returns to Grand Pre



(1) Evangeline's Well at Grand Pre, Nova Scotia.
(2) Philippe Hebert's Statue of Evangeline.

WHAT lover of poetry has not dreamed of visiting the places made immortal in song? And what song has roused this longing more intensely than the story of the gentle Acadians and their Great Banishment? Many have realised this ambition for Nova Scotia is easy to reach and each succeeding summer sees more hundreds making the pilgrimage to "The Acadian land, on the shores of the Basin of Minas, Distant, secluded, still, the little village of Grand Pre."

There they find the meadows, dikes and orchards of which Longfellow sang, and they try to retrace the action of the poem by using as a guide the still remaining well which the poet described as

"Farther down, on the slope of the hill, was the well with its moss-grown Bucket, fastened with iron, and near it a trough for the horses."

The piece of ground at Grand Pre on which is the well of Evangeline, together with the old willows, has been bought by the Dominion Atlantic Railway for the purpose of preserving it for posterity.

Before he died last year, Philippe Hebert, the greatest of French-Canadian sculptors, was engaged on a statue representing Evangeline leaving the land of her childhood and looking back in sorrow.

Philippe Hebert was himself an Acadian and, although a perfectly happy exile in Montreal, entered into the spirit of the poem as no other sculptor could. The model of his statue has been purchased by the Canadian Pacific who have commissioned Philippe's son, Henri Hebert, also a distinguished sculptor, to complete it, life size in bronze to be erected beside the famous well.

Thus will be added one more attraction to a land full of attractions for artists, devotees of romance and matter-of-fact sportsmen. The artists find an inexhaustible supply of subjects ranging from many-mile long vistas of apple blossoms to uncouth but picturesque fisherfolk; the romantically inclined find a land of legends and sleepy beauty; the sportsman finds fishing and hunting such as is spoken of and never excelled.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

A Metamorphosis

By Lillian Hall Crowley

(Copyright, 1918, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

James Morgan was thinking!

"I wonder why the girls never seem glad to see me? They never act just plain glad when I come along. The fellows, too—they're all right, only—well, I'm not really intimate with any of them."

James had jogged along in the little town where his family had been as comfortably off as most of the families of their set. He had jogged through the state university just as unthinkingly as he had spent the preceding years. He drifted into a clerkship in the bank and mentally wandered through his duties as colorlessly as he did everything else.

He went to the parties, never thinking whether he could dance well or not. It had not occurred to him to think anything about it.

The night before he had heard the following conversation between two of Haviland's most charming girls:

"I wish James Morgan would stay from the parties. He is the awkwardest creature I ever saw, and the homeliest!"

"Every time he asks me to dance I wish I had stayed at home."

"The trouble is, Margery, we've been fairly polite to him, just because we've known him always, and he doesn't realize he's horrid and uninteresting."

"Let's drop him! He has no right to make us miserable—tramping all over our feet at the dances."

"And such clothes! We don't expect much in a little place like Haviland, but he's a positive fright!"

The two girls, Margery Raymond and Alice Wrightman, had fallen into this conversation one night at a party. James had come around a corner intent on asking Margery to dance. He would not have listened intentionally, but the knowledge had staggered him. He tipteed away from his Waterloo and went out on the veranda to collect his scattered wits.

"I never dreamed of such a thing!" he told himself. At last he went in and bade his hostess good-night.

This brings us to the day in the bank when for the first time in his life he was puzzled. After dinner he went alone to a moving picture play. It was a western play. The hero was a big fellow wearing the rough clothes of a miner—nevertheless he was very polite. He raised his hat to the women he knew and jumped to pick up a plate dropped on the floor by the boarding house keeper.

"That's the kind of man a woman is proud to have for a son," he heard a voice behind him. "What a magnificent figure!" the voice went on. "One feels that a strong chest not only indicates physical strength, but strength of character as well."

Instantly James straightened his drooping shoulders.

Looking at the hero, James thought: "He is a fine-looking fellow—gives one real pleasure just to look at him. I wonder if I'd play tennis and things if I could develop my chest."

He noticed the man's manner of taking off his hat to the women he met; sometimes James only touched his hat, lastly, with one finger. He knew the girls so well—why bother? James remembered, too, that he didn't jump quickly to the polite assistance of people. True, he was glad to help anyone in trouble, but this was different.

"Maybe that's what Margery and Alice meant. I don't do these nice things." He was puzzled, but went on with his self-analysis.

He went again to the movies. This time he saw a society play. There was dancing. James opened his eyes wide to see how the other fellows danced. Alice had said he tramped on her feet. He saw the men, cleverly and gracefully guiding their partners through the crush.

"Why, that's part of it," he thought. "You're responsible in a way."

Then he noticed clothes. He had never given his toilet much thought except to be clean, to buy a suit when necessary—which was seldom pressed—and a pale blue tie for Sundays. He wore it to the bank after it had become soiled.

All the business men in the pictures were trim looking, their clothes were pressed and coats buttoned. James walked along the street with suit coat and overcoat open and his hands in his pockets. None of these men did that.

"Yes," he thought, "that's the way to look. It isn't because they're movie men; lots of other men dress that way. He noticed, too, the bright, interested and alert expressions on their faces.

At home he looked in the mirror. His hair needed trimming. It hadn't been cut right in the first place. He had parted it so near one ear that it was inches too high on the other side. He brushed it straight back. He was surprised at the good lines of his forehead, something he had not noticed before.

Next day a successful young man from one of the large cities of the state came into the bank. James looked him over. First of all he saw that the man was neatly dressed and was unconscious of his clothes. James was always uncomfortable when "dressed up," as he called it.

"I'll ask him to select me a tie from his place."

"Certainly," replied the young man graciously. "Do you like a black or a mixture?"

"I like pale blue," James answered hesitatingly. "I say—please get the kind you'd get for yourself."

"I'll send one to wear with that dark suit you have on."

When the tie came James was amazed to find a dark one with bits of dull color in it. He had the utmost faith in the young man's taste, and he could not recall ever having seen him with a pale blue tie.

Before the glass that night he tried it on and realized that his chin was in the way of his collar. Should he pull his chin inside or stretch it out over the collar.

Somehow he didn't look as well as he had expected. What was the trouble? His collar was too large! He rushed out and purchased shirt and collar two sizes smaller, and they fitted perfectly. He tied the tie, brushed back his hair, and smiled at himself. It was not the same young man who had looked in that glass for so many satisfied years.

"I'll show those girls yet! I'll make them sit up and take notice."

He had declined all invitations to parties and kept going to the movies to get more "pointers."

How to dance correctly was the next problem. He suddenly remembered Inez Jaynes, who had been in New York studying music. She was helping out a small income by giving music lessons. Inez was a beautiful dancer. Perhaps she would teach him.

He swore her to secrecy and worked diligently. When the time came for the club party? James escorted Inez there.

You may be sure he did not lack partners, for, besides being well dressed and good looking, he was the best dancer among the men.

He danced many times with Inez and with quiet self-possession guided her through the crush.

Inez looked happy.

James danced with Margery and Alice. The wall flowers and the fat ladies were not forgotten either. Margery said to Alice:

"I must have been mistaken about James. I'm going to ask him to dinner when my New York cousin comes."

"I've asked him for Sunday night supper," said Alice.

On the way home from the dance James looked down at the sweetly brave little woman at his side and said:

"Inez, Mr. Witmer has made me assistant cashier of the bank."

Inez looked up alarmingly.

"You have been so good to me, dear," he went on, "and I love you so—could—could you possibly marry such a lout as I?"

"You're a great, big, splendid prince, and I love you!"

Later, when James was leaving, he said: "I'll come for you tomorrow night and we'll go to the movies!"

OPEN NOSTRILS! END A COLD OR CATARRH

How To Get Relief When Head and Nose are Stuffed Up.

County fifty! Your cold in head or catarrh disappears. Your clogged nostrils will open, the air passages of your head will clear and you can breathe freely. No more snuffling, hawking, mucous discharge, dryness or headache; no struggling for breath at night.

Get a small bottle of Ely's Cream Balm from your druggist and apply a little of this fragrant antiseptic cream in your nostrils. CATARRHAL DEAFNESS MAY BE OVERCOME

If you have Catarrhal Deafness or are even just a little hard of hearing or have head noises go to your druggist and get 1 ounce of Parmint (double strength), and add to it ¼ pint of hot water and a little granulated sugar. Take 1 tablespoonful four times a day.

This will often bring quick relief from the distressing head noises. Clogged nostrils should open, breathing become easy and the mucus stop dropping into the throat. It is easy to prepare, costs little and is pleasant to take. Anyone losing hearing or who has Catarrhal Deafness or head noises should give this prescription a trial.

Nearly Every Girl Can Make Herself Pretty and Attractive
SOME WHOLESOME TRUTHS EVERY GIRL SHOULD THINK ABOUT

Probably you know just such a girl.

Perhaps she is sixteen — good to look at, and pretty —quite interesting because she reflects the grace and charm that give promise of happiness to herself and others. But she is not strong. The colour in her cheeks, once so rosy, has faded, away—her eyes are listless—the buoyancy of spirit and vigour she once possessed are sadly lacking. Parents, friends, this girl needs Ferrozone — needs it that her blood may be renewed — needs it to restore the nerve force that growth, study and the development of her fresh youth have exhausted. The girl will become a queen with Ferrozone—which will restore her colour—bring back her old-time energy—give brightness to her eyes and vivacity to her spirits. In Ferrozone every girl finds strength—that she can do things. In Ferrozone there is endurance—that drives away morning tiredness and languor. For the girl or woman that wants to be happy, healthy, winning— who values rosy cheeks, laughing eyes and abundant good spirits, nothing can compare with Ferrozone. 50c. per box, or six for $2.50. Get it to-day from any dealer in medicine, or by mail from The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont.

"Jonah" Words.

Nearly everyone has some special word which he mispronounces. Have you? The writer always tries to avoid the word "plebeian," through an absurd desire to put the accent on the last syllable, as in "plebiscite." A laugh went round a room once when a young man referred to a ship's "bo," and a woman debating came to grief over the word "epitome," to which she gave but three syllables instead of its rightful four. But how about the governess who told her little pupils all about the "aborijeens" of Australia? The writer was one of the little pupils, and it made an indelible impression. "Jejune" is always tricky. "Aspirant" is worrying, too, until you learn that the accent may be on the first or second syllable. Of course, you know how to pronounce Macpherson, Mackenzie and machinery. Perhaps the last word caught you napping, though—unless you are too old a bird!—Answers, London.

Halcyon Days.

The word "halcyon" is the name of a bird called a kingfisher. It was anciently believed that the eggs of the halcyon were hatched at sea in a floating nest, and that during the two weeks the nests were floating on the waves of the ocean, and while the bird was brooding over them, the seas were calm and could safely be navigated by the mariners. We are familiar with the term "halcyon days," which are understood to signify beautiful weather, and the expression is also used to describe the bright days of boyhood or of youth or other periods of one's life that the memory delights to recall.

Fuel Shortage.

Gently the girl leaned toward him with an arch expression of inquiry. "How many lumps?" she asked. "Forty," he said. And she wrote down his coal order for the winter.

"FOR VALOR."

Soldiers From Dominion Awarded the V.C.

The London Gazette gives an official account of how Lieut. Graham Thomson Lyall, 102nd Battalion, 2nd Central Ontario Regiment, won the Victoria Cross. The official citation says that the Cross was awarded for "most conspicuous bravery and skilful leading during operations north of Cambrai. On July 29 last, while leading a platoon against Bourlon Wood, he rendered invaluable support to a leading company which was held up by a strong point, which he captured by a flank movement, together with 13 prisoners, the field gun and four machine guns. Later his platoon, now much weakened by casualties, was held up by machine guns at the southern end of Bourlon Wood. Collecting any men available he led them towards a strong point and springing forward a one, rushed the position single-handed, killed the officer in charge and subsequently captured at this point 45 prisoners, he consolidated the position and thus protected the remainder of the company. On Aug. 1, in the neighborhood of Belcourt, when commanding a weak company, by skilful dispositions he captured a strongly-defended position, which yielded 80 prisoners and 17 machine guns. During two days' operations, Lyall had thus captured altogether three officers, 182 other ranks, 26 machine guns and one field gun, exclusive of the heavy casualties inflicted. He showed throughout the utmost valor and high powers of command.

Pte. G. J. P. Nunney, D.C.H., M.M., 38th Battalion, Eastern Ontario Regiment, is granted a Victoria Cross, according to the Gazette, for most conspicuous bravery during operations against the Drocourt-Queant line on Sept. 1 and 2, 1918. On Sept. 1, when his battalion was in the vicinity of Vies and Artol, preparatory to advancing, the enemy laid down a heavy barrage and counter-attacked. Nunney, who at this time was at company headquarters, immediately on his own initiative, proceeded through the barrage to the company outpost lines, going from post to post, encouraging the men by his own fearless example. The enemy were repulsed and a critical situation saved. During the attack of Sept. 2 his dash continually placed him in advance of his companions. His fearless example undoubtedly helped greatly to carry the company forward to its objectives. He displayed throughout the highest degree of valor until severely wounded.

Pte. Walter L. Rayfield, 7th Battalion, British Columbia Regiment, according to the Gazette, secures the Victoria Cross for most conspicuous bravery, devotion to duty and initiative during the operations east of Arras from Sept. 2 to Sept. 4, 1918. Ahead of his company he rushed a trench occupied by a large party of the enemy and personally bayonetted two and captured ten men. He later located and engaged with great skill under constant rifle fire an enemy sniper, who was causing many casualties. He then rushed the section of the trench from which the sniper had been operating and so demoralized the enemy by his coolness and daring that 30 others surrendered to him. Again, regardless of personal safety he left cover under a heavy machine-gun fire and carried a badly wounded comrade. His indomitable courage, cool foresight, and daring reconnaissance were invaluable to his company commander and an inspiration to all ranks.

Specks Floating Before His Eyes

When specks start to float before the eyes, when everything turns black for a few seconds and you feel as if you were going to faint, you may rest assured that your liver is not working properly.

The essential thing to do in all cases where the liver is slow, lazy or torpid, is to stir it up by the use of a medicine that will clear away all the waste and poisonous matter from the system, and prevent as well as cure all the troubles arising from this accumulated mass which has collected in the system.

Keep the bowels open by using Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills and you will have no liver trouble of any kind. They will clear away all the waste and effette matter which has collected and make the liver active and working properly.

Mr. John R. Morrison, Grand River Falls, N.S., writes: "Several months ago I was troubled with a sour stomach, and had specks floating before my eyes. I took five vials of Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills which cured and cleaned my blood before any length of time. I told my friends about it and they got some, and they, too, find themselves different since they took them. I recommend your pills very highly."

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills are 25c. a vial at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

FOR BABY'S TENDER SKIN.

A child's skin is tender as well as beautiful and eczema may be caused by chafing of clothing, the use of poor soap, exposure to cold or sudden change of temperature. Probably no treatment for eczema has ever proven so successful as Dr. Chase's Ointment, and this applies particularly to baby eczema. This ointment is delightfully soothing, stops the itching and consequently prevents scratching, Gradually the sores are healed up, and the skin is left soft and velvety.

THIN PEOPLE SHOULD TAKE PHOSPHATE

Nothing Like Plain Bitro-Phosphate to Put on Firm, Healthy Flesh and to Increase Strength, Vigour and Nerve Force.

Judging from the countless preparations and treatments which are continually being advertised for the purpose of making thin people fleshy, developing arms, neck and bust, and replacing ugly hollows and angles by the soft curved lines of health and beauty, there are evidently thousands of men and women who keenly feel their excessive thinness.

Thinness and weakness are usually due to starved nerves. Our bodies need more phosphate than is contained in modern foods. Physicians claim there is nothing that will supply this deficiency so well as the organic phosphate known among druggists as bitro-phosphate, which is inexpensive and sold by McDermid & Jury in Peterboro and most all druggists under a guarantee of entire satisfaction or your money back. By feeding the nerves directly and by supplying the body cells with the necessary phosphoric food elements, bitro-phosphate quickly produces a welcome transformation in the appearance; the increase in weight frequently being astonishing.

This increase in weight also carries with it a general improvement in the health. Nervousness, sleeplessness and lack of energy, which nearly always accompany excessive thinness, soon disappear, dull eyes become bright, and pale cheeks glow with the bloom of perfect health.

CAUTION:— Although bitro-phosphate is unsurpassed for relieving nervousness, sleeplessness and general weakness, it should not, owing to its remarkable flesh-growing properties, be used by anyone who does not desire to put on flesh.

A COUNTER REVOLUTION

Anarchists Have Seized Control of Dusseldorf—Seat of Government Isolated

NEW UPRISINGS

(By John Graudeunz, United Press.)

BERLIN, Feb. 26.—(Delayed) — Anarchists, charging the Spartacans are too Conservative, have started a counter revolution in Germany.

Reports from Dusseldorf to-day stated that anarchists had overthrown the Spartacans and seized control of the city. Dusseldorf had only recently passed into the hands of the Spartacans.

Meanwhile the Spartacan Soviet revolution has spread to all parts of the country. New uprisings, strikes and riots were reported in Saxony, Bavaria, the Rhineland and the Ruhr district.

Weimar, the present seat of the German government, has been cut off from Berlin. On Tuesday night members started by way of Leipzig, but were forced to make several additional detours, as the crew learned that stations ahead had been captured by the Spartacans.

The miners and industrial workers in the Halle region, Saxony, have joined the Spartacans and that entire country is reported to be paralized.

State Debts.

The Soviet government in Munich has threatened to execute ten prominent citizens if the German government sends Prussian troops against Bavaria. The Congress of Workmen's Soldiers' and Peasants' Council there to-day demanded that the assembly become a provisional national council. A deputation representing five thousand workmen, urged the proclamation of a Soviet republic, opening of diplomatic relations with the Russian Bolsheviki government, and annulment of all state debts.

The German government is reported to be divided as to what steps shall be taken to suppress the revolution. Some members demand the employment of force, while others counsel a compromise.

More Troops.

Military Governor Noske demands that the Reichstag (National Assembly), immediately authorize two hundred thousand additional militia. On the other hand, President Ebert is understood to favour the establishment of a National Soviet as the lower legislative branch of the government, probably replacing the Bundesrat. The remarkable situation—the first time the constitutional head of a government has offered recognition to the Soviet—is the result, it is said, of Ebert's belief that the Spartacans cannot be crushed and that they must be recognized, else the country will be overwhelmed with disorder.

The new revolution has reached a point where decisive action must be taken immediately, one way or the other, and the announcement of a definite government policy is expected hourly.

Will Form A New Cabinet

Former Director of Krupp Works Arrives at Munich.

Canadian Press:

LONDON, Feb. 27. — Dr. Wilhelm Muehlon, former director of Krupp Works, has arrived at Munich and is negotiating with the Socialist leaders there with a view to forming a new Bavarian Cabinet.

Herr Hoffman, the Bavarian Minister of Worship, and leader of the Majority Socialists, is a complete nervous wreck, and is in retirement, according to a despatch received here from Munich. Major-General Garres, Ministerial Councillor, who was wounded during Friday's riot in the Bavarian diet, has died of his injuries, it is reported.

The Munich Post, the organ of the Majority Socialists, demands that the diet shall make an unequivocal declaration of the diet's undisputed sovereignty and directs that the proclamation of the Soviet republic there means a rebellion against the empire.

ELECTRIC LINE TO KAWARTHA LAKES DISCUSSED BY MEMBERS OF THE RAILWAY COMMITTEE

Hydro-Electric Commission Will Be Urged to Take Over the Toronto Eastern Railway and Extend it to Peterborough.

TRANSPORTATION

Questions of momentous interest were discussed by the Railway Committee last night. The question of an electric line to serve the summer residents of the Kawartha Lakes, which was dropped on account of the war, was revived, and the following resolution was put forward by Ald. A. A. McIntyre:

"That the Hydro-Electric Commission be written to and urged to take over the Toronto Eastern Railway, which runs from Toronto to Whitby, and that the line be extended from Whitby to Peterboro and that if they do so the council of this city will endeavour to have the necessary resolutions passed by the various municipalities asking for a report, and also that if this railway is built it should be continued from Peterboro to the Kawartha Lakes, with its terminus at McCracken's Landing, where it would serve the summer residents of the neighbourhood."

Seconded by Ald. J. J. Turner, the motion was carried.

Work Stopped.

The Toronto Eastern Railway is a line which was built by the Mackenzie and Mann interests, and was originally intended to run from Toronto to Cobourg, but it was not completed, and at Whitby the work was stopped. It is thought the railway Knights built the line as an opposition to the Hydro-Electric Commission. The Commission are now anxious to acquire the line.

A resolution framed by the Railway Committee was sent to the Hydro Commission before the war, urging that a line be built from Cobourg to the Kawartha Lakes, but this, like many other resolutions, was dropped at the opening of hostilities.

Street Railway Extensions.

The service on the Peterboro Street Railway, also came into prominence. At the last meeting of the committee the Hydro was asked to make several extensions to the present lines, especially a south line to serve the De Laval Company, and a northern route to accommodate residents near the Normal School. No move has been made yet by the Hydro Commission, and the following resolution, moved by Ald. McIntyre, and seconded by Ald. Turner, was made in order to show the Commission how urgent was the need of these lines, especially the southern one:

"That the Hydro-Electric Commission be asked whether the extensions of the Peterboro Radial Railway on Park street from Albert street to Lansdowne street, as recommended by the Council, will be soon taken up, as this extension is one that is particularly needed."

Street Railway Purchase.

The old question of the purchase by the city of the Street Railway and the old gas plant, was revived, and with little discussion the following resolution was passed:

"The Hydro-Electric Commission be asked to furnish the Council with full information so that the question of the purchase of the Peterboro Radial Railway and the gas plant by the city may be considered, and that when the information is ready that they be asked to send representatives to the city to receive a deputation from the council to discuss the matter."

The committee have already been informed that two cars for the extension of the street railway down the Monaghan Road have been ordered, but that is the last that has been heard of them, and in the meantime the line is lying idle. When the cars arrive the schedule of the whole system will be changed, and a better service on the Jackson Park line will be assured. Aldermen Turner and McIntyre fathered the following resolution:

"That the Hydro-Electric Commission be written to and asked when the new cars will be placed in service on the P.R.R., especially so as to improve the service on the Jackson Park Line."—Carried.

Train Service.

The Globe and the other Toronto dailies do not arrive in the city at an hour early enough to suit some of the citizens and now that Vice-President A. McTier of the C.P.R. has promised better service on his lines the committee decided it would be in order for the G.T.R. to "come across" with a better service. The following resolution was passed:

"The chairman be authorized to communicate with the G.T.R. authorities and ask for an interview, for the purpose of giving a better train service for Peterboro, and when an appointment is made that Campbellford and Hastings be asked to send representatives." Moved by Ald. Turner, seconded by Ald. McIntyre, and carried.

A letter was read from Mr. R. W. Scott, a Division Superintendent of the C.P.R., asking for permission to place a turn table on Water street south of Dalhousie street. The ground was visited in the afternoon by some of the members of the committee, and they thought that Mr. Scott should come to the city and discuss the matter. This location is near the C.P.R. bridge and a number of boathouses and comprises part of Water street.

This year the Horticultural Society was not granted a sum for the upkeep of the public parks, and the committee asked for tenders for the planting of flowers in Victoria and Central Parks; also for the care of the parks. Tenders for bulbs in the fall were also asked for.

SEVERAL TOWNS DESTROYED BY LANDSLIDES

(United Press.)

MESSINA, Italy, Feb. 27.—Eighteen towns between Tortorici and Castellumberto have been damaged and scoures of farms wiped out by landslides resulting from heavy rains, according to advices received here to-day.

There has been no loss of life, owing to the fact that the inhabitants were warned in advance. The property damaged amounts to millions of dollars.

Allies Are Advancing

Bolsheviki Lost Heavily in Killed and Prisoners—Official Communique

(United Press Service.)

LONDON, Feb. 27.—Allied forces advanced more than twenty-six miles on the Murman front Sunday, inflicting heavy casualties on the Bolsheviki It was reported in an official despatch received from Archangel to-day.

"Sunday the Allies advanced forty versts (26.4 miles) in the Burman region, reaching Soudgozero," the communique said. "The Bolsheviki lost heavily in killed and prisoners."

Fall Wheat Should Come Through Well

Guelph, Feb. 27.—Dr. C. A. Zavitz, Professor of Field Husbandry, in the Ontario Agricultural College, said that so far as he could tell just now the fall wheat should come through in excellent condition. He pointed out that it had a good start last fall, the winter has not been a severe one, and there has not been enough ice to do any harm. He also states that because of the fact that it has been freezing and thawing the wheat will not be damaged. He looks for a big crop of fall wheat this year, provided there are no setbacks in the spring.

PRICES WILL DECLINE DURING THE YEAR 1919

Starch, Syrup, Lard, Oatmeal and Flour on the Toboggan Slide Now.

TORONTO, Feb. 27. — That the wholesale and consequently the retail prices of foodstuffs will be on the decline during the year is the opinion expressed by a number of representatives of the wholesale grocers of Ontario, in the King Edward Hotel.

"For instance," said one wholesaler "the price of starch and syrup is down. Lard is down four cents a pound also, and the price of cereal products, such as oatmeal, is also down. During the past month the price of flour came down $1.50 a barrel. These prices will of course affect the retail grocers, and consequently the consumer."

Questioned whether the price of flour would come down much more during the year, he said, "I cannot say. There seems to be a tendency on the part of the government to keep the price of wheat at a certain level."

PARLIAMENTARY TRAIN STOPPED

Weimar Special Stopped at Leipzig—Courier to Weimar Never Turned Up.

(Canadian Press.)

BERLIN, Feb. 27.—The parliamentary special for Weimar which left Berlin yesterday, has been stopped at Leipzig. It is reported that the government courier who left here Tuesday night has not yet arrived at Weimar.

A Combined Offensive

Bolsheviki Plan An Attack on All Fronts—Allies on the Offensive

ORDERS CAPTURED

(United Press.)

LONDON, Feb. 27. — The Bolsheviki are planning a combined offensive on practically all fronts, it is revealed in captured orders of their supreme military commission, a despatch from Archangel reported to-day.

The attack is to start in the Archangel region and be extended rapidly to the Western, Southern and Eastern fronts. Only the Murmansk and Finnish fronts will be excluded from the offensive, and preparations will be made there for defensive fighting.

While these preparations are going on, the allies have successfully undertaken an offensive on the Murmansk front. Reports received from Archangel to-day said that the allies had advanced more than twenty-six miles in that region, the Bolsheviki suffering many casualties.

The chief of the American expeditionary force in Russia is reported to have satisfied himself that the Bolsheviki have actually undertaken the nationalization of women in several districts.

Best Skating of the Season Just Now at Brock St.

Skating Balance of the Week—Saturday Night Will Have Twenty Piece Band

The skating season is getting to a close, and it has not been a very satisfactory one either. There is, however, the prospect that we may have a week of the best skating we have had all season. To-night the ice is at its best and there will be a band to-night and to-morrow night, with a big double band on Saturday night, no waits and skating until 10:30 o'clock.

Better take advantage of all the skating you can until the end of the season.

An Acknowledgement

(United Press Service.)

DUBLIN, Feb. 27.—General Bliss has sent Sean O'Kelley, representative of the provisional Irish republic in Paris, the first acknowledgement of the memorial addressed to all peace delegates by the Irish government, it was announced in a despatch received here to-day.

O'Kelley, according to the despatch, denied the statement published in certain American newspapers that the object of the Dublin municipality in inviting President Wilson to accept the freedom of the city, was to embarrass him. He said the city's sole object was to honour the President and the American people.

No Mystery In Missing Coal

Ald. Taylor States That Consignors Have Offered to Replace It But Fuel Com. Want $1,500 Returned

CITY'S COAL TO DECLINE?

The City Fuel Commission has cleared up the mystery of the missing six cars of coal for which $1,500 was paid out of Peterborough's treasury. Enquiries have traced this consignment to Preston, but there is still a darkened detail as to whether Preston also paid $1,500.

Ald. Taylor stated to-day that there is really no mystery about this item of the committee's business, the facts of which will be presented to the Fire, Water and Light committee to-morrow night. If the committee seemed dilatory in demanding a settlement with its independent agents, it was simply because the arrival of these cars was patiently awaited until it became conclusive that they had been diverted to some other city.

"Our agent has admitted the non-delivery of this coal to us," Ald. Taylor said to-day, "and has requested us to accept six cars at the present market price. We prefer the money, and I am going to Toronto to-morrow to press our claim."

The committee is at a loss to explain the diversion of this shipment of coal. The bill of lading bore the name of Peterborough, which had been scored through and Preston written over it. At the same time, it is stated, draft was made on Peterborough's bank credit for $1,500, but the six cars appeared only in the missing list, until it was discovered that they had reached Preston.

The committee has no fears of losing the money, according to Ald. Taylor's statement, and it is expected that this account will be closed up in a few days.

Consider Local Supply.

City Solicitor Widdifield was present at this morning's session of the committee. There was some discussion as to what action should be taken in the retailing of the supply of coal that was bought as a winter reserve. It has become as obsolete as the files of the Fuel Commission which recorded the local distribution of coal to consumers. The market is becoming easier and the committee is considering the advisability of trimming its prices to the milder trade winds. In other words the city will practically be forced to take its loss in this venture and fix its quotations on par with those of the retailers.

ENVOY FRANCIS, HOME, WARNS AGAINST REDS

Would Not Make Peace With Germany While Bolsheviki Rule in Russia.

BOSTON, Feb. 27.—Ambassador Francis, home from Russia for the first time in two years, had several conferences with President Wilson while coming over on the George Washington, and made several recommendations for action on the part of the allied and American Governments for meeting the Bolsheviat menace and restoring Russia to the family of nations. Mr. Francis probably will disclose them later when he appears before one of the Congressional committees. He probably will remain in Washington some time, advising the State Department and Congress on the situation as he saw it on leaving.

"A reign of terror instituted by the Bolsheciki, with the purpose of maintaining themselves in power, is prevailing in central and northern Russia," said the Ambassador. "The outrages they have committed are incredible. I think it impossible to restore peace to Europe with chaos prevailing in Russia. In fact, with Germany practically uninjured industrially, I am persuaded that if a peace is negotiated with Bolshevist rule continuing in Russia, Germany in twenty years or a decade will be stronger than she was at the beginning of the war. She is familiar with the Russian character, and for a generation has been studying it to influence it.

"If this turns out, Germany, instead of having been defeated, will have gained a victory."

NATION-WIDE CONGRESS IN SESSION TO-DAY

(United Press.)

LONDON, Feb. 27.—The first nation-wide congress of Capital and Labour was held in Central Hall to-day, in an attempt to work out a programme that will avert the threatened industrial warfare.

The Labour representatives in the congress are members of the regular trades unions. While this meeting was going on, miners' representatives were holding a conference to determine the exact date of their strike, which already has been voted by a referendum.

Married At Noon To-day

Biggest Social Event Since the Outbreak of War Accounted For To-day

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Feb. 27.—Princess Patricia of Connaught and Commander Alexander R. M. Ramsay, R.N., were married at Westminster Abbey at noon to-day. No other social event since the outbreak of war has created such public interest. Crowds assembled early in the day along the route over which the Princess drove with her father, the Duke of Connaught, from St. James' Palace to Westminster Abbey, about which throngs waited patiently for a glimpse of the popular bride. The ceremony was performed by the Archbishop of Canterbury, assisted by the Dean of Westminster, and other noted ecclesiastics, in the presence of King George and Queen Mary, and a great assemblance of members of the Royal family. A guard of honour of the "Princess Pat" regiment was stationed at the door, sharing honours with seamen from the H.M.S. George V. Court mourning over the death of Prince John was waived for the occasion and the elegant gowns of the ladies lent a festal air to the assemblage.

The Presents.

The wedding presents, which are still arriving, number nearly seven hundred, and range from comely market baskets to priceless diamonds. Princess Patricia presented Commander Ramsay with a bust of herself, while his gift to the bride was a Chinese lacquered cabinet. The bride entered the Abbey by the west door, which is used only on occasions of importance. Her gown was of a white brocaded panne over silver lace, the outer gown being caught up with silver lovers' knots. She carried a bouquet presented by the Princess Pat Canadian Regiment and tied with the regimental colours. After the ceremony there was a procession of the Royal family down the aisle of the historic cathedral. It was led by the Duke of Connaught and Queen Mary, King George and Queen Mother Alexandra, and former King Manuel of Portugal and his wife, who was formerly Princess Augustine Victoria, of Hohenzollern, peers and peeresses followed.

PARIS, Feb. 27.—Premier Clemenceau resumed his official tasks at the Ministry of War this morning.

THE PEACE CONFERENCE

Creation of a "Buffer" State is Suggested Between France and Germany

NEXT SESSION

By Fred S. Ferguson.
(United Press.)

PARIS, Feb. 27.—Creation of a "buffer" State between France and Germany by making the Rheinish provinces self-governing, was discussed by the peace delegates to-day.

This project, which is still in a formative stage, was introduced during a debate on the adjustment of the boundaries of enemy countries. France, being the only country not protected from Germany by a natural barrier, is still clinging to the idea that the Rhine should constitute its eastern frontier. The proposition for establishment of a "buffer" state was presented as a compromise. This arrangement, it is understood, would be temporary, the new state being permitted to decide its own future by a plebiscite as soon as Germany has made full reparation.

The next plenary session of the peace conference, it was said to-day, probably will take place the middle of next month, when all the special committees will present their reports. Especially rapid progress is being made by the committee on reparation and responsibility for the war, it is understood.

Some Strange Souvenirs

Skull Rimmed With Gold and Used as a Drinking Cup

In the days to come, there will, doubtless, be seen in this country some strange relics of the great European conflict. Not long ago, a Lancashire man received from the front the actual bullet which had caused his brother's death.

A few years ago there was sold by auction the spear that was used by a rebel dervish to kill General Gordon. The relic ultimately fetched thirty guineas. On another occasion the sword used by Lord Cardigan in the battle of Balaclava was disposed of at the same auction-mart for eight and a half guineas.

A very different war relic realized a very different price. This was the silver-gilt table-service used by Napoleon in the course of his many campaigns, and it went for 650 pounds sterling.

A really extraordinary war relic was brought to light in Tottenham Police Court some years ago. A woman applied to the magistrate for a summons against a pawnbroker for damage to a hearthrug. She explained that during a campaign on the Indian frontier, her son had made a large hearth-rug out of the garments of his slain comrades, and sent it home to her.

A few years ago a relic of the siege of Paris was discovered in a windmill near Besancon. This was the mummified body of a pigeon, to one of the wings of which a quill was attached. Inside this was a brief message, dated 1870, which read: "Darling,—All well, but starving.—P.P.G." The pigeon was one of the homers which had been released during the siege, and, maybe, shot by the Germans.

Perhaps the most gruesome of all war relics was one of the first Ashanti War, in 1824, when Sir Charles McCarthy and six hundred men fell into an ambush, and were slaughtered to a man. The skull of the leader of the gallant six hundred was rimmed with gold, and used as a drinking cup by the kings of Kumassi for half a century!

THE QUESTION MARK.

Capt. J. H. Burnham, the Federal member for West Peterborough, is losing no time in the present session in re-establishing himself in the position he held in former sessions of the House, that of a question mark. His specialty is to interject into the debate at as frequent intervals as possible, queries that are intended to embarrass the speaker of the moment. That they usually have a diametrically opposite effect does not seem to worry Mr. Burnham in the least. His question may not have much to do with the subject under discussion, or it may possibly be connected with it, but in any case the query generally gives the speaker a chance to make a neat reply at the expense of Mr. Burnham and to the general delight of both sides of the House who can find common ground at any time on anything that hits the member for West Peterborough. To give the doughty captain credit, however, he is impervious to verbal darts and instead of retiring discomfited from the fray after one of his questions has proved a boomerang, he generally comes up next day for some more of the same treatment. All of which adds a much needed hilarity to the somewhat sombre proceedings of the House, if it does not to Captain Burnham's reputation for soundness of thought.

THE HUNTER STREET BRIDGE

Engineer Barber's explanation to the Board of Works in regard to reducing the cost of the structure without interfering with the original plans has put an entirely different aspect on the whole problem. Mr. Barber is satisfied that the city has ample funds on hand to build the bridge, and there will be no necessity of going to the ratepayers for more money. New tenders are being asked for and it is understood that when they are opened on the first of April that the engineer's confidence will be vindicated by the bids that will be made by the contractors. Much of the misunderstanding and doubt in connection with the matter would have been avoided if Mr. Barber had had an earlier opportunity of taking up the whole question with the committee. As it was the majority of the aldermen were of the opinion that it would be necessary to submit another by-law, and they with the citizens generally, are glad to know that this will not have to be done and that there is every prospect of going ahead with the bridge with the funds now in hand.

FREE LAND FOR SOLDIERS.

The Province of Quebec, upon whose war efforts other parts of Canada have not hesitated to reflect unfavorably, has in the bill introduced into the Legislature on Tuesday, a system of rewarding the soldiers who have fought for Canada, Great Britain or the Allies, that is more generous than the land settlement schemes of other provinces. The measure is very wide in its scope. Farms are to be granted free of any obligation whatsoever to soldiers of whatever nationality among the allies of the British Empire, and to soldiers of any and all of the Dominions and colonies of the British Empire who served in the war and were previously residents of Canada. There are none of the troublesome obligations that exist in connection with other land schemes. The land is absolutely free, and shall not be subject to taxes or levies. In addition it is provided that any soldier who has secured a grant of land from the Province of Quebec, and who wishes to secure a loan from the Federal Land Commission to assist him in his work, may give a valid mortgage on such land.

BATHING PLACES.

In preparing the estimates for this year, the City Council should not overlook the necessity of including an appropriation for bathing places. Before the last election, a number of the Aldermen expressed themselves in favour of the city assisting in the providing of suitable beaches, where it would be possible for Peterboro's young people to bathe in safety and comfort. These promises made then should be implemented by action, and this season of the year when the estimates are being drawn up, is the proper time for deciding upon a policy.

The very least that this year's council can do is to set aside an appropriation for the improving of the bathing facilities at Javerlea Park. Last summer, thanks to the enterprise of the Nicholls Park Board, a bathing house was provided at Javerlea, while a caretaker was appointed to look after the safety of the bathers and their property. The great population of the park during the summer months was a surprise even to the most enthusiastic supporter of public swimming places. Although last summer was peculiarly cool and not an ideal season for bathing, the attendance at Javerlea was very large at all times and on the few really hot days ran up into remarkable figures. Beyond removing a few stumps from the water the city authorities did nothing to improve the conditions, the responsibility being thrown almost altogether on the shoulders of the Nicholls Park Board.

This year the City Council should see to it that the river-bed at Javerlea, at least that part of it inside the cement break-water, is made comfortable and safe for the children. The bottom at present is rough and dirty, and for the little folks, and for their elders who are learning to swim as well, there is always the danger of a painful cut or injury. Sergt. Cooper, who was the caretaker last year, would no doubt be able to give the council some illuminating figures as to the number of cases of cuts from jagged stones, roots and old cans and bottles, to which he applied first-aid methods last season.

The expenditure of a few hundred dollars by the council would put this section of the beach, inside the break-water, in a very satisfactory condition. All that is needed is to scrape the bottom and dump in a quantity of sand, and possibly repair the break-water itself. The City Engineer should be asked to report on this work and if nothing further is done this year in regard to bathing places, the improvement of the one already provided should be undertaken by the Council.

THE FARMERS' PARTY.

The following comment upon the result of the recent bye-election in North Ontario is interesting inasmuch as it appears in the Weekly Sun which presumes to speak for the farmers of Ontario:

The United Farmers have won in North Ontario another election. The total vote was nearly 1,700 larger than that cast in the general election of 1914, in which the government candidate had a majority of 277. The new voters were, probably, for the most part, women, who are supposed to have voted, on the whole, as their men voted. The governments at Ottawa and Toronto, which were both assailed, used all their influences of patronage and doles and bounties promised from the public purse and strenuous efforts were made to arouse party feeling. The result shows as the result in Manitoulin showed that an element of the electorate, which is apparently large enough to endanger the security of both governments, breaks from party control.

The vote which changes in these elections is actuated not by motives of partizanship but of discontent. It protests against the administration of the war and of the Military Service Act, against the unequal economic conditions which have been made during the war and against the financial recklessness of the Provincial and Dominion Governments now that the war is at an end. Mr. Hearst ought to take warning of the danger which he runs. Strangely, he misinterprets the vote against him, assuming that the public demand is not for more prudence and frugality but for more extravagance and more paternalism. If he persists, we should deem it not impossible that he may driven from power and a farmers' government put in his place. The changing vote is clearly not for Mr. Proudfoot, who the independent electors involve with Mr. Hearst in a common condemnation. In all important matters of public policy, he is not distinguishable from Mr. Hearst, except in the respect that he has put a gag in his own mouth and rendered himself incapable of taking his proper place as the spokesman of the public discontent. It is not unlikely that, if he continues to stand aloof from the popular movement against the government, his party will be destroyed.

The United Farmers are driven by their successes to consider carefully their dangers and responsibilities. The most imminent danger is that their representatives in the legislature may be trapped in the Hearst or Proudfoot camp or in the labour camp. They will find instructive lessons in the legislative experience of the Patrons of Industry. The United Farmers' Association has so far declined to warrant the foundation of a political party and has left political action to the initiative of the local associations. The farmers of Saskatchewan take the same course. But, presently, the general association will have to deal with a general demand of the local association to imitate Manitoulin and North Ontario. In that case, they may be made a political party and forced into a compromise with Mr. Proudfoot or into a life and death struggle of three-cornered elections, th advantage of which will be all with Mr. Hearst. There is another alternative, that of exacting from candidates an acceptance of the farmers' platform or such part of it as touches the discontent of the day. For practical politics, there is great advantage in the possession of a programme, but in the programme of the Council of Agriculture there are some matters like the public ownership of railways and the Western suggestions of socialism, which we should regret to see forced on all candidates who would seek the farmers' vote. There ought to be a provincial programme for Ontario dealing mainly with the debt and the government's finance and taxation.

FIVE CARAT DIAMOND POLICEMAN'S SHIELD FROM FLYING BOTTLE

NEW YORK, Feb. 27. - Glittering evidence was offered in the Yorkville Court when Police Sergeant Henry Bruck, of the West Fifty-first street station, brought his personal jewelry into a matter which had been progressing upon a mere bear level. He told in detail of how he had saved his highly decorated person by placing a five carat diamond between his threatened skull and the onslaught of a loud Third avenue beer party.

Three young men dressed in exceedingly everyday clothing were arraigned charged with having made Third avenue wilder than usual by singing alcholic arias. They were arrested at Fiftieth street just before dawn, and upon being notified that they were duly and officially arrested one of them, whose identity was safe in the morning murk and the fact that his companions looked as unpretty as he did, raised a beer bottle and attempted to cause an echo upon the pinnacle of the law.

What followed is of interest to all jewelers and bottle wielders.

"I raised my left hand to fend off the blow," said Sergeant Bruck, "and the bottle struck my five carat diamond ring and was shattered. But for my five carat diamond ring I might have been killed, but fortunately I was not injured and my five carat diamond ring is quite all right."

There was time out while the court and all those present looked for the five carat ring, which, sure enough, was right where a bottle could hardly miss it.

GENERAL ELECTRIC AUDITOR HELD IN PAY ROLL THEFT

EVERETT, Mass., Feb. 27.—Charles S. Whittemore, general auditor for the General Electric Company, was arrested at his home in Malden charged with conspiracy and assault in connection with the attack on Frank M. Brown, assistant paymaster at the local plant of the company, who was held up on December 20 and robbed of the weekly payroll amounting to $12,000.

Louis Bennett, of Boston, familiarly known as "Pooco" Bennett, and Charles Mortalli, alias Charles Celeste, also were arrested in connection with the robbery. A charge of assault was placed against them. Four men who were arrested in New York are under indictment.

Organist Retiring

On Tuesday evening the Baptist church people assembled at the home of Mr. Donald MacNaughton, Hastings Road, and presented Miss Vida MacNaughton, their retiring organist, with a quarter cut oak leather upholstered rocker. Her brother, Alex. was also the recipient of a similar gift.

The presentations were accompanied by the following address.

Miss Vida MacNaughton,

Norwood, Ont.

Dear Sister,—We, the members of the Norwood Baptist Church are met in your home to-night to spend a social time together prior to your departure to another part of the country.

We desire to express to you our sincere appreciation of service rendered for the good of the Master's cause in our church.

We also wish to thank you for the manner in which you discharged your duty as organist, in the church, Sunday School and B.Y.P.U. and trust that in your new home, you may be able to do greater service for God.

We ask you to accept as a small token the gift which we trust in days to come you may find useful

Wishing you every blessing and hoping you may always have a warm spot in your heart for the people of the little White Church.

Signed on behalf of the church:
Mrs. Lewis Fife, Mrs. D. Oakley,
Mrs. J. B. McCormack.

Mr. Alexander MacNaughton.

Dear Brother,—We, the members of the Norwood Baptist church are met here to-night to manifest to you the esteem and respect we have for you as a member of said church also to express our sincere appreciation for the manner in which you executed the offices as assigned to you, by the vote of the church, as clerk of the church, and President of the B.Y.P. Union.

We sincerely regret that you are about to move from our midst to another part.

You shall be missed and we do hope and pray that the blessing of Almighty God may follow you and make you a blessing among men.

We, therefore, ask you to accept this chair as a small memento and we do hope and pray that while you are enjoying a rest by the way, your memory may go back to the days spent in happy service for God in our church.

The Lord bless you.
Signed on behalf of the Church, J. B. McCormick, minister.

SIR WILFRID AND AFTER

By H. F. GADSBY

The unexpected expected was happening. An aged statesman, well beyond the Psalmist's span, was paying the debt we all owe to nature. The apoplexy that struck him down, although a painful surprise, was an apprehended accident of his advanced years. Sir Wilfrid Laurier had said himself, not more than a fortnight ago, that he was "ripe for Heaven," and now, his soul's peace made, he was passing Out and Beyond.

The correspondents scribbled rapidly up there in the Press Room, answering queries from excited managing editors, sending "flashes," trimming heir big story into shape. While their hands were busy with pencil and paper their ears strained for the telephone. The Dark Angel was at the other end of the wire. They must not miss one of his messages. Sir Wilfrid was dying and the whole country; through that little telephone booth in the corner of the room wailed at his bedside. Great men do not live for themselves alone, and they must die the same way.

The telephone could not say much. He was making a good end. He was going out as he had wished to go,—quickly and without pain. He was conscious but he could not speak. The paralysis had robbed him of his voice but he could press tenderly the hands of those who addressed loving words to him. About noon, there was a distinct slackening of the pulse. After that he faded minute by minute—his heart feebler with every tick of the clock. He was an old man—a very old man and very tired—and his work was done. He glided into sleep and from that sleep into death. Sir Wilfrid breathed his last ten minutes to three in the afternoon. It was a day of glorious sunshine—as clear, bright and strong as the luminous intelligence which has just been extinguished.

The talk in the Press Room did not centre about the honours and achievements of his long career. No one, that I can remember, made that pseudo-sage remark—a great page in history has been written. What the correspondents said was "we have lost a friend." That the men who were in daily in touch with him, who were obliged some times, to take sides against him, should suffer not abatement of affection in their long intimacy, is as beautiful a tribute as any that will be laid on his grave. None who came under the spell of the magician, no matter how politics sundered them, ever escaped from that mellow influence. Sir Wilfrid in defeat had as many friends as he had in the plenitude of success — perhaps more friends, perhaps better ones, because he was free of the turmoil and bitterness of active rulership and could round out his destiny as a serene philosopher.

For some time before he shifted into the Infinite, Sir Wilfrid was living in a sort of Nirvana which takes small account of earthly strife. He had thrown away ambition. He was willing to stand aside for the Coming Man—if the Coming Man would only hurry. Who is the Coming Man? Has death solved that problem? At all events Sir Wilfrid died as he had lived — a peace-maker.

"I shall never forget," said one grizzled correspondent, "how he took me, an awkward, cub reporter, put me at my ease and enfolded me in his smile. That smile of his has kept me warm to him all my life."

"Yes," said another, "he was a true friend. I took a lot of my troubles to him. He was always willing to share a burden. He helped me over some hard spots. Better times—he used to say—for you and me."

"I wonder," said another fingering an old Hansard, "if he will find anybody to speak as eloquently for him as he did for Macdonald. What a funeral oration the late Tom White will have something to do to top this stuff here."

"It's a good thing," said another "that we've had a war to accustom us to great bereavements. Sir Wilfrid leaves a big gap. Ottawa will never be quite the same to me now that the "Old Man" has gone."

"I'm glad," interjected another, "that he lived to see the end of the war. It would have been a great disappointment to that eager mind of his not to know how the great tragedy came out. Now that the war is over we begin to know what it meant. Now that Sir Wilfrid's life is over we may begin to know what it meant too."

Ond so the talk drifted. The state funeral provided another topic for comment.

"It's my opinion," said one, "that Union Government buries a great deal of its peace of mind when it buries Laurier. He was a steadying influence. Who will keep the young lions from Quebec in order now that there is no one to whom to transfer their personal devotion? Sir Wilfrid's death puts a new sharp edge on the whole situation."

"Let us hope for the best," said another. "If the solid Quebec has no one to be solid about, the solid Ontario may also disappear. Perhaps the day is near when we shall cease to play one against the other. What we want is healthy cleavage of opinion all over the country. No blocs—or other obstacles to straight thinking. If the guns over in Europe have taught us anything it must be to be honest in our differences of opinion. The New Deal, whatever it is, should cut athwart the whole of Canada, leaving no province out."

"It's my opinion," said a Winnipeg man, "that Sir Wilfrid's death puts a new fissure in Union Government. What will the Premier and one fourth of the Cabinet absent in Paris, and Sir Wilfrid, who sat on the Opposition lid, gone, this session which merely threatened to be turbulent may now become disruptive. Everybody ought to be on the job if we are to come through the reconstruction period all right."

"What's to prevent" asked a nervous Toronto correspondent, "The Western Liberal Unionists, whether in or out of the Cabinet from gravitating to the new English Protestant Liberal leader especially if he is found on lower tariff? They may have felt a little delicate about going back to Sir Wilfrid for various reasons but what's to stop them bolting now if the right man comes along? It looks to me as if the sceptre is about to pass to the West.

"How about MacKenzie King?" somebody suggested.

"A rising hope— clean record, excellent abilities — youth and vigour. But how does he stand with the Old Guard? Besides he's not in the House. He has to come from too far behind. Anyhow there's not enough Ontario Liberals in Parliament to make anybody leader."

Events may stultify Press Room comment —this story is written ten days ahead of the date of issue—but the general opinion was that Mr. Fielding, a Liberal Unionist, or Mr. D. D Mackenzie, a Laurier Liberal, would be chosen temporary leader and that the national convention would probably settle on Premier Martin of Saskatchewan or perhaps a Western Liberal, now in the Cabinet, as permanent choice. Regret was expressed that Mr. Carvell had not resigned his Cabinet position as soon as the armistice was signed. He would have been in a better position for the Liberal leadership as a private member than as a Cabinet Minister in Union Government. A similar regret was expressed in regard to Messrs. Calder, Sifton, Crerar, who are, so to speak, "tactically placed" for this sudden change in the front line.

It will be interesting to note how near or how far the Press Gallery is from the actual solution of the problem. No doubt the conclusions of the men on the spot are just as pertinent as those made by wise editors at a longer distance. In the midst of death we are in life and the biggest question for both the political parties in Canada is, "What Next."

All the World recognizes the Pathephone as the Greatest of all Phonographs —and why? Hear TWO phonographs playing, one after the other, and playing the same Records. THEN you will agree that one is— a PHONOGRAPH, to leave it at least its name—AND THAT THE OTHER IS A

Pathephone

Listening to one TO-DAY, to the other a week LATER, the untrained ear might not always note the great difference;—but hear them together and the superiority of the Pathephone will be immediately apparent: it is like setting up dross against GOLD! The Pathephone, built with ideals of ART and TRUTH, renders the art and truth of MUSIC at its BEST!

Period Design Pathephone
"WILLIAM & MARY"
Price $309.50
in Mahogany and Walnut

The wonderful inventive genius that brought the Pathephone to its perfection and has maintained it ever in the lead, has distinguished itself in several remarkable devices, such as the Sapphire Ball, which not only greatly improves the tone, but also does away with needle changing and ensures longlife to the Record, and the tone modulator, permitting you to augment or decrease the volume of tone at your pleasure. Then, there is the ingenious device which makes it possible to play ANY make of Record!

You must hear the Pathephone to realize what a wonderful and artistic Music Maker it is. It is splendidly built in modern as well as in Period designs. They are exquisite examples of the Furniture maker's art, and still they cost LESS than ordinary Phonographs and are sold on terms of payment which make buying convenient.

Industrial Parliament Was Addressed By Lloyd George

Representatives of Both Sides Met To-day—The "Triple Alliance" Makes a Statement.

(Canadian Press.)

LONDON, Feb. 27. — An industrial parliament, composed of representatives of employers and employed and government officials, assembled in the Central Hall, Westminster, this morning. Premier Lloyd George and others addressed the gathering. The delegates to Parliament number 800. It is estimated that more than ten million workers are represented.

James Henry Thomas, Member of Parliament, and General Secretary of the National Union of Railway Men, said he was deputed to make the following declaration for the triple alliance of miners, Railway Men and Transport workers:

Shorter Hours

"The Organized Workers of Great Britain have made up their minds to claim for themselves an increasing share of wealth which their labor has produced and produces. The workers through the three-fold organization are determined to shorten materially the hours of labour in their respective industries.

"Labour has become increasingly alive to its sovereign power and will shirk no responsibilities, and will be denied none of its rights and privileges.

"The Miners, Railway Men and Transport Workers stand unalterably for ownership by states of mines and railways, and the means of inland and coastal transport."

Statement declares that for most of prevailing demands, "the scandalous profiteering countenanced by the government during the period of the war" is responsible.

Drastic Changes.

The statement continues:

"Realizing these facts and the inferences from them, the workers have resolutely set their faces towards some order of society which will improve their lives and conditions in accord with the new valuation they have set upon themselves. No longer are they prepared to content themselves with every wage advance being thrust upon the consumer and consequently cancelling every improvement instantly and automatically. Rent, interest and profits are not inviolate.

"The statesmen of every party must make up their minds that there is going to be a drastic change. Wise men will allow and provide for it. Others will be convinced only by the compeling power of events.

"In every country we see the workers seeking changes. We in this country may be able to see these changes brought about peacefully and orderly."

Tells How Turks Nailed Tongues Of Women To Table

Armenians Cry for Bread—The Acid Test of Peace is Harder to Meet Than Test of War.

New York, Feb. 26.—The story of the revolting cruelties perpetrated in Armenia and Syria by Germans and Turks was told graphically here by motion picture and by word of mouth to seven hundred clergymen of all denominations at the Hotel Astor here. The occasion was the dinner given by Alexander Hempbill, Cleveland H. Dodge, James M. Speers and Henry Morganthau marking the official opening of the Armenian and Syrian Relief Campaign in this city to raise $6,000,000 from March 3 to March 10.

Major W. H. Cressy of Boston, a medical officer in the Royal Serbian Army, spoke of what he had seen in the wake of the retreating Hun and Turk, speaking plainly and yet convincingly that the clergymen were obviously moved.

"I remember distinctly entering a town in Monastir after the enemy had departed," he said, "and there finding kneeling about a long table women as if in prayer. Upon investigation we found that their tongues had been pulled out with pincers as far back as possible and then through their mouths spikes had been driven, impaling them upon the table. Many of these were about to become mothers. This is exactly what the brutes intended to do to our women had they been able."

Millions Cry For Bread

Serbia's population of over five million, said Major Cressy, had been reduced to one million, while her army of 400,000 had suffered losses amounting to 368,000. Equally revolting stories were told about the work of the Hun and the Turk in Armenia and Syria, the lesson therefrom being that unless America aided, millions more must perish.

"None of us would pass by a child on the street crying for bread," said James M. Speers, toastmaster, "and yet there are 400,000 who are crying, not only for bread but for clothing and shelter and their dead parents. There are 2,000,000 Armenians and Syrians who will die unless America helps them."

"The acid test of peace is harder to meet than the test of war," declared the Rev. M. H. Lichliter, of Cleveland, "and the splendid spirit of sacrifice, which we experienced during war is weakening. We must develop the international mind. We can't lend money to Armenia, for there is no government there to negotiate loans with. We must give. Sixty dollars will feed an Armenian for a year. There are 2,000,000 to be fed and this will cost $14,500,000 for six months.

400,000 Orphans Need Help

"There are 400,000 orphans to be cared for; there are 1,700,000 men and women to be repatriated; this will cost $5,000,000; we need $2,500,000 for agricultural implements and seed; we need $8,000,000 for clothing; we want $2,500,000 for building houses." Of the $36,000,000 which America is asked to give for this work, New York is to furnish $6,000,000 and in that endeavor, one hundred thousand women will make a house to house canvass during the week in March set apart. March 9 will be the Sunday upon which all pulpits will be set apart for this appeal.

SALEM, Mass.—George H. Gauth- testified in court that he was troubled with fits, and went to Miss Mary for treatment. She told him to cook an egg in a handkerchief and carry it in his pocket for two weeks. That failed to halt the fits, she said, was to wrap himself in red silk and sit on a white cloth for one hour. He paid her $250 for the advice and all that Miss Guy told him, he said, but was not cured of his affliction and then brought suit to recover his money.

Voice of The People

"TOO MUCH CHEW."

Dear Sir: The Hunter Street bridge —How much longer are we to have all the "chew" about building this bridge. I would like to make some of the council walk six times a day to their offices from East City in mud and water, the same as the East City people have to do all winter, instead of just jumping out of their cars into their offices. If the bridge is going to cost such a big price, they are getting the taxes, so why kick? It is all right for them to make all the fuss just because they have to put up a few dollars. What if the town should have to build it themselves—they get the money. They are not thinking of the poor men that have got a big family to keep and not a dollar to buy food with. They have all big checks to come to them on pay day. Why not get busy and start the work so as to put the men to work, and not chew so much about it? Yours, truly, M. Banks.

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—Mr. Burnham is at it again. He butted in to Judge McKenzie's speech with a half-baked question, and got a jolt when the answer came that made him sit up bat-eyed for the rest of the day.

The announcement that Mr. Burnham may vote against daylight saving, is very refreshing. If he votes against daylight saving the way he voted against the granting and wearing of titles, knighthoods, etc., it will be some vote. Mr. Burnham should remember that the Daylight Savings Bill, giving an extra hour to the day, is very useful to the Borden Government because if there was ever an outfit that needed extra time to do work that the ordinary man could do in regular hours, it is the Borden Government, and Mr. Burnham and a few more politicians like him.

Yours truly,
HUNTER STREET.

KEEP DEATH PACT OF SILENCE AFTER DUEL AT A DANCE

Youths, Fatally Wounding Each Other, Refuse to Tell Cause of Fight.

NEW YORK, Feb. 27.—In St. Catherine's Hospital, Williamsburg, death closed the lips of two young men and left unexplained their spectacular duel of Sunday at a dance in Empire Hall, Lorimer and Ten Eyck streets. Advised by the surgeons and police to reveal the cause of the shooting, as their wounds were fatal, both remained silent and calmly awaited the end.

"Don't tell," whispered Anthony Di Andrea, twenty-three years old, a clerk, of No. 154 Broadway, Brooklyn, who had two wounds in the abdomen. His voice faintly carried to the other duellist, Anthony Napolitana, twenty-four, of No. 211 North Sixth street, Brooklyn. He had been shot near the temple.

"Alright—mum's the word," replied Napolitana. To the end they kept their vow. At three-thirty o'clock yesterday morning Di Andrea passed away, and five minutes later he was joined by Napolitana.

Two theories, predicated upon little tangible evidence, are advanced by the police as an explanation for the shooting. One concerns a long and bitter feud—its associate, a girl. Detectives seeking for a solution, admit either might be correct—or without foundation.

Incidents attendant to the duel are likewise clouded. In the hall were two hundred merry-makers, mostly from the north side of Brooklyn. It was the occasion of the annual dance given by the Lelarain Athletic Club.

Suddenly the couples came to an abrupt pause as a revolver barked in the centre of the floor. Immediately it was followed by a second flash and report. Instantly the girls and their companions fled shrieking in panic. The music ceased as the players joined in the flight.

Left to themselves, and with each but a few feet away, Di Andrea and Neapolitana exchanged shots until both collapsed from their wounds. When Detectives Thomas Carroll and Robert Ferris arrived from the Stagg street station the two men were found lying near each other, their weapons within hand's reach.

While on their way to the operating room in the hospital, where a cursory examination by the surgeons proved the futility of any operation, they made their dying pledge.

Detectives who questioned several persons in the hall were told that the men got into an argument when one was asked for permission to dance with a young girl who sat beside him. But the police give more credence to the story of the feud, said to be an outgrowth of Di Andrea's recent arrest on a charge of white slavery.

ALCOHOL LIMIT IN BRINKS IS HALF PER CENT.

Proposed Measures for Punishment of Liquor Manufacturers and Property Owners.

WASHINGTON, D.C., Feb. 27.—Any beverage containing more than one-half of one per cent alcohol will be banned by the war-time prohibition act effective July 1, after a measure approved by the House Judiciary Committee to make the act effective.

The committee's definition of intoxicating liquor was written in the bill as follows:

"The words beer, wine or other intoxicating malt or vinous liquors in the war prohibition act shall be construed as any liquor which contains in excess of one-half of one per cent. of alcohol."

Enforcement of the war-time prohibition law, which continues in effect until after demobilization, is placed with the Internal Revenue Bureau by the bill framed by the committee. Agents of the bureau would investigate violations of the law and prosecutions would be conducted by United States Attorneys. Any place where liquor is manufactured or sold would be declared a public nuisance, subject to abatement, and its operators subject to fine and imprisonment as guilty of a misdemeanor.

Property that owners knowingly permit to be used for violating the law would be subject to a lien for fine and costs of cases resulting from the prosecution.

Dinner Party Last Evening

Presentation to Sunday School Teacher of St. John's

A most enjoyable dinner party was held last night at the home of Mrs. Deyman, 308 Aylmer street by St. John's F.B.C., in honor of their teacher's birthday.

The evening was spent in games and music and just before dinner was served Mrs. May was presented with the following address and a bouquet of beautiful red roses.

Mrs. May,

Dear Friend and Teacher, — We the members of your Bible Class wish to extend to you our heartiest good wishes on this your birthday, and we pray that God in His great mercy may spare you to enjoy many more of them.

We ask you to accept these roses as an emblem of our respect and love for you and the good fellow ship exists in our class.

Signed on behalf of the F.B.C., S. A. Deyman, President.

Mrs. Bacon then presented Mrs. May with the roses and although taken completely by surprise made a very suitable reply.

The dinner was in charge of Mrs. Head and Mrs. Barton.

The singing of "Should auld acquaintance be forgot" brought a most enjoyable evening to a close.

WATCH OVER GRAVES OF CANADA'S FALLEN

TORONTO, Feb. 26.—General Pau was greeted with resounding applause when he was introduced to the City Council. Mayor Church read an address of welcome in French, after which he read the English translation.

In replying General Pau was compelled to call upon the services of his secretary, Andre Siegsfried, to interpret. He listened with considerable interest to the address of welcome delivered by Premier Hearst, also through the interpreter, and then responded in his own tongue. There were enough people in the chamber who understood the speaker to follow and applaud his remarks. At brief intervals he paused, and his secretary repeated in English what had been said.

Will Care For Graves.

"I want to express the gratitude of France for the brave Canadians who did not hesitate to give their lives for the cause of freedom, and who are now lying beneath the soil of France," said the General, amid a deep silence. "You women who may have sons or husbands or sweethearts over there, to you I would say that they are not forgotten. They are now a part of France. They were our brothers before—they are doubly so now. You may not be able to put fresh flowers upon their graves, but they will be placed there by other hands—by the hands of the women of France. On the days of the anniversaries of the great battles they will be remembered."

France and England, concluded the speaker, had given the world the greatest example of two nations knitted together in the bonds of brotherhood through the horrors of war. He hoped that that brotherhood would prove a bulwark against all fear of wars in the future.

WOMAN WITH ARTIST IN CRASH HELPS WIDOW WIN IN COURT

NEW YORK, Feb. 27. — Despite strained relations between Mrs. Mary Agnes Peters, widow of George M. Peters, artist and designer, and Mrs. Mabel W. Wolcott, the latter helped the former to get a verdict of $15,000 for the death of her husband. Mrs. Wolcott was the artist's companion on an automobile ride February 13, 1917, when at 129th street and Snake Hill road, a surface car struck the automobile and caused injuries from which Mr. Peters died. Mrs. Wolcott escaped with slight hurts.

She appeared as the principal witness for Mrs. Peters in the widow's action against the Forty-second Street, Manhattanville and St. Nicholas Avenue Railway Company for $100,000. The trial was held before Justice Robert F. Wagner. Mrs. Wolcott admitted having lived at the same address in Leonia, N.J., with the artist prior to the accident. Her description of the accident proved the crux of the case.

Investigated Reported Case Of Destitution

Mr. G. W. Powell, agent for the Children's Aid Society, has returned from a trip to Silver Lake in Galway Township, where he investigated a case of reported destitution. He found a family of five children, three of them at home and two working out. The father owns four hundred acres of land, but last year he became ill and was able to work only thirty acres. There were no evidences of extreme distress. The children appeared to be healthy, but a little girl of eight years was wearing a heavy pair of man's boots, evidently the only footwear available for her. Mr. Powell had taken with him a supply of food, but found that clothing was the family's first need, and is taking steps to obtain some for them.

He also warned the father that the children must be properly cared for. The mother was not at home when Mr. Powell called.

Peterboro' Employment Bureau Receives Applications From As Far As Belfast, Ireland

Applicant Describes Himself as a "Superintending Engineer"--The Local Labour Situation Could Be Be a Whole Lot Worse.

A DAY'S WORK

From as far as Belfast, Ireland, applications have been received by the newly opened Labour Bureau on Charlotte street. The long distance application mentioned came from the "Superintending Engineer" of the Corporation of Belfast, who having served with a labour corps on the Eastern front, has decided to seek his fortune in Canada, preferably in the Canadian General Electric Works. "List him at once," said Captain Morrison, on reading the details. "He's married and we must act quickly in such cases."

Labour Situation.

While the labour situation in the city is apparently fairly acute on account of the closing of the munition plants and laying off of hands in the large factories, so far the Bureau has not come in touch with any cases of actual destitution. At present the situation seems to have only reached the stage when men are restless and anxious to go to work at anything. So far the longest seige of enforced idleness reported was that of a soldier who was given his discharge on November the 16th, and has been unable since to get anything to do.

Busy Office.

"No loafers allowed" is the motto of the Bureau, and the applicants for work are not encouraged to make themselves at home after stating their business. Mr. H. Robertson, who is in charge with the soldiers' representative, Captain Morrison, believes in putting things through in a business-like manner, and handles with dispatch the average number of twenty-five applicants who apply for work. During the day, he said, we have meen looking for practically every kind of work, mostly from the munition workers who have been laid off, and unskilled labour. By co-operation with the factories which directly they want help apply to us we are able to place a fair percentage of the applicants.

Farmers Want Help.

Daily applications are received from the farmers who are apparently in prety bad straits owing to the shortage of labour on the farm. As a great majority of the men are married, it is fairly hard to get them on the farm. Up in Haliburton stone workers are wanted, and as yet this order has not been filled.

Place Out of Town.

Factories in the big cities have applied for help, and though they want to a great extent, skilled men, such as furniture makers and wicker workers, Mr. Robertson expects to place some of the men outside the city shortly. At present the converting of the old Murray Street Baptist church into the Great War Veterans' rooms is keeping busy a considerable number of carpenters who applied to the Bureau.

Few Women Applicants.

While the Bureau is open to women as well as to men, there have been few applications from them. A few munition workers who are anxious to remain in factory work have drifted in, but it is the aim of the Bureau to disencourage women to continue in factory work and rather to return to the work they were engaged in previous to the war. So far no stenographers have applied. We have one good job for a cook open to a capable woman until March the 16th, Mr. Robertson said.

Soldiers' Representative.

Cautain Morrison looks after the soldiers' interests only and deals with as many as thirteen a day. From the Bureau he directs the returned men into the channels of civil re-establishment and arranges for their vocational training. He has already arranged to send some to Queen's University, where besides receiving six months' training gratuitously they will be paid $1.30 a day.

Whiskey Detective Created Suspicion But Proved Genuine

"If you're a whiskey detective show your credentials." And immediately all eyes in the car of a recent Montreal-Toronto train were turned toward the spot where the conductor and apparently a passenger were having a little discussion.

One passenger had pounced upon another as soon as the train crossed into Ontario and having searched his grip, mumbling to the astonished passenger and those about him, "I'm a whiskey detective—a whiskey detective." It seems he found what he wanted to in the grip and informed the "wicked" man that he would detrain with him at Brockville. Then having so informed him, the detective continued his search work. He espied two foreigners who didn't quite appreciate his right to go through their travelling bags and pockets, and were willing to make the proper sort of objection.

Credentials Demanded.

At this point the conductor took a hand in the proceedings. "What authority have you got to disturb the passengers on my train as you are doing?" he shot at the disturber of the peace, and added, "If you're a whiskey detective show your credentials." The person addressed swelling with importance, was not to be hoodwinked by a mere conductor and so gave warning, but the latter was not to be bluffed.

"Where are your credentials?" The self-styled whiskey detective then pulled from his pocket a scrap of paper, with no printing on it or nothing of an official nature about it save the word "inspector" following the name of the signature. It proclaimed in few words to the world that so-and-so was a whiskey detective, and in the Province of Ontario, had the right, without a warrant, to search even the mind of any one he wished to. Still the stubborn conductor was not satisfied, and he made no bones about saying so. He forbade any further disturbance of passengers and told "Mr. Man" to leave the foreigners alone.

At Brockville, the conductor saw him leaving the train with the grip and coat which, supposedly belonged to the first passenger accosted, and who had long since made his getaway. "Where are you going with those?" said the "con."

"To the police station in Brockville."

"No you are not, they are not yours," he was informed.

The conductor now took charge of whiskey detective, coat, bag and all, and placed all three in the station agent's hands, called up the chief of police and an escort was sent up to the station for the travelling "tec." It is said he spent a little while in the jail, until word could be got from Ottawa as to his standing. And it turned out that he was sure enough a whiskey detective operating in the Province of Ontario.

APPEAL FOR GRENFELL MISSION

Extract from Letter.

"For two weeks we have been working night and day, that is, my secretary Mr. Finley, a Yale man, and myself, around a deep inlet known as White Bay. There we encountered so much real poverty, so much need of even the elements of life, viz., bread and clothes to cover, we came back inclined to wonder if life there anyhow had anything to offer. We saw men and women hungry, with both beriberi and scurvy, from want of food, empty cupboards, and naked children, while the fish, plentiful enough in the north, had partially failed on this part of the coast."

This is the cause to which you contribute when you make your offering to the Grenfell Mission. Leave your offering at the office of this paper and it will be forwarded to Mrs. James Wood, Treasurer, Monaghan Road. 3d46

Man Of Eighty-Six Had Lonely Time With Bride of Eighteen

But That Was the Honeymoon Experience-Now Aged Spouse Asks that Marriage Be Annulled—Says He Was Merely Companion.

NEW YORK.—Although James Harvey Hart, a retired Brooklyn jeweller, was eighty-six years old last May when he came back from a honeymoon in Atlantic City, with his bride of eighteen, who before the wedding was Miss Katie Wolf, a manicure girl in a Brooklyn barber shop, and a mighty pretty manicure girl at that, Mr. Hart neither looked his age nor felt it, he said. He was a robust-looking patriarch, and is credited with having remarked to one of the relatives of his bride:

"We've had a lovely time on our honeymoon, and I'm so happy that I don't understand how I've got along for so many years without a wife. I was a lonely widower, but now I'm living again."

Looked Like a Happy Union.

It looked at the time as though this was a December-May union that was going to prove the happy exception to the rule about such alliances, for the little bride was beaming, too, and clung to the arm of her white-haired husband.

But the romance is all off. Not only have they separated (it developed that Mrs. Hart, after a few months, left her young wife), but now the venerable bridegroom has brought a suit in the Supreme Court in Brooklyn to have the marriage annulled.

Twelve citizen jurors are to sit in judgment upon the engrossing question of whether or not the marriage really was a marriage. Old Mr. Hart says no; young Mrs. Hart responds with an emphatic yes.

The aged husband, through his attorney, contends in the legal documents now on file in the Brooklyn Supreme Court that the marriage should be declared null and void because of his advanced age at the time of the ceremony. He admits that the ceremony, performed at Borough Hall, on May 8, 1918, was proper and legal, so far as that went, but he insists that Mr. Hart was too old for marriage and that he was merely a companion to his young wife.

Insists She Really is a Wife.

Her answer to this allegation, is in direct contradiction to Mr. Hart's statement. She asserts that there is no reason for the nullification of the wedding bonds, for the marriage was indeed a marriage, the elderly jeweller was indeed a husband and she was indeed a wife.

She is prepared to take the witness stand and tell the whole story of the courtship, marriage, honeymoon and subsequent separation. And, of course, unless the case is settled before trial, Mr. Hart too will have to narrate his side of the case to the jury.

From the legal standpoint as well as from its human side the case will be interesting too, because it is the first instance on record in Brooklyn lawyers say, where a contesting party in an annulment suit seeks freedom while blaming himself for the alleged failure of the marriage.

It is not contended by young Mrs. Hart nor her attorney that she wants the marriage to be pronounced legal and binding because she wishes to go back to her ancient spouse. She does not wish any such thing. In fact, several months ago she quietly brought suit against him for separation on the ground of abandonment.

Wants to Protect Dower Rights.

What she wants to do is to protect her dower right in Mr. Hart's estate. He is worth about $360,000. At least, he holds real estate in the neighbourhood of Gates Avenue and Broadway which is taxed at $360,000, which would indicate a value of half a million. If the marriage was really a legal marriage she is entitled to one-third of this, even though she obtains a separation. But if her aged spouse succeeds in having the union annulled she has no claim upon the estate at all.

It was a barber shop romance which resulted in the marriage. The aged jeweller used to drop into a Broadway tonsorial parlour occasionally to have his cheeks scraped. After the pretty manicure appeared on the scene he became a daily customer. Then he began to have his nails dolled up with more frequency than the sportiest of the youths of the vicinity and after a few weeks of courtship across the scrubbing-and-polishing table he led Miss Wolf to the Borough Hall.

BULBS SHOOTING UP SIX WEEKS EARLIER

But Amateur Florists Must Be Careful to Guard Tender Plants From Frost.

Amateur gardeners and large green house owners are becoming alarmed over the phenomenal growth of their early spring bulbs. From various sections of the city reports have been sent into the effect that the daffodils, tulips, hyacinths and even peonies have made their appearance. In some gardens which have a southern exposure the bulbs have already attained a height of several inches. According to gardeners it is advisable for all gardeners to cover their bulbs with any good dry litter; leaves if they are to be had, and if not, straw may be used.

Bulbs promise to be very scarce in the fall, as Great Britain and France are now buying large quantities. While the war was on they did not bother about flowers, but the demand now is greater than ever. The Dutch have not been growing their usual acreage of bulbs.

Prospects for a fine fruit season are reported by the Niagara fruit growers. "This mild weather has been bringing the trees along in fine shape, and unless a very severe frost comes the growers are looking for an exceptional year."

For scraping dishes a small wooden knife is very handy.

CUT OUT OTTAWA DELAY.

Suggestion That Postmaster Be Given Power to Hire.

TORONTO, Feb. 27.—J. V. Conroy, district secretary of the G.W.V.A., has a practical suggestion to offer in connection with the employment of returned men in Government positions. He intends to take it up immediately with the authorities at Ottawa. The suggestion is that instead of returned men passing the ordinary civil service examinations and suffering from delay before they are given a job from Ottawa, that the local authorities, such as the Postmaster and other heads of departments where men are employed, be empowered to pick and to hire men for temporary positions in order that the labour situation may be relieved at once.

Good Friday Is Late This Year

There will be three eclipses, two of the sun and one of the moon, but this part of the world won't see much of them. Good Friday comes on April 18. Dominion Day falls on Tuesday and Christmas on Thursday. There will be five Sundays, in March, June August and November. February has 28 days. Spring is billed to arrive on March 21st at 11 a.m. Summer will get here at 7 in the morning of June 23rd, and King Winter begins putting on his show at 4 p.m. December 22 Signs of the Zodiac will be the same as in 1918.

SKUNK OIL USELESS.

Physicians Say It Is No Good Except for Making Soap.

There is an idea abroad that skunk oil is good for rheumatism, neuralgia, colds and other ailments. This superstition probably arose from the fact that the Indians and early settlers thought that the oil of any animal giving off such a disagreeable odor as the skunk must be good for something.

Skunk oil probably is in the same class as rattlesnake oil, which was thought to be useful because the bite of this snake is so poisonous. Indian medicine men appear to have made use of skunk as well as rattlesnake oil along with their incantations. The best trained physicians, however, attribute no medicinal value whatsoever to these oils. No legitimate use can be made of skunk oil unless for oiling harness or shoes, or for making soap. Nevertheless there is a small demand for it as medicine.

Let the picture above remind you that the real cake of Gold Soap is big. It is not only the best quality of laundry soap you can buy, but it is the largest cake offered for the money. Five cakes of Gold Soap are as large, and last as long as six cakes of the next largest size. Isn't that advantage worth the trouble of saying to your grocer, "I prefer Gold Soap"?

MUNICIPALITIES WILL NOT HAVE TO CONTRIBUTE TO HOUSING SCHEME

Premier Hearst Says Province Will Bear Administration Expenses of Plan--Over Eight Million Dollars For Ontario.

TORONTO, Feb. 27th. — When the Ontario House convened at three o'clock yesterday afternoon, Premier Hearst introduced a motion authorizing the introduction of the housing bill. He explained that the bill was designed to relieve conditions of overcrowding throughout the Province, and also to remedy the employment situation by providing work for many men.

Sir William went on to review the steps leading up to the housing legislation now submitted. Under the offer of the Dominion government $8,500,000 would be available to the Province of Ontario and this eliminated the need of municipalities contributing to the fund, as had previously been contemplated. Municipal councils were required however to appoint a commission of either three or five members to administer the money expended. The commission would be authorized to secure land at a cost not exceeding $500 a lot, and to erect houses at a cost not above $2,500 each. In certain cases the total cost of house and lot might rise to $3,500.

No Profit for Municipality.

The commission is authorized to either erect houses or to advance money to private citizens who desire to do so and who give satisfactory security. All houses erected by the commission must be sold at cost, there being no provision for profit on the part of the municipality. The plans and building schemes adopted by the commission must be approved by the municipality. Monthly payments may be made by the purchaser for a house.

An inexpensive method of getting land when so desired, is provided in the bill by means or arbitration. Loans will be available only to British subjects under the Act. Certain town councils have already passed bylaws in accordance with the Act, Sudbury being the first to do so.

Mr. Proudfoot inquired as to the cost of the administration of the scheme, asking whether it would be borne by the Province or by the municipalities.

The Province will bear the administration expenses, but not out of the fund, was the reply.

"Do private individuals as well as private housing companies come under the Act?" inquired Mr. J. G. Elliott, of Middlesex West.

Private Individuals Benefit.

Sir William replied in the affirmative, explaining that housing commissions might advance money to private citizens who gave satisfactory security.

The Act for the creation of a Department of Labour was introduced by Hon. F. G. Macdiarmid, seconded by Hon. W. D. McPherson.

Sir William Hearst, seconded by Hon. T. W. McCarry, next introduced an Act to amend the Bureau of Municipal Affairs Act. The Premier explained that this Act was being introduced in conjunction with the Housing Bill.

The House then passed to consideration of the speech from the throne and Z. A. Hall of South Waterloo took the floor.

Had Hacking Cough

Couldn't Sleep Nights

Hacking coughs are very wearing on the system. The constant coughing disturbs the rest, and keeps the lungs and bronchial tubes in an irritated and inflamed conditions.

Don't neglect the hacking cough. You can get rid of it with a few doses of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup; the most prompt, pleasant tated and inflamed condition.

Miss Catherine M. McLean, Craik, Sask., writes:—"Last winter I caught a heavy cold and was laid up for some time. I had such a hacking cough I couldn't sleep at night. I didn't think I would get over it. One day a friend dropped in to see me and was surprised to see how bad my cough was. She advised me to try Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. The next day I sent for a bottle, and I soon got relief, and by the time I had taken two bottles, my cough was all gone, and now I am able to do my work again. I don't think there is anything to equal it."

There are plenty of "pine" preparations on the market trying to live on the reputation of "Dr. Wood's." The genuine is put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark, price 25c and 50c a bottle. Put up only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

TRUE COURTESY.

True courtesy is "the beauty of the heart." How well it is that no class has a monopoly in this kind of beauty; that while favourable circumstances undoubtedly do render good manners more common among persons moving in higher rather than in lower sphere, there should nevertheless be no positive hindrance to the poorest classes having good manners. Here is an illustration of true politeness exhibited by both classes of society. One day, in hastily turning the corners of a crooked street in the city, a young lady ran with great force against a ragged little beggar boy, and almost knocked him down. Stopping as soon as she could, she turned around and said very kindly to the boy, "I beg your pardon, my little fellow. I am sorry that I ran against you."

The poor boy was astonished. He looked at her for a moment in surprise, and then taking off about three-quarters of a cap, he made a low bow and said, while a pleasant smile spread itself all over his face, "You can h've my parding miss, and welcome; and the next time you run again me, you can knock me clean down and I won't say a word." After the lady had passed on he turned to his companion and said, "I say, Jim, it's the first time I ever had anybody ask my parding, and it kind o' took me off my feet."

Meddlesome persons who are continually prying into other people's affairs and carrying tales between friends and acquaintances create a great deal of mischief and are best contented when they can spread scandal. It seems more natural for them to speak ill of a person than to utter words of praise, and their habit of gossiping become so fixed that they can talk scandals almost unconsciously. It is just as easy to say a good word for friends and acquaintances, even if not wholly deserved, as it is to speak ill of them, and the effect on the community is always beneficial in a general way. Scandal gathers as it travels by word of mouth and can never be recalled when once in circulation. Try speaking well of everyone and see what a change it will make in your own happiness as in the welfare of others.

We have seen little children while running at play, or perhaps on an errand for their parents, get a fall and bump a head or skin a finger, and when they would go to their parents for a kind word of comfort they would say: "Well, next time look where you are going and don't be so awkward; go long now and hush." That child will certainly find out sooner or later than its parents have on love or sympathy for it, and it will grow up without any kind feeling toward that parent. But on the other hand let the child come to the parents for advice, and if kind words are spoken the child will never forget it, and will always look with respect on that parent.

Mothers sometimes say when a child shows a vile temper and shrieks a good deal, that it would endanger his life to punish him; perhaps so, but you still more endanger his future of you don't punish him. Many a gallows tragedy had its beginning on the mother's lap. We wish we could write it in imperishable, glowing letters on the walls of every home — obedience, obedience, obedience. Obedience to law—to household law; to parental authority; unquestioning, instant, exact obedience. Obedience in the family, obedience in the school. Wherever, from the beginning, from the first glimmering intelligence in the child, there is expression of law, let there be taught respect for it and obedience to it. It is the royal road to virtue, to good citizenship, it is the only road.

The matron who appears before the members of the family in a shabby, soiled wrapper and makes the excuse, if indeed she takes the trouble to make one at all, that "it is so much more comfortable," has little idea of the possible consequences of such a course. Could she but realize that her dress is an evil example to her daughters, and productive of consequences that will reach far beyond her own span of life; that her husband and sons cannot fail to draw comparisons between her dress and that of the ladies they meet in other homes, and that these comparisons cannot fail to decrease their respect for her, she might be induced to give more attention to her personal appearance.

Society at the present day demands that girls shall be what they call accomplished; and to fulfill this demand the mothers of Christendom teach their daughters that a knowledge of all that belong to life's duties at home is not one of the requirements, that manual labour must be consonant with drawing room cultivation. And so their lily hands slip idly over the piano keys; they waltz in the most approved style; simper a little French or German, quote poetry—and society says they are accomplished. Doubtless they are, and by-and-by as all modern fashionables do, they win a husband.

A trade is a good thing to have; it is better than gold—brings a larger premium. But to make a premium, the trade must be perfect—no silver plated affair. Determine in your mind to be a good workman, or let the job out. Learning a trade is different from eating mush and milk—mechanical education does not slip down without chewing. Never slight your work, never. Every job you do is a sign. Poor signs are against success.

* * *

We know that music is pleasant and home is not home where there are no songs or sweet harmonies; but a knowledge of the piano will not help a woman discharge her wifely duties, and a smattering of French or an ability to waltz gracefully, will do but little towards preparing a palatable dinner for a husband when he comes home hungry.

Thousands Fight Fire After Blast

At Camp Mills

Returned Soldiers Join in Combating Blaze That Razes Garage With $400,000 Loss

Mineola, L. I., Feb. 25.—Illuminating the sky for ten miles and bringing engine companies from surrounding villages and towns, whose commanders believed that the new two million dollar hospitals at Camp Mills was afire, the garage at the post was completely destroyed and more than fifty motor trucks were destroyed.

The total loss was estimated at nearly $400,000, and although no one was injured for a time it appeared that the entire camp might be consumed by the spreading flames. Fortunately, however, a heavy downpour of rain quenched the flying sparks and the tents and barracks housing the several thousand homecoming troops were saved.

The fire started with a terrific explosion of a gasoline tank in the centre of the big frame building, which occurred at eight o'clock. Within a half hour the structure and the automobile trucks were demolished and all efforts to stop the conflagration within the building were without avail.

Hundreds of soldiers did yeoman work as volunteer firemen, and thirty trucks which had not been put into the garage for the night and which were parked outside, were driven to points of safety outside the ring of fire.

Following the first explosion, which threw burning gasoline about the building like actual flame throwers, the different automobiles caught fire. All attempts to remove them from the building were useless, for, as each one caught its tank would explode like a high bomb, scattering more liquid fire about igniting other cars.

Then followed another explosion more terrific than all others, when the huge storage tank outside of the building itself caught fire.

Flames shot skyward several hundred feet and the whole countryside was lighted up as if from a volcano.

Fire companies from Hempstead, Garden City, Westbury, Greenport, Mineola and Roslyn raced to the camp each fire captain believing that the big new hospital was burning. When they arrived they could do little more than the volunteer soldier-firemen were already doing, and all admitted that had it not been for the rain the whole camp might have been swept by the flames.

Patients in the hospital were quieted by nurses and orderlies.

The garage is under the supervision of the local Motor Transport, Company, and an investigation is being made to learn, if possible, when caused the first explosion.

Rescue work by Lieutenant McKnight, who directed the fire fighters, was praised by the men and the saving of the automobiles outside of the garage was largely due to his efforts.

The fire had burned out by nine o'clock and nothing but the charred remains of the frame building and the ruined frames and chasses of the automobiles trucks remained.

STOCKS STOLEN BY GERMANS RETURNED TO OWNERS

PARIS, Feb. 27.—Stocks and bonds taken by the Germans from branches of the Credit Lyonnais in St. Quentin, Douai and other towns occupied during the war, were returned to the owners who could identify them at an unusual meeting in the vaults of the bank in Paris.

The bank had notified the inhabitants of the various towns to appear at the bank to identify the securities which had been recovered from the Germans. The claimants sat around a table on which was stacked the securities taken from the branch of the Credit Lyonnais in their town.

The great bulk of the securities were identified and returned, but the owners of the remainder have not been found. The German agents who had been in charge of the securities, attended the meeting.

Glory seldom troubles a man while he lives, but after the funeral it comes around and keeps the flies off his memory.

Directoire Influence In Spring Costumes

Large Hats of Georgette and Small Ones of Straw

NEW YORK, Feb. 28.—Perhaps the type of dress to undergo the most radical change since the signing of the armistice is the evening gown. During the war the evening dress was practically forgotten, for the activities were few and of such a nature as not to necessitate the formal dress. Again the decollette is with us, and the colours are bright and gay. The turning from war's asperities to the smoother ways of peace undoubtedly is to be followed by an indulgence in dress and adornment.

Youthful and Smart.

The dance frock of the young girl may be as quaint as she pleases, and no comment will arise, for has she not forfeited enough of her precious time to the serious side of life? Now is the reaction, but it does not affect the afternoon and street dresses. They remain quite untouched by the influence of peace. Although the silhouette of the evening gown continues along its same lines, the materials are more gorgeous and the adornment is not so scant.

Dresses of Chintz.

Simple dresses of chintz have been popularized at the southern resorts and promise to be favourites for summer wear. This inexpensive material makes quite a charming frock for the warm weather. The colours are bright and the designs may just border on being grotesque. One of the leading shops had on display an attractive little frock made of chintz which had a cream-coloured background and huge black motifs, which, upon closer inspection, proved to be bird-cages. Out of these cages flew birds of delft blue, and the entire design was one of symmetry and grace. Needless to say that this frock would be the envy of many young girls.

Worn at the southland, too, are frocks of gingham. For the past season, that is the past summer season, gingham was the most favoured material for frocks for morning and afternoon wear. A gingham skirt, like the one shown with the middy blouse, would be very pretty for hot days. For spring, plaid woollen material would be smart and attractive.

Directoire Influence For Spring.

The coy charm of this interesting period is not to be overlooked, and many of the spring dresses and suits are modelled after this quaint style. Large hats of the directoire period are developed in Georgette, and the tiny straw ones are trimmed with ostrich.

Milliners predict that ostrich and ribbon will be the trimmings most extensively used on the spring hats. Ribbon is always smart and tailored-looking, and ostrich has all those necessary characteristics to warrant its place on the dressy hat.

GOOD DIGESTION

To be able to eat what you want and to digest it properly is a priceless blessing. Good digestion is not appreciated until you lose it. Then you cannot afford to experiment, for strong medicines are hard on weak stomachs. If you have indigestion do not be persuaded into believing you can cure yourself by the use of pre-digested foods or so called stomach tonics. There is no tonic for the stomach that is not a tonic for every part of the body. It is through the blood that the stomach gets its power to assimilate and digest food, and as the blood goes to every part of the body any improvement in its condition not only results in strengthening the stomach, but every organ in the body. Rich, red blood is absolutely necessary to good digestion. If your stomach is weak and you are troubled with sour risings in the throat, a feeling of pressure about the heart, or nausea after eating, try the tonic treatment with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. So many dyspeptics have been cured by this medicine that every sufferer from stomach trouble should try it. You will soon know the joy of good digestion and enjoy better health in other ways if you give this medicine a fair trial.

You can get Dr. Williams' Pink Pills through any dealer in medicine or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

ROYAL THEATRE

Entire Change To-Morrow

FOR THE NEXT THREE DAYS, commencing TO-DAY, the Royal has provided an extra special programme, consisting of Forty Reels of the finest pictures that can be produced. Included in the special features will be Charlie Chaplin, in his second million dollar picture "SHOULDER ARMS." This is a muddy story of trench life, cooties, camouflage, rookie training and Hunnish influence. This feature has been secured by the Management of the Royal at a great expense. It is in three parts.

Another feature to be shown to-day and To-morrow is a thousand foot film of THE FUNERAL OF THE LATE SIR WILFRID LAURIER, which was held in Ottawa on Saturday last.

No expense has been spared to make these three days the best in the history of the Royal Theatre from the standpoint of its patrons. There will be a show every afternoon and evening, starting to-day and lasting until Friday night.

A vitagraph "THE IRON TEST," in two parts is another feature. A blue ribbon feature, featuring Bessie Love in "The Enchanted Barn" in five parts will complete one of the cleanest and best shows ever presented in the Royal Theatre.

The above programme is equal to that shown in the largest theatres in Toronto, Montreal and other cities, for which an admission of 50c is charged.

For this special three-day schedule the following prices will prevail:—MATINEES in the Afternoon—Sixteen cents to all, this includes war tax EVENING Performance—Twenty-five cents, including war tax. On Monday next the Royal will resume its old price of Sixteen cents to all, both afternoon and evening. Patrons are asked to attend the Matinees for the next three days as much as possible and avoid the rush in the evening. You can save money by attending the afternoon show. For the benefit of the School Children we are retaining the Charlie Chaplin feature which will be shown at a Special SATURDAY MORNING SHOW, opening at NINE-THIRTY. ADMISSION 10c.

Ald. Taylor's Rink Won Final Game In Vice-Skips Bonspiel

Four Rinks Are Playing in Bobcaygeon To-day and District Cup Rinks Are in Toronto—"Making Hay While Sun Shines."

Broken up and delayed by mild weather and more important events in the curling calendar, the Vice-Skips' bonspiel wound up last night with a close game, in which Ald. W. H. Taylor defeated Grant Copping by 10-9. The rinks were as follows:

Geo. Hall	A. Blade
B. McNeeley	M. Duffus
A. C. Rau	R. G. Sturgeon
W. H. Taylor	G. Copping
Skip 10	Skip 9

Score by ends—
Taylor.....3100101000?1—10
Copping.....001103012100— 9

In the semi-finals several weeks ago, Taylor won from Felix Brownscombe by 16 to 9, and Copping defeated Chris. Graham by 8-5. The prizes will be presented at the annual meeting.

WIN E. G. PATTERSON CUP.

Skip Taylor's rink not only win the prizes presented by the club but also capture the E. G. Patterson trophy, which they will hold for one year. This silver cup was donated by Mr. Patterson for the annual bonspiel of the Vice-Skips.

In Bobcaygeon To-day.

Four rinks went to Bobcaygeon this morning and will play the return games for the Fitzgerald-Bottum Cup. The first half of this series was played on the eve of the Peterborough bonspiel, Albert Bottum's men winning by a margin of seven shots. J. E. A. Fitzgerald headed to-day's expedition, the other skips being Walter Oke, Tom Brightman and Andy Webb.

It was suggested that these rinks might remain in Lindsay to-morrow and play the first half of the Lindsay-Peterborough Cup games, but nothing definite had been decided on this proposal this morning.

District Cup Rinks Away.

The two district cup rinks are in Toronto to-day for the provincial games, getting away after many false starts. Their personnel is as follows:

Rose Dobbin, Alex. Archibald, W. D. Campbell and Ray Best, skip; and Herb Hair, J. H. Metheral, P. D. Fitzgerald and J. W. McDermid, skip.

These are both strong, dependable rinks, and should make a good showing in competition with the talent that are playing for the District Cup.

HIGH ROLLERS WON TWO GAMES

Last night at the Water street alleys in the Business Men's Ten-Pin League the High Rollers won two from the De Laval, losing the first game by 56 pins. For De Laval Carter was high man with 548, Fitzgerald close second with 542, Byers also topped the 500 mark. For the High Rollers Thompson and Solomon went over the 500 mark. The scores:

De Laval—
A. Fitzgerald	185	195	162	542
Byers	199	183	139	521

LINDSAY WILL ENTER A TEAM

District Baseball League is Being Formed.

LINDSAY, Feb. 27.—Mr. M. J. Dedman has received a letter from Peterboro asking that Lindsay enter a baseball team in a league composed of four teams, comprising Cobourg Peterboro, Lindsay and Port Hope. The League is to be run on strictly amateur lines and games are to be played in the evening or Saturday afternoons. Lindsay entered a team and word has been sent to Peterboro to that effect.

BOWLING NEWS

Anniversary of Leicester Hoax

Battlers Glad to Get $50.00 in Old Days.

On February 25, 1829, just ninety years ago, Jab Burke defeated Farmer Berridge in eleven rounds at Leicester, England. Jem Ward and Simon Byrne were matched to fight for the championship that day, but Ward backed out at the last minute, declaring he was sick, and the affair became known as the "Leicester Hoax." Thousands of fans from all over England had gathered to witness the fight, and, determined to see some sort of boxing exhibition, they raised a purse of $50.00 for any fighters who would volunteer. Evidently $50.00 was considered real money for a fight in those days, for Jem Burke, "the Deaf 'Un," promptly offered himself and Berridge, a Leicestershire farmer, offered to fight the London Irishman, then at the beginning of his career. Berridge looked like a skeleton when stripped, but he was a very lively corpse, and gave Burke a lot of trouble before he was finally conquered. Burke afterward fought Simon Byrne, whom Ward had refused to meet, for the championship, and inflicted such injuries on Byrne that the latter died.

WAGNER ENTERS POLITICS.

Flying Dutchman' to be Candidate for County Commissioner.

PITTSBURGH, Feb. 27. — Hans Wagner, the "grand old man" of baseball and hero of many a diamond battle, is about to enter politics. Through the persuasion of his friends it is said he has been induced to become a candidate for Commissioner of Allegheny County.

Wagner has not been endorsed by any political faction but says he will seek the support of his legion of friends first after which one of the parties, perhaps all of them, will see him as a candidate to be reckoned with. As he is known by sight or reputation to virtually every man, woman and child in Pittsburgh, his sponsors feel confident that he will be a factor in the campaign.

Woodstock Win In Sudbury 9-4

Clever Industrial City Sextette Qualify for O.H.A. Finals

SUDBURY, Ont., Feb. 27.—Woodstock last night won the first of home-and-home games from Sudbury in the O.H.A. junior semi-finals, 9 to 4. The visitors appeared to be the better team, but the score does not by any means indicate the play. Ironstone in goal for Sudbury, playing the fourth game of his career, and the sensation of the Barrie series, fell down badly, three goals sliding past him in the second period without leaving the ice.

The game was not productive of good hockey in the early stages, both teams shooting from well out. Sudbury scored first when Wright tucked the net, but Woodstock evened the count when King skated in alone and scored on the rebound from his shot. Woodstock cut loose in the second, outscoring the locals 6 to 2, using a two and three man short-passing attack, which had the local defence bewildered for a time. Sudbury got two goals in this period as a result of individual rushes.

Dentals Lose Last Chance

Hamilton Tigers Win Final of Play-off Games 5 to 3

HAMILTON, Feb. 27.—In another of those ding-dong battles that have characterized al of their many clashes, the Tigers last night eliminated the Dentals from the O.H.A. senior championship race by defeating them by 5 to 3. The Dents came here with a lead of one goal as the result of last Saturday's game in Toronto, and even their most sanguine supporters felt that they had their work cut out for them to maintain the advantage. As result there was very little speculation on to-night's contest.

There is no question about the Beagals being entitled to to-night's victory, they having the better of the play in practically every period, although there were times when it looked as though they had a mighty tough row to hoe in order to come out on top. Both teams were at full strength, and while the locals were playing with the desperation of despair, the Dents were hanging on with a grim determination. In fact, after about ten minutes of battling in the first period they increased their advantage when Hudson took a nice pass from Box and scored the first goal of the game, giving the visitors a lead of two goals. That looked to be about enough to win the round and the group honors.

Green Scores Tiger's First

It was not long, however, before the local fans were given occasion to cheer for Green evened the score by accepting a pass from Roach and carrying the puck right in past Stewart. Shortly before the period ended McCarthy accepted another of Roach's passes and shot another, which hit Stewart on the face and bounded past him ito the net, thus evening up the score on the round.

Dents regained their advantage in the second period when, after nineteen minutes of play, Watson, who had been put on as a substitute, beat Reaume with a wicked shot. It looked like the easiest goal of the night, and even Reaume was disgusted when he discovered that it had gone by him.

With the score two of all on the game and the Denuts one ahead on the round there was gloom in the Tiger camp at the end of the second period, and it became almost impenetrable when early in the third session Box went down the ice alone, and eluding the whole Tiger team, shot one past Reaume. But that proved to be the every thing needed to stir the Tigers into real action, and from that on they literally swept the Dents off their feet. First Roach and Green combined for one of the prettiest goals of the game, and shortly afterwards McCarthy shot one from the outside of the defense that found its way past Stewart and again evened the score on the round. Then, with only a couple of minutes to play and goals of th egame, and shortly after-in them, McCarthy made a beautiful corner shot that gave the Tigers the lead on the round.

AMERICAN NAVY IN EUROPEAN WATERS DEMOBILIZED NOW

Huge Wireless Station at Bordeaux Is Sold to France for $4,000,000.

BOSTON, Feb. 27.—Virtual demobilization of all the United States naval establishment in European waters; the sale of the great Lafayette wireless station at Bordeaux to the French government at a price of $4,000,000 and many hitherto unpublished facts of American naval activities in the war were announced here by Franklin D. Roosevelt, Assistant Secretary of the Navy, who arrived with President Wilson on board the George Washington.

For the last month Mr. Roosevelt has been in Europe demobilizing the naval forces, liquidating contracts and settling claims. Good progress was made in all the work, he said and the British and French governments have met the United States half way in the settlements of claims and disposal of material.

On the trip over Mr. Roosevelt disclosed to the officers and men of the George Washington how the United States had spent more than $30,000,000 laying the mine barrage against submarines in the North Sea, and how by the navy offensive which the United States brought into the war the submarines were driven away from the harbour mouths, out to sea, where their deadly work would be more difficult, and how the entery of the navy into the war began an effective campaign against the U-boats, which theretofore had been conducting the offensive.

"Few realize," said Mr. Roosevelt, "that the American navy had fifty-four shore bases of various kinds in European waters and the Azores, including destroyer stations and mine laying bases, although the majority were naval aviation bases from which more than two hundred American seaplanes operated. We had more than seventy thousand men at these bases and on the ships operating from them. We leased docks and buildings and in addition constructed hundreds of hangars, piers, hospitals storehouses and other buildings.

"Almost fifty thousand officers and men now have been sent home and all the flying officers and men now have been sent home and all the flying stations and bases have been evacuated. All material of future value has been sent home. Portable houses, provisions and motor trucks have been sold to the Red Cross, the army, and what remained of lumber and other salvage material has been sold to the British and French governments.

OBITUARY

SARAH PRESTON.

The death occurred in Midland on Tuesday, February 25th, 1919, of the late Sarah Preston, beloved wife of Mr. Robert D Preston, of that place. Deceased, who was aged fifty-four years, six months and twenty-three days, was born near Janetville and lived there for some time, later moving to Lindsay where she lived for over twenty years. The family later moved to Midland, where they yet reside. The late Mrs. Preston's maiden name was Sarah Morrow, she being a sister of the late Dr. Morrow, of Peterborough, who died over a year ago. Let to mourn the sad loss is the sorrowing husband, one daughter, Mrs. George Clark, of Hamilton and one son, Roy, at home.

Mrs. John Hutchison and Mrs. Jas. Marks, of this town, are relatives of deceased.

The funeral took place yesterday to Riverside cemetery on the arrival of the 10:57 G.T.R. train.

THOS. C. O'NEILL.

Mr. Thos. C. O'Neill, one of Percy Township's oldest residents, passed away at his family resident, Percy Township, at one o'clock Thursday, Feb. 20th, at the advanced age of about 75 years.

Mr. O'Neill was born in County Clare, Ireland, and was beloved by all who knew him. There are left to mourn the loss of a loving and kind father, seven children, namely, Mrs. Frank Collins of Thorold, Daniel of Rochester, Nellie of Toronto, Mrs. Dave Curtin of Kinmount, Thomas and Kate at home, and James of this city.

The funeral was held on Saturday, leaving the family residence at eight o'clock and proceeding to the Roman Catholic Church, Hastings, where requiem high mass was sung by the parish priest, Rev. Father Bretkerton, after which the remains were taken to the Roman Catholic cemetery at Hastings. The funeral was one of the largest seen in that part of Percy for some time. All the friends and acquaintances turned out in large numbers to pay their last respect to the deceased.

The pallbearers were: James Johnston, James Dunley, Edward Flemming, John Gorham, Frank McGuire and Robert Bibby.

MR. THOMAS A. COOLEY.

The funeral of the late Thomas A. Cooley, 498 Aylmer street, will take place on Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock to Little Lake cemetery, Rev. A. J. Thomas officiating.

Cabinet May Be Re-organized

(Canadian Press.)

TORONTO, Feb. 27.—In reference to an Ontario Conservative caucus here to-day, the Star, Liberal, says rumours are that the party may be seriously disrupted on prohibition and other questions and that the Cabinet may be re-organized, with a new leader and Premier, the name of Hon. Dr. Cody, the present Minister of Education, being the most prominent one mentioned in this connection.

Two Years For Edward Murphy

Accused Was Charged With Being a Defaulter

Two years less one day was the sentence imposed on Edward Murphy of Kirkfield this afternoon by Magistrate Dumble. Mr. G. N. Gordon conducted the defence and Mr. Fordyce Hickland acted for the Crown Attorney. Murphy was charged with being a defaulter.

The defence in view of the plea of the prisoner did not attempt to prove that Murphy was innocent, but brought up character witnesses. The Reeve of Murphy's township, Mr. John Alton, of Cardon township, Victoria County, stated that Murphy was his father's own help on a 160-acre farm and that he had never been in trouble before. He had always been steady and had always stayed at home.

It seems that Murphy had been granted exemption by the local tribunal but this had been rescinded.

"He was exempted until after the election," said the defence.

"You will have to see Mr. Burnham about that said the Magistrate.

NO HEAT, LIGHT, OR FOOD, SHE SAYS IN PLEA FOR DIVORCE

Mrs. Fannie Abramson, wife of Abraham Abramson, a Manhattan sweater manufacturer, brought an action for divorce in the Supreme Court, Brooklyn, charging that her husband allowed her no heat or light in their home and that he also kept the family larder under lock and key at all times.

She was forced to burn candles or go to bed early, she said, and also had to appeal to neighbours and relatives for sufficient food. She was married to Abramson, who has a $15,000 a year income, she told the Court last July. Abramson filed a counter action, charging that his wife was extravagant and that she "wanted to go around like a princess." Justice Crossey reserved decision.

INFLUENZA CLAIMS PETERBORO SOLDIER

Lieut. W. R. Patterson Died in Bramshott Military Hospital

The many friends of Lieut. Wm. R. Patterson, (Billie), will deeply regret to learn that he died in Bramshott Military Hospital, England, on the 4th instant from that dread acourge "The Flu".

Mr. Harry Goodwin, Hart Avenue, yesterday received a letter from his young wife, to whom he was married last October, containing the sad news.

He had not been suffering from any serious sickness, although not in the best of health for about two months; and had recently been to London to receive his commission, returning to Bramshott at the end of January.

On the 4th of February Mrs. Patterson was notified of his serious condition and arrived just in time to see him pass away.

He left Peterboro at the commencement of the war to join the "Princes Pats" and was a considerable time on active service. Lieut. Patterson was a member of the accounting department of the C. G. E. and was most popular with his fellow employees as well as in the city generally.

FARMERS' CLUB HELD A DANCE

The Peterboro Farmer's Club held their first annual dance last night in Victoria Hall. It was an immense success. The programme of 20 numbers consisted of square and round dancing, quadrilles, lancers, fox trot one and two steps, barn dances, Paul Jones, eight hand reels, grand marches, Sir Roger de Coverley. The last lasted well into the early hours of the morning. The music furnished by Tucker's Orchestra proved most satisfactory. The success of the dance is entirely due to the untiring efforts of the committee, Messrs. Howard Quinn, Robert Shaw and William Reid.

Messrs. Wm. Reid, H. A. Quinn, Robert Shaw and R. B. Rogers, the committee in charge of the entertainment, were warmly congratulated upon the success of their enterprise, and Mr. Frank Grady, the 8 or manager, lost no opportunity to keep things lively for the one hundred and twenty-five guests present. The patronesses were Mesdames Pearsons, Howard Quinn, George Rogers, Louis Winslow, Ida, Garvey, B. Cook, G. Wilson, Gordon Hall, J. Anderson and H. I. Fairweather. Dainty refreshments were served at midnight and the affair broke up at two o'clock with the singing of the National Anthem, accompanied by Tucker's special orchestra.

John Kendrick Bangs' Books Are In Demand

Enquiry at the Public Library shows that many of the citizens, who intend hearing Mr. Bangs lecture tomorrow night, have been interested in looking up his works at the Library, as the librarians report that there has been a good demand for them.

Following is a list of his books obtainable at the Library:

"The House-Boat on the Styx."
"The Pursuit of the House-Boat."
"The Enchanted Typewriter."
"From Pillar to Post."
"Mr. Bonaparte of Corsica."
"Paste Jewels."
"Peeps at People."
"Olympic Nights."
"Mr. Munchausen."

John Kendrick Bangs was born in 1862. In 1883 he graduated as a Bachelor of Philosophy from Columbia University, and then studied law. He was married to Mary Blakeney Gray of New York in 1904.

At various times in his life he has been associated with the following magazines:

"Harpers' Weekly."
"Metropolitan Magazine."
"Puck."
"Literary Notes."

Announcement

Mr. H. W. STOCK announces to his customers that the baking business heretofore carried on as WILLIAM STOCK & SONS, has been incorporated into a Joint Stock Company and MR. STOCK will be President of the Company, MR. JAMES DUTTON will continue his position as Superintendent, and MR. PERCY STOCK, who has been three years overseas, part of the time in the Royal Air Service, and who was wounded and discharged, will act as Assistant General Manager.

On account of the bread business of William Stock and Sons having increased to such large proportions it was found necessary to incorporate it into a Company, which will carry on the business with the same standard of service as given up to the present time. It is not the intention of the Company to carry on any other business except bread making, but to give every attention to increasing its output and the development of the business which has already had a most striking growth.

This Company is a purely Peterborough Company, and Wm. Stock and Sons have been known for the last quarter of a century as being at the front with up-to-date methods, sanitary appliances and large and well ventilated bakeries, in which the Company will continue to carry on bread manufacturing.

G. H. Robee Slain in Mystery Like The Philhower Crime

Victim of Mysterious Murder Was Also Friend of Wealthy Art Collector.

NEW YORK, Feb. 28.—The finding of the body of George H. Robee, fifty-nine years old, in a bedroom of the boarding house he conducted at No. 228 Madison avenue, directly across the street from the home of J. P. Morgan, disclosed another mysterious murder which the police believe may possibly be a sequal to the slaying of Winfield Scott Philower in his richly furnished apartment at No. 148 East Thirteenth street a little more than a month ago. The two murdered men are said to have ben friends and were of about the same age. Both had travelled widely and were art collectors both were fond of having friends, about them and giving parties in their homes and both were slain in circumstances which had much in common.

The fact that a detective working on the unsolved Philhower case declared recently that the police were working on the theory that the person who slew Mr. Philhower with a sword was a native of the Far East whose purpose was the avenging of a grudge of long standing may develop that a vendetta was at the bottom of both cases.

Mr. Robee who was last seen by persons in his rooming house at about eleven o'clock Monday night was killed some time later while soldiers and seamen from a debarkation hospital were being entertained with a dance in the house adjoining occupied by a Y.M.C.A. club of women workers.

The body was found shortly after seven o'clock yesterday morning by George McCain, a negro, of No. 248 West Twenty-fourth street, employed by Robee as a kitchen helper. All of Mr. Robee's eleven employees were negroes. It was part of McCain's duties to awaken his employer in the morning and serve him his breakfast in bed.

Was Choked To Death

Yesterday morning he received no reply when he knocked so he pushed the door open and found the body of Mr. Robee on the floor near the bed clad in pajamas. Above the left eye of the dead man was a deep gash. It was at first believed that death was caused by a blow on head but an autopsy performed last night resulted in the verdict that Mr. Robee had been strangled to death by the hands of his assailant and that the gash was caused by his hitting his head against the foot of the bed in falling. The skull was not injured but deep finger prints were found on the throat. The bed was in order and there was no apparent signs of a struggle, indicating that the assailant had surprised his victim, and accomplished his work quickly, seizing Mr. Robee by the throat before he could make an outcry.

Like Mr. Philhover, Mr. Robee was fond of collecting curious weapons and on the wall of his room, directly over the bed hung a murderous looking bolo knife and a curious cat o' nine tails with leather cords and a leather handle so skilfully inlaid with jet and mother of pearl as to be a work of art. But unlike the case of Mr. Philhowed, who was slain with a sword taken from his own collection, neither the knife nor the cat o' nine tails on Mr. Robee's wall was disturbed. Nor was the weapon with which the killing was done found in the room, which is richly furnished with paintings, curios and tapestries.

The negro who found the body immediately ran up stairs and notified Mrs. A. Kenton, a sister of the dead man, who lives on the floor above. He then called the police. A physician from the New York Hospital said Mr. Robee had been dead for several hours and stated it as his belief that the slaying must have taken place about midnight, or while the dance next door was in its noisiest state, just before closing.

Police Guard House

As soon as the police arrived on the scene they began taking extraordinary measures in handling the case. Guards were placed outside, detectives were set to patrolling the neighborhood, no one was permitted to enter or leave the house and the twenty or more roomers were given strict orders not to talk about the case.

Diamond Rings Missing

Captain Arthur Carey of the Homicide Bureau, and Second Deputy Police Commissioner Lahey, in charge of the Detective Department, arrived soon after the police were notified. Detectives from the West Thirtieth street station also were put on the case. Captain Carey and Commissioner Lahey both refused to discuss the case, beyond calling it an extraordinary mystery.

The fact that three diamond rings valued at $1,900, worn by Mrs. Robee have not been found, does not necessarily indicate that robbery was the motive, one detective said. The rings, it is thought, were taken merely as a ruse to mislead the police, as money and other valuables were not disturbed.

The room which was occupied by Mr. Robee, who was unmarried, is at the rear of the first floor above the kitchen. One lage window opening out toward the back yard would give easy access to any one desiring to enter. It is possible the police say, that the murderer taking advantage of the noise next door entered through the window. Mr. Robee, aroused by the entrance of the person may have gotten up to turn on the light and been struck down.

Mr. Robee had conducted the boarding house in the exclusive Murray Hill section for about six years. The opening of the place, which was formerly known as the Weatherbee mansion, was strongly opposed by many of the prominent New York families, whose residences are in the neighborhood, but Mr. Robee came through the storm with an exclusive clientele of well to do persons. The place was noted for its good meals and most of the young women of the Y.M.C.A. club next door ate there They described Mr. Robee as a short heavy set man of refined tastes and habits, who was fond of entertainments and parties to which the boarders and often soldiers and seamen were often invited.

Hint At Oriental Mystery

The point which may link the murder of Mr. Robee with the theory that the slayer of Mr. Philhower, and possibly also of Mr. Robee was a native of the Far East or some other distant country, is the fact that Mr. Robee had spent many years abroad travelling as a companion to a wealthy old man who was in poor health and sought improvement by going from country to country in the hope of finding a climate that would restore him.

Persons at the boarding house say that Mr. Robee often spoke of his extensive travels with the "wealthy old gentleman," but never mentioned his name, and it was the general impression that some of the art treasures and perhaps the capital which enabled Mr. Robee to start in the boarding house business may have been a heritage from the "wealthy old gentleman."

It will be recalled that Mr. Philhower, who himself had travelled extensively overseas, also received the major portion of his art collection, as well as about $25,000 in money as a bequest the source of which was never definitely established, although it was said he had inherited them from a sister.

These slender connecting links between the two tragedies, however, only serve to deepen the mystery. Captain Carey later returned to the scene of the murder, and at a late hour last night he was still closeted in the house with a large force of detectives. Mr. Robee is said to have been a native of Ohio, where a brother, who is a physician, lives. A nephew, whose name could not be learned, lives in the Madison avenue house. At a late hour last night, the police said no arrests had been made.

MRS. EMMA BRITT

Tells How Vinol Creates Strength for Tired, Nervous Housekeepers.

Texarkana, Texas.—"I keep house and I was weak, run-down and nervous, back ached a good deal of the time, so it was hard to take care of my chickens and do my work.—Vinol has restored my strength, and my nervousness has gone, so I can do my work as well as ever."—Mrs. Emma Britt.

There is no secret about Vinol.—It owes its success in such cases, to beef and cod liver peptones, iron and manganese peptonates and glycerophosphates, the potency and curative power being blended and strength creating tonics. We recommend Vinol.

THE WIFE

BY JANE PHILLIPS

Brian, Now Lieutenant Hackett, Is Decorated For Bravery

CHAPTER CXXXI

Ruth plunged into her work for soldiers' wives and babies with redoubled fervor. She worked at the shop until she was so tired that she slept as soon as she lay down. But each day she watched the list of casualties with growing apprehension; and each night she breathed a prayer of thankfulness that Brian's name was not among them.

The war had begun to affect Ruth deeply. It had affected all her standards, her ideas of life. The things that she and Brian might have disagreed upon a year ago, now seemed of no importance. The important things of life, the strenuous life of the days in which she was now living, smothered all the other things which, until the war—until Brian became a soldier—had seemed of paramount importance.

She used to think if only Brian would stop being negative—if he would do something big, something positive—that she would be willing to give up all her cherished plans to please him. But he had been so supine. The world was all around him, teeming with opportunities for action and he let it pass him by while he either loafed or dreamed—or sulked.

Ruth had wanted Brian to grow into something great, something noble. She had wanted to see him high in his profession, one of the "shining lights." At first she had been whimsically in earnest about it. Then disappointedly anxious that he should redeem himself—her belief in him.

Now she had almost forgotten her drama of advancement in his profession, in her fear that he would be too brave a soldier. That he would take the unnecessary risks his tempestuous nature might suggest. The fear she felt was greater than her disappointment had been. And she prayed continually that he might be spared. What if he wasn't great?

Then one day she saw it in the paper. It was all in a paragraph by itself, pridefully isolated from the ordinary news of the trenches. Brian's name fairly jumped out to her. At first her heart stood still with dread, and she saw only a jumble of words. Then the words began to fit together. Then she read and such a glow of pride filled her that she had to talk to someone. As Brian Jr. was the only one near, she addressed her remarks to him:

"They have given your daddy a decoration for bravery, baby! He went over the top all right, and baby, he stayed over, and brought somebody back, his captain or something, whom the awful Germans had wounded. Your father is a great hero now, baby. They have told all about him in the paper. He will be a lieutenant now. Aren't you proud, darling? Mother is."

"Whom were you talking to?" Mrs. Clayborne asked, as she came in.

Whom do you suppose! To Brian Hackett, Jr. I was telling him all about Lieutenant Hackett who happens to be his father."

"Lieutenant?"

"Yes—look at this!" and proudly Ruth showed her aunt the paragraph in the paper announcing that Brian had been decorated for bravery, and raised to the rank of First Lieutenant.

For the first time Mrs. Clayborne showed real interest in her niece's husband. She read the short article which told so little, yet so much, over twice, then laid it down.

"You feel very proud?" she said with a smile.

"Indeed I do. But I knew Brian would make good—as a soldier. He is very brave, and quick witted. Perhaps that was what helped him save the wounded officer—his quick action."

"I am very glad he has distinguished himself. The service cross is not lightly won." Mrs. Clayborne said, and then left Ruth once more alone with her baby and the paper.

"Auntie was pleased too!" she told Brian Jr. when again they were by themselves. "She looked pleased, baby, and she doesn't like your dad, —not much.

All that evening Ruth was so happily restless that she could not keep still. So finally she sat down and in a long letter to Brian told him how thankful she was he was safe, and of how inordinately proud she was that he had won the Distinguished Service Cross. "I told baby all about it and he is as anxious to see you and tell you how proud he is of you, as I am. Honest he is—even though he can't talk," she finished whimsically.

And while writing this letter not one thought of Mollie King disturbed Ruth.

Strange Habits of Insects

THE terrible travesty of mother-love develops in the life of the cabbage caterpillar, which becomes the white butterfly. When the butterfly lays her eggs the Microgaster, one of the Ichneumon Flies, deposits her minute eggs inside the butterfly's egg, so that when the hatched caterpillar appears, it bears inside itself the Microgaster's tiny grubs. These grubs, with their soft mouths, live on soup; and that soup is the caterpillar's vital juices. The terrible pseudo-children slowly drain their foster-mother's vitals. The weakening caterpillar goes about its business, preparing for its transfiguration into a butterfly, laying a silken carpet for the process, which carpet the young Microgasters will afterward use.

"The dying caterpillar continues to lay the silk of his carpet with slow oscillation of the head. The moment comes for the parasites to emerge. A breach is made on the ventral surface or else on the sides," points of least resistance. The whole grubs emerge, and are soon perched on the back of the caterpillar, who, perhaps not quite dead yet, goes on for another moment weaving the carpet for his slayers.

In the insect world, maternity's post of prominence must be shared with carnage. The fantastic devotion of mothers is matched by the murderous slaughter that never ends. The higher animals are crude innocents beside those small fiends; only man can vie with them.

A cry — you probably think it a cherry insect note— a Cicada has been gutted by a Green Grasshopper, who dips her head right into the entrails, rooting them out by small mouthfuls. She eats no more. An epicure is the grasshopper, with a weakness for the sweet vegetable juices which the Cicada has eaten and is digesting.

Let us not wrong the grasshopper. She is by preference a vegetarian, in her way. The Cicada is disemboweled for the vegetable matter he contains. We have a new idea of the essential benignity of vegetarianism.

The pretty firefly has honors other than as the poetic glimmering glowworm. He has a very mild and inhocent mouth and cannot masticate solids. His diet is snails. He gently caresses and tweaks the exposed part of the snail, drugging the unfortunate shell inhabitant. "By repeated tiny bites, similar to the tweaks we saw distributed at the outset, the flesh of the mollusc is converted into a gruel."

This liquid eating glowworm proceeds to drink. Afterward you will find the snail's shell perfectly empty. The entire animal has been chemically dissolved into a proper soup for the firefly's delicate digestion.

Let us take a final monstrous case of the most ghastly depravity mingled with sublime sacrifice.

The "burying beetle" buries small birds, mammals and reptiles, not as stored food for itself, but for the sustenance of its offspring. In the confines of a cage these undertakers will bury carcass after carcass, eating scarcely anything, depositing their eggs with the game. They display most edifying industry and order until the proper season is over. Then they strike work and take themselves underground.

And now a most frightful orgy begins. Despite the abundance of food both above ground and stored with the eggs which they will not touch, the undertakers begin mutually eating each other. One emerges to the surface with a leg missing, and otherwise in a most battered condition. Another appears a little better off. He has two legs left. This one throws himself on the first, tears him to pieces and eats him. Famine plays no part in the slaughter. It is time for them to die, perhaps, and not being able to die naturally, instinct drives the undertakers to tear and eat this fellow, heedless that he, himself, is being torn to pieces and eaten by another. And so the horror goes on, one eating the limbs of another, and that other eating still another, until the tragedy is over, until next year.

We seem to be in the face of a world of creatures gone mad, so different are they from our own type of life. What is the thing that actuates these lunatics? It is instinct. And what is instinct? Fabre answers grimly:

"Growing daily more sceptical of the interpretations suggested to me and more hesitating as to those which I myself may have to suggest, the more I observe and experiment the more clearly I see rising out of the black mists of possibility an enormous note of interrogation."—Prosper Buranelli in New York World.

Chocolate the Ready Luncheon

WHEN business prohibits your leaving the office at lunch time, yet you are hungry and tired—eat chocolate! for chocolate is a sustaining food.

All through the war the value of chocolate has been demonstrated.

The Allied soldiers found that when fatigued, eating chocolate renewed their energy, and thousands will testify how bars of chocolate used as emergency rations supplied them with strength to "carry on" in many a tight pinch.

Chocolate has proven its vitality-restoring qualities to every Canadian soldier. Profit by this war lesson. Apply it to civil life.

Eat chocolate as a luncheon—it satisfies—and will help you through the business hours.

Chocolate is a food product which the human system craves and demands. It fills a real need.

Keep a few bars of chocolate in your desk drawer. Eat them when you feel fatigued—they will help relieve the strain of your work.

"Chocolate is a most nourishing fat food and a delightful stimulant, especially valuable in cases of extreme fatigue or exposure."—Canada Lancet.

TRADE ARRANGEMENT WITH RUMANIA CLOSED

Will Purchase $25,000,000 Worth of Goods Under Credits Extended.

PARIS, Feb. 25.—Trade arrangements with Roumania, which have been under consideration for some weeks, have been completed, and the Roumanian Government will now be asked to purchase in Canada $25,000,000 of goods under credits extended. Of this one-fifth is to be expended for foodstuffs, one-fifth for raw material, and the remainder in manufactured articles.

The immediate urgent need of Roumania is for seed wheat, oats, barley and beans and special efforts will be made to secure shipping to carry the products to Roumania in time for the spring seeding. Other urgent needs are for woollens, railway equipment, agricultural implements and tools of all kinds. Live stock is also required. The purchaser will be the Roumanian Government.

Three of the trade arrangements have now been made, with Roumania, France and Belgium, and the Chief remaining difficulty in setting these trade currents flowing is the serious lack of shipping. Expected Canadian purchases by France and Belgium will be as diversified as in the case of Roumania.

Trade during the next few years with all European countries which have been at war will be more influenced by what credits are available than by any other consideration. American business is keenly alive to this fact. Mr. Frank A. Vanderlip of the National City Bank, New York, is here in the interest of a huge American banking scheme by which banking facilities and credits for the encouragement of United States trade are to be given through agencies to be opened in every large city on the Continent. Until the return to more normal conditions trade will follow credits.

KIDNEY DISEASE OVERCOME.

Mr. James Prouse, cattle dealer, Shaho, Sask., writes: "For about ten years I suffered from kidney disease; at times was bad with backache, and derangements of the directive organs. During that time I was treated by four different doctors. One day I read in Dr. Chase's Almanac about the Kidney-Liver Pills and began to use them. Altogether I used six boxes. All I need say is that I feel well now and attribute this condition to the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills."

Huns Say Ex-Crown Prince of Bavaria Heads Monarchist Plot.

PARIS, Feb. 25.— Former Crown Prince Rupprecht of Bavaria, who was commander of the Northern section on the Western front, in the final stages of the war, is reported to have been at the head of a monarchist plot that resulted in the assassination of Premier Eisner. The ex-crown prince is being sought by the police.

It is recalled that the last words of Rupprecht when he was leaving Belgium soil to escape into Holland were:

"I do not recognize the Bavarian Republic. I renounce and abdicate nothing."

How Liebknecht Fought Kaiser

ONE of the most picturesque figures in the life of modern Germany, now rising into power out of the turmoil following the debacle, says the Boston Herald, is that of Karl Liebknecht, the protagonist of a hundred fights in the Reichstag, the Prussian Landtag and the Berlin Municipal Council. If ever the pretense of representative Government in the Fatherland had its stormy petrel of debate, surely this was the man. Often in opposition to his own party, he made himself a thorn in the side of the Government, and through many a tempestuous scene, amid cries of "Scoundrel!" "Blackguard!" and "Out with him!" his notes being sometimes torn from his hand as he spoke, Liebknecht held on until his message was delivered. Times innumerable he was ruled out of order, received the ministerial snub or was mobbed by the hostile assembly; he could not be suppressed. He turned up for speeches in the Reichstag after the Government had railroaded him to the war front in soldier's uniform to be rid of him. A four years' jail sentence failed to cool his zeal as an accuser, and last October, amid a happy turn in the European kaleidoscope, Liebknecht emerged from prison to be drawn through Berlin in a flower-bedecked carriage amid applauding crowds, gathered to demand the abdication of the Kaiser and the formation of a republic.

Dr. Liebknecht was a Socialist, and never concealed the fact. He could wield the Marxian formulas to a nicety; he was never at a loss for sounding phrases when "the capitalistic classes" had to be denounced. But he committed himself early in life to a campaign against autocracy, and was the most formidable enemy of militarism in the Fatherland. His speeches since August, 1914, issued by the Macmillan Company in a timely book entitled "The Future Belongs to the People," easily establish that characterization of him and form an arraignment of Germany's pretexts and motives in the war such as might have come naturally from any of the Allied countries. His trip to Belgium, undertaken immediately after the opening of the conflict, satisfied him "that the Belgians had not been sold to Great Britain, that they had not organized bands of francstireurs, that they had not assassinated the German wounded, and that the German executions in Belgium were unjustifiable." The facts thus obtained Liebknecht immediately utilised. Speaking in December at the second war session of the Reichstag, where he voted against the war budget, he protested against the violation of the neutrality of Belgium and Luxemburg, declaring that the cry, "Against Csardom," had been invented for the occasion; that the war was "no war of defence," but "an imperialist war, a war of exploitation for capitalists and financiers; a war provoked by the German and Austrian war parties together in the obscurity of semi-feudalism and of secret diplomacy to gain advantage over their opponents." The Chancellor remarked in reply that Germany wanted "strength of quiet development," but that "her enemies chose war." "Lies!" came the deputy's retort; "it was you who chose war!"

More than half of Liebknecht's campaigning in the Reichstag consisted of questions and interpellations. He asked for the official and semi-official negotiations between Germany and Austria after the Serajevo assassination. The officials quibbled and refused. He wanted details of the "reprisal measures" inflicted by the Germans in occupied territory. No information was forthcoming. What about the atrocities of the submarine warfare and the horrors of the Armenian deportations? Into the teeth of the Government which dodged the demand Liebknecht threw its policy of "Might goes before right," and its declaration that "Necessity knows no law." Warning against the danger of a break with the United States, he protested against this shameless extermination of nations," and in his May Day address, which resulted in his arrest, declared that "by a lie the German workman was forced into the war, and by lies they expect him to go on with the war." Finally, in a letter sent out from his cell to the military court dealing with his case, Liebknecht formally indicted the German Government as "an instrument for the crushing of the working classes," "a servant of the interests of junkerism, capitalism and imperialism," and as "a reckless champion of expansion in world politics, the most ardent promoter in the competition of armaments and one of the most powerful influences in developing the causes of the present war." More outspoken deliverances by a man completely at the mercy of his Government were perhaps never ventured on. With such a man powerful in Berlin, Germany seems reasonably safe from a return to either autocracy or militarism. Is she equally secure against the anarchy and chaos which wild socialistic experiments have inflicted upon Russia? That seems to be the menace of the dauntless Liebknecht.

Widow of Former Secretary State Indorses Tanlac

Mrs. Oatrie Gains Twenty Pounds and Health is Restored

A great many people, especially ladies of culture and refinement, feel a great reluctance in publicly endorsing a proprietary medicine, although they have derived untold benefit from its use, as publicity is more or less distasteful to them.

To a great extent this is the case of Mrs. D. E. Patrie who lives at the Portland Hotel, Portland, Oregon. However, to use her words, "she feels that she would be ungrateful and delinquent in her duty if she did not tell others of the wonderful benefit she has received from Tanlac."

While Mrs. Patrie has lived in Portland a number of years, her former home was Idaho. Prior to his death, her husband was one of the most prominent men in Idaho, having been Sheriff of his county several years, and later being elected Clerk and Recorder of Bingham County. Afterwards he was elected Secretary of State, and at the same time served as chairman of the Central Committee of the State Republican party.

In speaking of her experience with Tanac, Mrs. Patrie recently said, "I weigh just fifteen pounds more now than I ever did in my life, and have actually gained twenty pounds since I began taking Tanlac. My health failed about a year ago. My appetite left me almost entirely, and I didn't relish what little I did eat, and I just felt tired and listless all the time. I was extremely nervous and never slept well, and would just lie in bed and long for daylight to come. I finally decided to take a trip back to Idaho thinking that a change might do me some good, but I didn't improve at all.

"In a very short time after I began taking Tanlac I could see that it was going to do me lots of good, and it is simply wonderful the way I improved. I have a splendid appetite now, and thoroughly enjoy my meals without any bad effects. My nerves seem to be in perfect condition and I am thankful to say that I get good, sound, refreshing sleep every night. It is wonderful how my weight and strength have increased, and I can truthfully say that I am as well and strong now as I ever was in my life. I never lose an opportunity to praise Tanlac, and when my friends remark about my wonderful improvement, it affords me great pleasure to tell them that Tanlac is entirely responsible for it."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. B. Warne Drug Co., Ltd., in Havelock by A. C. Denike, in Lakefield by Tanner Drug Co., Ltd., in Fowler's Corners by W. A. Hunter, in Gelert by A. J. Scott, in Westwood by G. Pringle & Son.

Biography of Guynemer

Written by Close Friend Describes the Modest Hero

SOME time ago we had the story of Capt. Richthofen, the German ace, who was killed in April, 1918. Now we have a biography of Georges Guynemer, who held the position of Ace of Aces among the French aviators, as Richthofen did among the Germans. Both books give personal accounts of the experiences of these two aviators while in active service, Guynemer's told by his intimate friend, Jacques Mortane, to whom he dictated most of the material used in the biography.

Guynemer is the most famous airman of the war, his fifty-three aerial victories being even more remarkable than the number might lead one to think. He made his record during a short space of time and against great odds, crippled in equipment and fighting an enemy prepared to an almost incredible extent. He was called "The Winged Sword of France," but we know that he was often flying with broken wings and bent sword and that the honor due him is as great as though he had accomplished five times as much as he did.

At twenty he was one of the world's great heroes, modest to the point of suffering and adored by all France. At twenty-two he was a captain, with honors too numerous to count, still modest, somewhat apart from things about him, intent only on the work before him. He was so great a figure that no one remembered to feel jealous of him.

"My place is at the front, always at the front," he declared on making his last departure. He had been brought down seven times without suffering seridus injury, and people had begun to feel that he led a charmed life. It is said that his death was so deeply felt in France that people were almost unable to speak of it. A meeting of the Chamber of Deputies and the Senate was held a month after his death at which a resolution was passed that a tablet to his memory be placed in the Pantheon.

Lieut. Weisemann, the German who brought Guynemer down for the eighth and last time, in writing to his parents, assured them as to his own safety:

"Have no fears about me. I have brought down Guynemer, and I can never again meet so dangerous an adversary."

He was brought down shortly after this by Fonck, who had become the French Ace of Aces.

Extracts from Guynemer's diary show him to have been very truly the soldier, simple and direct, jotting down deeds which will go through the records of history, in careless disregard of any personal glory. When he records a victory he is very likely to say something like this:

"Two cables of his cellule cut clean, pierced his propellers. Boche snappish but manageable." And again we are struck by his placing in parentheses. ("Became a captain, Ace with twenty victories.").

At one time it was announced that he was to carry the flag of the Aeronautical Division in the July 14 review. Mortane writes:

"But they knew him very poorly. He who blushed almost when any one looked at him, or when he was hailed as he passed, he who had a horror of ostentation and parade, was not the man to pass through the streets of Paris this way. He wanted to be unknown to the crown; he wanted to be like one of those heroes of the infantry whom we do not know."

No his name is graven on the walls of the Pantheon, his face familiar to the whole world, and the memory of his life and deeds among the most splendid of all times.

A Tactful Sergeant.

"Any of you got a very old uniform?" asked the sergeant.

A private, scenting a new one, proudly displayed his frayed edges and stains.

"It isn't fit for much, is it?" commented the sergeant. "Parade at 3.30 for coal fatigue."

Some men talk more religion in ten minutes than they practice in ten years.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

The Toothbrush.

The daily treatment of the teeth consists of washing and brushing. The toothbrush is a very important instrument, which should be sterilized both before and after using. As soon as the bristles wear or begin to drop out it is time for a new brush. You really need a new brush once a month. In selecting your toothbrush remember that it is not simply to rub or polish the enamel or remove the food from between the teeth, but it is also intended to stimulate the gums. Therefore it should not be too stiff.

BLAMES COMPANION FOR ARREST IN ROBBERY CASE

NEW YORK, Feb 24. — Dressed in expensive clothing of the latest cut, wearing a one thousand dollar fur overcoat, and with a two thousand dollar automobile standing at the curb, all of which the police accuse him of stealing, Charles Wohlsiffer, 22 years old ,was arrested in Newark, N. J., and later questioned by Newark detectives who are seeking the gentleman crook" wanted for more than 25 burglaries in that city.

Wohlsiffer, who gave his address as No. 214 Belmont avenue, Newark, blamed his arrest on his giving up his practice of "going it alone." With George Dumphy, 21 years old, of No. 37 East 64th street, he is charged with stealing an automobile from in front of the home of S. B. Dillingsworth of No. 80 Shanley avenue,Newark. Dumphy was arrested also, and information that he gave the police caused Wohlsiffer's capture. Wohlsiffer told the police that until he met Dumphy, he had always worked alone.

Wohliffer, according to the New Jersey record, was sentenced to 45 years in a New Jersey state prison for burglary but public sentiment caused the reduction of the term to thirteen years. He was paroled and served in the army. He was discharged last December. He is being held at the East 126th street station.

Look and Feel Clean, Sweet and Fresh Every Day

Drink a glass of real hot water before breakfast to wash out poisons.

Life is not merely to live, but to live well, eat well, digest well, work well, sleep well, look well. What a glorious condition to attain, and yet how very easy it is if one will only adopt the morning inside bath.

Folks who are accustomed to feel dull and heavy when they arise, splitting headache, stuffy from a cold, foul tongue, nasty breath, acid stomach, can, instead, feel as fresh as a daisy by opening the sluices of the system each morning and flushing out the whole of the internal poisonous stagnant matter.

Everyone, whether ailing, sick or well, should, each morning, before breakfast, drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour bile and poisonous toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach. The action of hot water and limestone phosphate on an empty stomach is wonderfully invigorating. It cleans out all the sour fermentations, gases, waste and acidity and gives one a splendid appetite for breakfast. While you are enjoying your breakfast the water and phosphate is quietly extracting a large volume of water from the blood and getting ready for a thorough flushing of all the inside organs.

The millions of people who are bothered with constipation, bilious spells, stomach trouble, rheumatism: others who have sallow skins, blood disorders and sickly complexions are urged to get a quarter pound of limestone phosphate from the drug store which will cost very little, but is sufficient to make anyone a pronounced crank on the subject of internal sanitation.

(March 2, 1919.)

The Report of the Spies. Numbers 13:1—14:38.

Golden Text: This is the victory that hath overcome the world, even our faith. 1 John 5:4.

1. Verse 1-3. Seeing God had promised the land of Canaan to Israel, was it wise or otherwise, and why, to send spies to "search the land"?

2. The Lord commanded Moses to send the spies, but was it God's best plan? Why? (See Deut. 1:21, 23.)

3. When God makes a promise, is it ever wise for us to seek proof? Why?

4. Verses 4-16. How many spies were there, and whom did they represent?

5. Verses 17-19. Which is better and why, to get a specific statement from God that a thing is so or to find out for ourselves whether it is so or not?

6. What had God previously said concerning the fertility of Canaan?

7. Would you say, and why, that Moses wanted this information for himself, or for some other reason?

8. Verse 20. Why would these spies be in need of "good courage," in their work of spying out the land?

9. What part does courage play in making a success of anything we undertake?

10. Why is there any need for a Christian in any circumstance to be discouraged?

11. Verses 21-25. They cut down a bunch of grapes at Eschol so large that it had to be carried upon a pole between two of them. What did that indicate as to the richness of the land?

12. What spiritual suggestion is there for us, in these large and luscious grapes at Eschol? (This is one of the questions which may be answered in writing by the members of the club.)

13. Verses 26-33. How do you account for it that ten of the twelve spies, in spite of God's promises and the admitted richness of the land, voted that they were not able to conquer it?

14. Chapter 14:1-5. How is it that half-hearted professors of religion are generally croakers and blame the faithful for their imaginary troubles?

15. Verses 6-10. When the church refuses to enter into the rich heritage of faith offered to her, what should the faithful leaders do?

16. Verses 11-19. How do you harmonize with the truth, the fact that these verses make Moses more reasonable and merciful than God?

17. Verses 20-25. What effect in these days, does the prayer of the righteous have upon the welfare of the wicked?

18. Verses 26-37. How do we know or what is the proof that no man or people can escape the earthly consequences of their sins?

19. Verse 38. What was the reward of faithful Joshua and Caleb, and what is the reward of every man, who remains true to God, when the majority are against him?

Quinine That Does Not Affect Head

Because of its tonic and laxative effect, LAXATIVE BROMO QUININE (Tablets) can be taken by anyone without causing nervousness or ringing in the head. There is only one "Bromo Quinine." E. W. GROVE'S

Referred to Femininity.

Tommy—Pop, what is a reversal of form?

Pop—You'd better ask your mother. She knows more about the fashions than I do.—Philadelphia Press.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Snoring.

Snoring during sleep is generally an evidence of some obstruction in the nasal passages. Possibly the person is suffering from adenoids or thickening of the nasal mucous membranes, and, if so, he should consult his family physician. If it is a mere habit and there is no sign of obstruction of any kind, then bandaging of the mouth will sometimes bring about a cure. Apply the bandage sufficiently snug to prevent the air from getting into the mouth. Bandage the same as you would for a broken jaw, taking pains to close the mouth.

JULIA WARD HOWE'S SALON

As Hostess It Was Said of Her With Truth That She Delighted in Contrasts.

When I think of it I believe that I had a salon once upon a time. I did not call it so, nor even think of it as such; yet within it were gathered people who represented many and various aspects of life. They were genuine people, not lay figures distinguished by names and clothes. The earnest humanitarian interests of my husband brought to our home a number of persons interested in reform, education and progress. It was my part to mix in with the graver element as much of social grace and geniality as I was able to gather about me. I was never afraid to bring together persons who rarely met elsewhere than at my house, confronting Theodore Parker with some archpriest of the old orthodoxy, or William Lloyd Garrison with a decade, perhaps, of Beacon street dames. A friend said, on one of these occasions: "Our hostess delights in contrasts." I confess that I did; but I think that my greatest pleasure was in the lessons of human compatibility which I learned in this wise. I started, indeed, with the conviction that thought and character are the foremost values in society, and was not afraid or ashamed to offer these to my guests, with or without the stamp of fashion and position.—Julia Ward Howe.

Not Slaves to Precedent.

Were one to analyze the careers of 200 or 300 of our leading men of finance and industry it would probably develop that not half of them continued in the line of business in which they started, but struck boldly out in the direction where they saw the biggest opportunities and where their inclination lay.

One of the earliest and most notable instances of this was Commodore Vanderbilt, who was so old before he turned to railroading that his family and his advisers importuned him to let well enough alone and not to enter an entirely new field at his time of life.

This readiness of brainy giants to take up new things and to throw their whole selves into them is really one of the principal reasons why the United States has led the world in so many lines of endeavor. Wealthy Europeans, as a rule, avoid the new, avoid untried paths; they are inclined to worship precedent.

In the Cradle of the Deep.

A few men were put into the barracks of an older company at Great Lakes. One of these boys snored so loudly that the next day the boys planned to get even. That night when his snoring commenced one boy got at each end of the hammock and began to raise and lower it. The boy, waking up much d. A. screamed: "Oh, ma, I wish I'd taken your advice and gone into the army. I didn't know I'd get so seasick!"

Hindustani.

The most widely spoken language in India is Hindustani, rather more than eighty-two million persons using it.

GIRLS! LOTS OF BEAUTIFUL HAIR

A small bottle of "Danderine" makes hair thick, glossy and wavy.

Removes all dandruff, stops itching scalp and falling hair.

To be possessed of a head of heavy, beautiful hair; soft, lustrous, fluffy, wavy and free from dandruff is merely a matter of using a little Danderine.

It is easy and inexpensive to have nice, soft hair and lots of it. Just get a small bottle of Knowlton's Danderine now—it costs but a few cents—all drug stores recommend it—apply a little as directed and within ten minutes there will be an appearance of abundance, freshness, fluffiness and an incomparable gloss and lustre, and try as you will you can not find a trace of dandruff or falling hair; but your real surprise will be after two weeks' use, when you will see new hair—fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair—sprouting out all over your scalp—Danderine is, we believe, the only sure hair grower, destroyer of dandruff and cure for itchy scalp, and it never fails to stop falling hair at once.

If you want to prove how pretty and soft your hair really is, moisten a cloth with a little Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair—taking one small stand at a time. Your hair will be soft, glossy and beautiful in just a few moments—a delightful surprise awaits everyone who tries it

"THE LIGHT IS IN THE WINDOW, THE LATCH STRING IS OUT."

OTTAWA, Feb. 27.—In the course of his speech in the House of Commons, D. D. McKenzie, the new Liberal leader, said for the benefit of Liberal Unionists: "The light is in the window for you; the leach string is out, and you are always welcome."

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Cynthia White —Pest

By VINCENT G. PERRY

(Copyright, 1918, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

With a quick jerk Horace Sangster pulled his line from the water, and then cried out with disgust. The fish, if there had been one, had got away. Three hours without a catch—it was enough to annoy a man with normal nerves, and Horace was far from that. He drew in his line angrily and attempted to wind it up, but something had gone wrong with his reel. That was the last straw. He sat down on a rock and swore.

The sound of the word startled him. He had not sworn for years. His nerves were certainly making a wreck of him. The solitude of the place was aggravating him, too. They had told him the simple camp life, with lots of fishing, would make a new man of him. Such bosh! Why, there was hardly a thing about it that did not make him feel worse.

This was the second day, and he was going to make it his last. To begin with, he had had trouble pitching his tent. The storm in the night had kept him up keeping out the rain. Every crack of the bushes or sound of the birds in the trees caused him to start uneasily. It was nearly as nerve-racking as an afternoon session with the fourth-year class. The thought of the fourth-year girls irritated him the more. They had been the cause of his breakdown, he felt confident. For months he had looked with dread on the hour each afternoon that he was forced to teach them mathematics. They were just silly, thoughtless girls, and would not have been so hard to put up with had it not been for their ring leader, Cynthia White.

Without exaggeration Cynthia was the worst girl he had ever had under his tuition. Her main object in life seemed to be to torment the professor of mathematics. Something always turned up for her to argue about or laugh over. There was always something for her to ridicule, and she never missed an opportunity to make him feel mean—perhaps because she was so large and he was so small.

As he sat there thinking it over, Horace made up his mind he had been foolish. It would have been easy to have arranged for her dismissal from the college. Why hadn't he done it? There was something he liked about Cynthia, in spite of everything. The spirit of fun behind those twinkling black eyes of hers appealed to him, and the warmth of her laugh made him long for something—something that was not in his life.

Suddenly the laugh sounded close beside him. He nearly toppled into the water from the shock it gave him. He turned quickly to confront Cynthia, a little way off, her eyes bulging over with merriment. After rubbing his eyes to make sure he was seeing

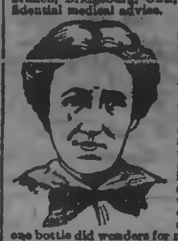
HELPING THE WOUNDED

Our Canadian nurses are needed "over there" now as never before. This is the time to learn how to take care of the wounded, the sick—or any emergency. You can learn a great deal by obtaining the "Medical Adviser" from your nearest druggist, a book of 1,000 pages, bound in cloth, containing chapters on First Aid, Bandaging, Anatomy, Hygiene, Marriage, Mother and Babe; or send 50c to Dr. Pierce, Courtwright St., Bridgeburg, Ont.

Thousands of women in Canada have overcome their sufferings, and have been cured by Nature's own remedy, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. Pains in the back, headache, dizziness, nervousness, irregular periods, bearing-down feelings, and other symptoms of female weakness, should take this "Prescription" at once. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets regulate the liver, stomach and bowels. Send 10c. for trial package to Dr. Pierce's Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y., or write for free confidential medical advice.



Toronto, Ont.—"As a busy housewife I can highly recommend Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription to tired and run-down women. I am the mother of eight children and have frequently found need of such a tonic but did not know what to take until my sister gave me some of the 'Favorite Prescription' which she herself had found to be good. It was exactly the tonic my system required and one bottle did wonders for me, so I take pleasure in telling others, hoping that they will give the 'Prescription' a trial and be benefited just as I have been."—Mrs. Elizabeth Taylor, 254 Ontario St.

CURED OF DYSPEPSIA

BY USING

BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS

The symptoms of dyspepsia are so numerous and diversified in different individuals that probably no description could exactly represent them as they occur in any given case, but a few of the most prominent are a rising and souring of food, pain, flatulence and distention of the abdomen, a sensation of discomfort after every meal, which is sometimes followed by sickness and vomiting.

To get rid of dyspepsia a careful arrangement of the diet is necessary and due time must be given for the digestion of the meal.

You will find that Burdock Blood Bitters will help with this digestion. It does this by toning up the stomach in such a way that the dyspepsia soon disappears.

Mr. Robt. Baldwin, Winnifred, Alta., writes:—"I cannot speak too highly of Burdock Blood Bitters for curing dyspepsia, of which I have been a sufferer for years. I have tried a good many doctors and proprietary medicines, so one day I thought I would try something different. I got a bottle of B. B. B. from our local store, as it was about the only remedy he kept, and I can certainly say that I was more than pleased with the results, as I got better right away. I will always recommend it to other sufferers."

Manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Cynthia's hysteria vanished when she discovered he was alive. She was very angry at first when he confessed he had not been hurt at all and was conscious all the time, but her sense of humor came to the rescue and she joined in his laugh.

"Please call me dearest Horace again," he said as he reached out for her hand. But Cynthia would not until he had told her how much he loved her and how miserable he would be without her.

"Dear old pest," he said just before the kiss that sealed their engagement

Here Is A Most Excellent
Marmalade

SLICE two grapefruit and six sweet oranges into small shreds. To each cup of the cut fruit add three cups of cold water. Allow it to stand for 24 hours in a bowl or crock. Turn into a kettle and bring gently to a boil. Set aside for another 24 hours; then measure six cups of pulp into a preserving kettle and simmer gently for an hour. Add six cups of LANTIC "fine" granulated sugar heated in the oven and remove from the fire as soon as the Marmalade jellies. Repeat the cooking till all the pulp has been used.

LANTIC "Fine" granulated is the ideal sugar for Marmalade, as the fine granulation dissolves at once, avoiding long cooking. Too much cooking after the sugar is added, darkens Marmalade and makes it stringy.

Have you a copy of our "Lantic Library" containing three useful booklets on Preserves, Desserts, Cakes and Candies? We will send it to you without charge on receipt of a 2c. stamp to pay postage.

YEARLY PAYMENT OF $3,000,000,000

LONDON, Feb. 27.—Herbert Gibbs, a well known banker, in an address here declared that, having made a special study of the subject he was able to say that the savings of Germany were very great. Germany could easily pay £600,000,000 yearly, the burden of which, he asserted, would fall not on the wage earners of Germany, but on the people who had made the war. He believed that an allied commission should sit at Berlin to receive the money in marks at the gold rate of exchange.

AUSTRALIA MOVES TO KEEP THE BOLSHEVIKI OUT

MELBOURNE, Australia, Feb. 27—The Federal Government has taken measures to prevent the landing of Bolsheviki and other undesirables. The Government has dismissed 500 shipbuilding employees on Cockatoo Island, owing to the men's "go slow" policy.

Mother! Look at his Tongue!
Give Him a Cascaret—Quick!

Won't eat? Don't scold! See if tongue is white, breath feverish, stomach sour.

TO MOTHERS! Nothing else "works" the nasty bile, the sour fermentations and constipation poison so gently but so thoroughly from the little stomach, liver and bowels like harmless Cascarets. While children usually fight against laxatives and cathartics, they gladly eat a candy Cascaret. Cascarets never gripe the bowels, never sicken. Each ten cent box of Cascarets contains directions for dose for children aged one year old and upwards.

GRAIN MARKET

Cash corn was practically steady, February closing the same as Wednesday. In the options there was some short covering which sent the market up early in the day, but more than lost the gains later on, and closing 1-2c. lower than Wednesday's close. Oats are generally easier, both cash and the options. The May market is easier, baled hay quoting $1 per ton lower.

SHOT HIM WITH BIRD SHOT.

PORTERVILLE—Frank Salca, a rancher of the Ducor section south of here, and his brother, Edward, ran down a mountain lion with an automobile and then killed the beast with a charge of bird shot.

The brothers were out shooting when they sighted the animal, which had wandered several miles from the foothills. In the grain country, where there are no fences, their automobile was started in pursuit over the open prairie, and within a short time the lion was brought within gunshot range.

The pelt, with the county bounty, will be worth about $60.

HAD WEAK and FAINTING SPELLS

Those feelings of faintness, those weak, "all gone" sinking sensations, which come over most people from time to time, are warnings that must not go unheeded.

They mean an extremely weakened condition of the heart and a disordered nervous system.

When the system is in this condition there is no time for delay. One fainting spell may be recovered from—will the next? One dizzy spell may pass off, but the next may be more serious.

Those who are wise will start taking Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, before their case becomes deep rooted and perhaps hopeless.

They will act directly on the disordered heart and weakened nervous system and restore them to full strength and vigor.

Miss Mary McCoy, Algoma Mills, Ont., writes:—"I was awfully troubled with fainting and weak spells, and I could never get any doctor's medicines to help me. One day a friend of mine was at the house when I took one of those spells, and she got me a box of Milburn's Heart and nerve Pills. That was six years ago, and from that day to this I have never had any of those spells. I would not be without your pills for any money and can highly recommend them to any one."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c a box at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto Ont

SAYS HIGH FRENCH OFFICERS KILLED BY GERMANS AT POSEN

LONDON, Feb. 27.—A Berne despatch to the Morning Post, says that Polish newspapers report the discovery by Polish authorities at Posen of the bodies of nineteen French army officers, of superior rank, in the fortress there. The report says the victims were massacred by the Germans. A French Commission is on the way to make enquiries.

Announcement

Mr. H. W. STOCK announces to his customers that the baking business heretofore carried on as WILLIAM STOCK & SONS, has been incorporated into a Joint Stock Company and MR. STOCK will be President of the Company, MR. JAMES DUTTON will continue his position as Superintendent, and MR. PERCY STOCK, who has been three years overseas, part of the time in the Royal Air Service, and who was wounded and discharged, will act as Assistant General Manager.

On account of the bread business of William Stock and Sons having increased to such large proportions it was found necessary to incorporate it into a Company, which will carry on the business with the same standard of service as given up to the present time. It is not the intention of the Company to carry on any other business except bread making, but to give every attention to increasing its output and the development of the business which has already had a most striking growth.

This Company is a purely Peterborough Company, and Wm. Stock and Sons have been known for the last quarter of a century as being at the front with up-to-date methods, sanitary appliances and large and well ventilated bakeries, in which the Company will continue to carry on bread manufacturing.

United States Senator Warns The American People To Carefully Weigh Their Opinion

Insists Upon a Fundamental Revision of the Present Covenant—"Germany is Lifting Her Head Again"

PLAINER LANGUAGE

Canadian Press:

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28.—Senator Lodge of Massachusetts warned American people to-day to carefully weigh consideration of the League of Nations as presented to the Peace Conference at Paris and to insist upon its fundamental revision. Speaking in the Senate, the Republican floor leader declared his conviction that instead of safeguarding the peace of the world, the League, as now planned, would engender misunderstandings and strife. Deducing his first public utterance on the subject since the constitution became public, the Massachusetts Senator vigorously opposed the plan and made specific recommendation for an amendment. He declared that, as now drafted, the constitution would contravene the Monroe Doctrine, strike at American sovereignty, involve America in all foreign disputes, substitute internationalism for nationalism, and be of benefit principally to Europe. Senator Lodge, who is expected to be chairman of the powerful Foreign Relations Committee in the next Senate, which will act on the peace treaty and any plan for the League of Nations, was given close attention by the Senators and the crowded galleries.

ARMED FORCES.

The Senator said that while in the interests of peace it might be necessary to abandon the Monroe Doctrine, the policies of Washington and other principles of Americanism, the nation should reflect and hesitate before it acts.

"Germany is lifting its head again," he said.

"Let us have a definite statement as to whether the League is to have an international force of its own or is to have power to summon armed forces of different members."

"Let it be stated in plain language whether suggestions, recommendations, or suggestions of the executive councils are to be binding on members and are to compel them to do what the League delegates and Executive Council determine."

"Unless some better legislation for a league than this can be drawn, it seems to me," he said, "that if the League is desired it might be made up by European nations, whose interests are chiefly concerned, and with the United States, could co-operate fully and at any time, whenever co-operation is needed."

WARM PRAISE AND SALARY INCREASE FOR SANITARY INSPECTOR

"We have never had a man give us as good satisfaction," said Mayor Duncan last night when the Finance Committee recommended that Sanitary Inspector Stapleton's salary be increased to $1,200, including the allowance for his expenses. "When he was appointed I voted against him," continued His Worship, "but it was because I didn't think he would stay with the job. I didn't think he would like it."

"He is a very good official," was Ald. Turner's comment, endorsed by the whole committee.

Mr. Stapleton has been paid $960 and $100 to cover his livery expenses, occasioned by his visits to the dairies that supply the city's milk. He recently asked for an unstated increase, and Ald. Phelan moved, seconded by Ald. Hamilton, that his salary be raised to $1,200.

Other Grants.

Dr. G. S. Cameron wrote requesting for a grant to the Health Association. On motion of Ald. Hamilton, seconded by Ald. Morrison, $1,000, the same as last year, was set in the estimates for this charitable cause.

Mr. Joseph Wearing's letter on behalf of the Children's Aid Society, asking for $600, the same amount as last year, was acceded to on a motion by Ald. Edgar, seconded by Ald. Turner.

The Peterborough Poultry Association received $75 last year, and they sought an increase. Ald. Turner moved, seconded by Ald. Hamilton, that the association be given $100.

WILL PROSECUTE GUILTY PARTIES

BUDAPEST, Feb. 28. — The Hungarian government planned to-day to start criminal prosecution of the officials responsible for the war. The first to be tried, it is said, will be former Chancellor Berehtold and Count Forgach. Berehtold is understood to be living in isolation at Lake Thun, Switzerland.

Government Is Isolated

German Cabinet Will Adopt Energetic Measures to Suppress the Revolution

(United Press Service.)

ZURICH, Feb. 28.—The German cabinet following a three-hour session, decided to take the most energetic measures to suppress the revolution, according to despatches from Berlin to-day. It was also reported that an ultimatum was sent to the "illegal Soviet government" at Munich.

The situation in Central Germany was said to be growing worse, a state of siege has been proclaimed at Aischaffenburg. The physicians in Leipzig were reported to have gone on strike. Government officials in Bochumherne, Gelsenkirch and Dorimund have formed an "army of general security" numbering sixteen thousand, to oppose the Spartacans.

Breaking Up.

There were some reports, however, that the strike in the Nuhr district is disintegrating and that only fifteen thousand workmen are remaining idle. Unconfirmed reports were received that Spartacans in Berlin staged demonstrations in the Wilheimstrass before the Reichbank and at other points Tuesday evening in which shots were exchanged. Several telephone lines were said to have been cut down.

The Soviet Congress in Munich is understood to have decided to create a provisional central council, which will be instructed to form a ministry. The Landtag will be converted later.

The German government was practically isolated in Weimar to-day The only method of communication was by airplane.

"The Pierrot Players"

Here Next Week — Augumented Ladies' Orchestra

Every standard high class entertainment has its bright spots when every line spoken, every situation created causes chuckles of laughter on all sides, and unfortunately for the muse it has its weak spots. But think of a performance that contains the cream of twenty distinct musical productions woven together by bright dialogue, melodious song, and sprightly dance. This is the unusual performance of the Famous English Pierrot Plays at the Grand Opera House next Wednesday, March 5, with popular price matinee at 2.30, a positive novelty in stage attraction that delights the theatregoer who has so often been disappointed. In New York the Washington Square players are creating a niche in the dramatic hall and their big brother, the Pierrot Players, are doing the same things in the musical sphere. Each number in this performance is a gem, a charming combination of fun that is really funny, and singing that is really singing. The cast, headed by Eugene Lockhart, late of the Reviera Girl Co., are augmented by a special ladies' orchestra.

Quackenbush Case Was Dismissed

Evidence Was Not Strong Enough to Secure a Conviction.

In Lakefield this morning County Police Magistrate O. A. Langley dismissed without costs the case against Lou Quackenbush, to whose name two cases of pure alcohol were shipped to the Lakefield platform on the 12th of the month. The alcohol was seized by Mr. Joseph Stewart, license inspector, on the platform, and Quackenbush was sent for from a considerable distance to appear. This morning he swore that he knew nothing whatever of the two cases.

"Do you swear that you ever boasted to friends that you could get all the liquor you wanted in Lakefield?" asked Mr. Stewart. Quackenbush on his oath could not deny this. The evidence was not found sufficient to make a conviction. The alcohol which is worth about $150 was shipped this afternoon by Mr. Stewart to the Board of License Commissioners.

RAILWAY OWNERSHIP

United States Will Continue to Administer the Railway Policy of the States

A STATEMENT

(United Press.)

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28. — There will be no "immediate or precipitate" return of the railroads to private ownership, Director General Hines announced to-day. In a letter to the House and Senate committees Hintes declared there would be no relinquishment of the roads "until there has been an opportunity to see whether a permanent programme of constructive legislation is likely to be considered soon."

Bolsheviki Fail In Entente Demands

New Methods Will Be Adopted Says French Delegate.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, Feb. 28.—Captain Andre Tardieu, one of the French delegates to the Peace Conference, says that the Bolsheviki failed to comply with the conditions laid down by the Entente as to a suspension of hostilities and that the Allies have in view new methods of restoring order in Russia and are examining available means to carry out this purpose.

SUPPORT FROM ITALY

(United Press.)

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28.—President Wilson to-day, in a personal cable from Premier Orlando, was assured of the whole hearted support of Italy in the formation of a League of Nations.

The cable said:

"In Paris the heart of heroic France, through the high and persevering desire of a great leader of a great people, the nations who have fought together for the liberty and justice of the world have also determined together, in the sanctity of a solemn covenant and in the name of liberty and justice to all peoples, to establish a peace which shall reign supreme over the future destinies of the world.

"To this covenant, which shall be the intangible charter of humanity, Italy who in the past and the present has always championed the cause of right and proclaimed and consecrated it with her laws and with her blood, bring the contradiction of her assent with fervored expression of deep conviction.

"Our hearts, with sincere faith, celebrate this event which is, and will remain, one of the most memorable in human history, and it is fitting that the whole Italian people comprehend and acclaim with joy its high value and its everlasting significance."

UNREST IN SPAIN

(United Press.)

MADRID, Feb. 28. — The Cabinet resolved to-day to suspend the constitution guarantee throughout Spain as the result of the spread of syndicalism in sympathetic strikes. The Syndicalists are alleged to have captured practically the entire industrial organization of the country.

EXPECT DECLINE IN ANTHRACITE PRICES

NEW YORK, Feb. 28.—With practically all dealers heavily over-stocked with coal and consumers' bins filled with more than they can possibly use this winter, a sharp decline in the prices of anthracite is looked for this spring. Coal dealers, who put in big supplies at the high prices which have ruled for more than a year, face the prospect of losing part of their anticipated profits or keeping the money they have invested in coal where it draws no interest tied up until next fall.

To-day the retail coal trade in this city is at a standstill, due to lack of demand, and the same condition is true in the suburban sections. In an effort to unload their abnormally large stocks of coal while prices remain high, some dealers are urging consumers to buy now for next winter, telling them that prices are going up.

Potatoes scalloped with peppers are a novelty.

If mayonnaise is covered closely in a jar it will keep in a cool place a week.

THE PEACE CONFERENCE

French and Italian Spokesmen Want More Important Questions Taken Up

TAFT WILL SPEAK

(United Press.)

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28—French and Italian spokesmen are urging that German indemnities and territorial problems be given a more prominent place in the peace conference at once, it was learned in diplomatic quarters to-day. In fact, it was hinted that both countries are piqued at the subordination of these problems in favour of the League of Nations plan.

Accepts Invitation.

(Canadian Press.)

NEW YORK, Feb. 28.—Former President Wm. H. Taft has accepted an invitation to speak here next Tuesday night on the same platform with President Wilson. In his telegram Taft emphasized his desire to do everything possible to help make clear to the country the non-partisan character of the League of Nations issue.

Spartacans Control The Bavarian Capital

Munich is now under the Heel of the Spartacans—System of Food Rations—Money Made by Wholesale.

(Canadian Press.)

PARIS, Feb. 28. — The situation at Munich is grave, according to the Berlin Vossische Zeitung. Spartacan forces not only are masters of all public buildings and transportation services in the city, but have also seized the presses on which the government bank notes are printed. These presses, it is said by the Berlin Lokal Anzeiger, are kept busy. Food stuffs are being rationed at Munich the amounts issued to the Bourgeoisie being only one-half of those given to the workingmen.

$35,000 Bribe Money In U. S. Navy Scandal

Prominent Civilians Believed Involved—Five Arrests to Date

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28.—Nearly $35,00 in bribe money, besides valuable presents and entertainments, constituted the price paid in the Third Naval District slacker enlistments scandal, according to estimates of the Navy Department on record here. The preliminary report on the investigation shows five persons under arrest, with a prospect of further detentions in and out of the service.

Prominent civilians are believed involved, but the department, while promising, not to shield them, declared that the cas is not yet sufficiently developed to warrant publishing their names.

The evidence so far gathered showed two phases of the scandal.

One aspect was passage of men in to the naval service who were physically unfit, but who probably, under army rules, would have been assigned to duty—perhaps overseas. The other phase was detailing men to soft shore jobs, permitting them sometimes to continue their business in New York, as well as early release of certain men after the armistice.

STORE CLOSED.

President Wilson Will Leave For France Next Wednesday

Going Back to Paris to Complete the Peace Treaty—Will Make Final Appeal for Support of the League of Nations Scheme

By Robert J. Bender.
(United Press.)

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28.—President Wilson will sail for France on the George Washington next Wednesday morning, it was officially announced to-day. On his return journey to resume his duties at the peace conference the President will be accompanied again by Mrs. Wilson, Admiral Grayson and other members of his immediate party who made the original trip.

Tuesday night he will speak at the Metropolitan Opera House in New York in a final appeal to the country for support of the League of Nations. From the opera house he will go directly to the George Washington, spending the night aboard the vessel, which sails the next morning.

Details of the President's return trip to Paris were announced at the White House to-day. He will leave Washington immediately after the adjournment of Congress on a special train for New York, having luncheon and dinner on the train and stopping only at Philadelphia. The party will arrive in New York about 8.30 Tuesday evening, going directly to the Opera House.

The President and Mrs. Wilson will not occupy the Murat Palace as their Paris residence upon their return, it being understood that another fine home has been secured for them.

Preparations Made For The Sunday School Convention

Sunday School Workers Have Been Exceptionally Active During the Past Week.

THE PROGRAMME

The Sunday School workers of Peterborough have been exceptionally active during the last week, preparing for their big annual convention which will be held in George Street Methodist Church next Monday, March 3rd, commencing at 9 a.m., and continuing right through what will be one of the most important days for those men and women who have the responsibility of the spiritual and moral tarining of our children in the Sunday School.

The convention will really start on Sunday, March 2nd, when the pulpits will be supplied as follows:

11 a.m.—St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church—Rev. P. K. Dayfoot, M.A.
11 a.m.—George Street Methodist Church—Rev. T. A. Halpenny, B.A.
11 a.m.—St. James' Methodist Church—Rev. C. A. Meyers, B.A.
7 p.m.—Murray St. Baptist Church—Rev. P. K. Dayfoot, M.A.
7 p.m.—Mark. St Methodist Church—Rev. C. A. Meyers, B.A.
7 p.m.—Bethany Tabernacle—Rev. T. A. Halpenny, B.A.

A Big Day.

Contrary to the general custom of mankind to rest on the Sabbath, these ministers will have a very strenuous day, for, when the Ministerial Association got through allotting pulpits to them, the Sunday School workers got busy and arranged for the afternoon as follows:

3.00 p.m.—Murray Street Baptist — Rev. P. K. Dayfoot, M.A.
3.00 p.m.—George Street Methodist —Rev. T. A. Halpenny, B.A.
3.00 p.m.—Trinity Methodist—Rev. C. A. Meyers, B.A.
3.45 p.m.—St. Paul's Presbyterian — Rev. P. K. Dayfoot, M.A.
3.45 p.m.—St. Andrew's Presbyterian —Rev. T. A. Halpenny, B.A.
3.45 p.m.—Knox Presbyterian—Rev. C. A. Meyers, B.A.

It is hoped that all parents and teachers will see to it that their children and themselves are present at as many of these services as possible to show that our interests are centered in the rising generation, for our future depends almost entirely upon the proper cultivation and moulding of the mind of the child.

The visiting clergymen, upon their arrival in our city, will be met by representatives of our Sunday Schools, and through the kindness of some of them, they will be entertained in their homes.

The Programme.

The programme of the convention will be in these columns to-morrow, and will be very interesting to those who are active in Sunday School work. The secretary of the local association, Mr. J. J. Turner, has sent invitations to all the county clergymen and workers to be persent at this convention, and it is expected that a large representation from the county will be here, and they, coupled with our city representatives, will no doubt tax George Street Methodist Church to its capacity. Sunday and Monday will be a day long to be remembered by fathers, mothers, Sunday School superintendents, teachers and scholars. Many of our busiest business men will devote most of the day Monday to this work, for which parents should be very thankful.

FRANK JENNE says:

Style is something like a sunbeam you can see it and it is wonderful but you can't take hold of it. Still it is very real—so real, in fact that the average man can no more get along without it than he can three meals a day. Style isn't the foundation of the new spring hats and caps at my shop. But this element reinforced by fine hat-building makes these hats and caps the most desirable brands of headgear. "Come to Me."

"INDUSTRIAL PARLIAMENT"

Labour Crisis Has Been Temporarily Averted—Weakness of the Present Situation

RADICAL ELEMENTS

United Press:

LONDON, Feb. 28.—The feeling prevailed in official circles to-day that the creation of an "Industrial Parliament," containing representatives of capital and labour, together with the miners' decision to postpone their strike until March 31, has temporarily averted the Labour crisis. Nobody, however, was willing to predict that the situation has been settled up more than temporarily.

The final result of the move to reach an understanding on industrial problems, it was said, depends upon the confidence shown by the Labourites in the new "Industrial Parliament" and the ability of union leaders to prevent unauthorized strikes by more radical elements. The weakness of the situation, it was pointed out, was the "Parliament" has no real power and can only advise the acceptance of recommendations.

City's Lawsuit Getting Musty

Writ Against Messrs. Bogue and Conroy Was Issued in 1913

A lawsuit that is becoming slightly reminiscent of Jarndyce was recalled at last night's meeting of the Legal Committee when City Solicitor Widdifield presented a report on the progress that has been made by his predecessors in case of "Peterboro vs. Bogue and Conroy." This action was instituted in the epoch before the war, and has acquired during the long intervening years a shade of the misty atmosphere associated with legends. According to the City Solicitor's report on this dusty inheritance the city issued a writ against Messrs. Bogue and Conroy on December 22nd, 1913. The case was connected with a contract for the building of the Romaine street sewer and sewage pumping station, the latter of which in those happy days was tenderly termed "The White Elephant."

Mr. Widdifield reported that when the writ was issued the defendants promptly asked for particulars which the former City Solicitors apparently could not satisfy." He observed that the length of time that has intervened does not make this matter any easier. The City Engineer of those days, Mr. T. A. S. Hay, has gone to his reward. He would have been an important witness, and several others have moved away. These little difficulties did not daunt the Committee who on motion of Alderman Hamilton, seconded by Alderman Garside, instructed City Solicitor Widdifield to get all the information he could on this case and report back.

A St. Thomas Idea.

The St. Thomas Council is circularizing the municipalities of the Province requesting them to support a proposal urging the Legislature to change the date of municipal nominations to the second Monday in December, and elections to the third Monday. The Committee decided on a motion by Alderman Gainey, seconded by Alderman Hamilton, that no action be taken.

City Clerk Armstrong pointed out that if the municipal year ended on November 30th, as suggested, three weeks would intervene, in fact practically one month, during which the city's business would be carried on by the old Council encroaching invalidly upon the new, or in the alternative a month would lapse before the Council-elect could take up the city's work.

Chief Thompson recommended in his annual report to the Police Commission that certain hills in different parts of the city be set apart for coasting during hours to be specified by the Council. The Committee decided that since the end of the winter was near this question could be deferred until later in the year.

INDUSTRY WILL NOT BE ESTABLISHED

Linen Not Needed For Manufacture of Aeroplane Wings.

While Mr. G. A. Gillespie, M.P.P., expected last year to start flax growing as an industry about the city this year, he said to-day that the idea had been dropped since through the signing of the armistice the need of linen had been greatly eliminated. His object was only to furnish the necessary material for the wings of aeroplanes.

With dry, white fishes serve a fish butter sauce with lemon.

Small Nations' Claims Heard

Russian Situation Also Under Discussion by Conference.

Special to the Examiner:

PARIS, Feb. 28.—Foreign Minister Pichon announced to-day that the shooting of Premier Clemenceau deferred the decision of the Russian situation, which was under consideration when the Premier was attacked last week. He said there is reason to believe that an agreement on a general policy will be reached soon without great difficulty.

Regarding reparation, Pichon said that when it is known what Germany will be able to pay towards the total claims of the Allies, it will be easy to agree on the proportion due each.

The committee considering the Greek territory yesterday heard representatives of the Provisional Government of Albania, the former Provisional Government of Epirus, and of Thrace.

The Committee on International Labour Legislation has decided to call the first meeting of the proposed International Labour Conference in October.

Finest Sheet of Ice of the Season —Big Band To-morrow Night

The finest sheet of ice of the season is at Brock Street Rink for to-night's skating. Band will be in attendance. To-morrow night there will be a double sized band from the Great War Veterans and there will be skating without any intermission. As the skating season will be over shortly you will do well to take the advantage of all the good ice while it is here.

League of Nations Gaining Favour

Idea Is Received More Enthusiastically Since President Wilson's Return from Europe.

(Special to The Examiner.)

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28.—President Wilson's closest advisers have declared the country was showing an increasing disposition to support the League of Nations.

This claim was based on reports received from all parts of the United States. The attitude of the American people toward the League is the most vital. Supporters and opponents of the plan attach the greatest importance to the reports now coming in by wire and mail.

CANADA'S PERMANENT ARMY.

The announcement that the Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry Regiment is to be re-organized and made one of the units of Canada's permanent military force, shows that the precedent inaugurated after the South African war when the Strathcona Horse was absorbed into the standing army, is being followed on this occasion. Simultaneously with the news that the Princess Pats are to be converted into a regiment of regulars comes the statement that Canada's permanent army will contain about 5,000 men, which is only a slight increase over the pre-war strength. The announcement to this effect will be a surprise to the war-like citizens who have been expecting Canada to retain a standing force considerably larger than before the war, as well as to the optimistic Canadians who, believing that the world's last war has been fought, did not expect that the Dominion would need an army of any kind, small or large. Canada's permanent force will consist of the Princess Patricias and the Royal Canadian Dragoons, to be stationed at Toronto, the Royal Canadian Regiment at Kingston, the Royal Canadian Garrison Artillery, the Royal Canadian Horse Artillery and the Lord Strathcona Horse. Two of these corps originated in wars, the Strathcona Horse in the South African conflict, and the Princess Pats in the great struggle that has just closed.

ON SUNDAY NIGHT.

Substitute Peterborough for London, and George street for Dundas street in the following article from the London, Ont., Advertiser, and the picture that is therein presented is one that can be found in Peterborough as well as in the Forest City:

The greatest part of mankind employ their first years to make their last miserable.—Briyere.

Ain't it so, Wilbert? One remembers that youth is a continual intoxication, that young fellows will always be young fellows; that when we are out of sympathy with the young our work is over, etc., etc., and makes every allowance possible for the young, hot, coltish spirit of adolescence. But when he sees Dundas street on a Sunday night he wonders how so many young men can work so hard doing nothing. And at the same time it is not out of place to remember that Goethe says: "The destiny of any nation at any given time depends on the opinions of its young men under five and twenty." If this be true, may God help the nation if rulership is to come from Dundas street's governors of a Sabbath evening.

It applies to week nights as well as Sunday nights. But, on week nights the lights of the stores are lit, while on Sunday night the streets are dimly lighted. And all along the street in laneways, doorways, and on the sidewalks, the youth of London goes through a coarse and dismal sort of bumptious frolic. He is clad in a certain regalia of the period running to rakish caps and neckwear that makes him look as if his throat were cut. It is the typical group of village "cutup" multiplied a thousand times and sophisticated in the ways of an age that is sometimes cynically wicked. The pranks of wild youth are comprehensible and pprhaps somewhat poetic, even the unfeeling pranks, but the stagnation of youth, youth that will permit its feet to become stuck to muddy sidewalks, that glues itself to window sills and doorways, that chews tobacco with an air of bravado and teens at womanhood, if that is not the negation of manhood, what is it? If it is not a moral weakness, a blankness of character, that cries aloud for treatment, what is it?

Examining the problem without prejudice, but rather with a sympathetic interest, one is struck by the impression that the whole thing is a question of sex attraction. Youth begins to "hang around" about 7 o'clock, but not so densely as after 8 o'clock. It takes up its fixed posts after the churches have closed their doors, and when the opposite sex has ended its parade, male youth melts away as quickly as though the earth had swallowed him. When Alice, Maud and Phylis go home, there is no one before whom to swagger; no one about whom to pass nasty remarks; no one with whom to strike up a chance acquaintance; and even though he would protest the statement, Tom, Dick and Harry do not remain in the picture after the domestic curfew has struck for the little daughters of sensible parents.

These boys are not "toughs," but they like to act as though they are so worldly wise that normal, respectable life bores them, and they do not know that worldly wisdom is a callow, shallow, unbeautiful thing as represented by their antics. They want to meet girls, and as a whole, they are not a dangerous class. But when they have no legitimate way of becoming acquainted, their association with the few that talk very bravely of conquests soon has a contaminating effect.

Every street corner, every poolroom, every "hang-out" of any kind proclaims aloud that male youth does not know what to do with its hands and the rest of its body. It is awkward in its clowning, and it has to be led and trained. But when it has "nothing to do but hang around" it becomes a menace, mostly to itself. If youth knew it, this is the way to store up years of want and misery.

Those gentlemen who declare themselves for a rockbound observance of the Sabbath and let it go with the strict blue law enforcement can scarcely know what it means to shut all doors to youth on the Sabbath. Far better it would be to open the theatres and offer some kind of uplifting programme than to turn every downtown street into a stagnant stream of life that is bound to become polluted from the mental drains that pour into it. But these hard-crusted gentlemen usually are occupying themselves with a book or with some strictly conventional Sabbath evening occupation. So long as their sons and daughters are not at some movie show or concert, they are content. They do not know what the clustering of human flies upon the dark streets may mean to those sons and daughters. If they did they would turn up the lights of London, spiritual as well as electrical, and the glow might reveal the sham of some old dogmas.

JUSTICE HARLAN once told this story of a boy and a house-hunter: A man got off a train at a suburban station and asked a boy how far Mr. Smith's new block of semi-detached houses was. The boy said, "About twenty minutes' walk." "Twenty minutes!" cried the house-hunter, "Nonsense! The advertisement said five." "Well," said the boy, "you can believe me or you can believe the advertisement; but I ain't tryin' to sell you nothin'."

This story illustrates the way advertising is still regarded by a few people. In the main, it is an unjust attitude, for the advertising of today has reached a plane where it is above the suspicion of being a mere "bait."

It is not to be denied that what we, as advertisers, are after is to make sales. But we do not attempt to unload "cats in bags" on any one. Your intelligence demands the privilege of unrestricted choice.

Before you make up your mind to buy a suit of clothes, you want to know how it looks on you; you want to see how it fits you; how the style of coat, the shade and pattern of cloth become you.

When you buy Fit-Reform Brand ready-to-wear clothes you have this advantage—and you have the privilege of choosing from as many suits as you like.

We are anxious to cite the fine distinction between Fit-Reform Brand and ordinary clothes. We want to point out 25 features in these clothes not to be found in other clothes.

We will impart to you the reasons why Fit-Reform Brand clothes excel in all those elements that make for superior style and better service.

SALARY INCREASES SOUGHT BY SOME OF CITY OFFICIALS

Tax Collector Told Finance Committee He Was Not Paid More Than Firemen—Applied for Substantial Raise

OTHER REQUESTS COMING

Tax Collector Green applied to the Finance Committee last night for an increase in salary, asking for $1,600, the Council to pay the expenses incidental to his office work, or an alternative, $2,500, out of which he would pay the expenses himself.

His present salary is $1,400, out of which he pays his office expenses, except the wages of a girl assistant for two months and $120 which the Council provides for war stamps and some other expense.

"You're not asking much," was Mayor Duncan's laconic comment.

"I am only getting as much as a fireman when I have paid all my expenses," Mr. Green stated. His net salary he estimated at between $1,100 and $1,150. He asked the committee's attention to the responsibility he assumed in the collection of half a million taxes, every cent of which he had to account for. Citing the salaries paid in other cities in Peterborough's class, he showed that his was considerably lower than any of them.

Brantford, for instance, pays its tax collector $2,900. The taxes in the following towns are all less than Peterborough's, and the following salaries are quoted: Kingston $2,400, Chatham $2,100, Sherbrooke $1,900, St. Thomas $1,900.

Other Requests.

When Mr. Green had retired from the committee room, Mayor Duncan and Ald. Taylor, chairman of the committee, enumerated some of the other requests from city employees who are also applying to the Council for increases.

Ald. Morrison was moved by the recital to remark that it seemed unreasonable, with so many men out of work who had to pay these salaries, but he was informed that the city's employees had been long neglected.

Upon Ald. Turner's suggestion, the committee decided to postpone the pondering of these applications until next week, when they could be tabulated and dealt with collectively.

It was stated that the stenographers in the City Engineer's and Clerk's offices had their requests on file, that City Treasurer Adams was applying for an increase of $250, and Mayor Duncan stated that Judge Huycke had intimated that he was entitled, as chairman of the Police Commission, to $300, instead of $100 as now paid him. Likewise the chairman of the Court of Revision received only $50, as did the other members, and citizens had stated that it was a shame to ask these men to perform an important duty for such petty sums.

FILMING THE WAR UNDER SHELL FIRE

Even the Motion Picture Camera Had to Be Equipped With a Steel Helmet—See These Pictures at the Grand Next Week

War is hell with the lid off. But so far as Dr. H. D. Girdwood is concerned it was often hell with the cap on. For his particular function in the fighting line was to film the frightful facts.

He had a steel helmet to his camera long before the Allied troops had been supplied with them. Sometimes he had to spend hours making his apparatus look like a piece of turf, a stump of a tree, or something else that has no pictorial purpose. Once he spent two hours up a tree in No Man's Land, and had just got nicely fixed up when German snipers set out to snip him before he could snap them.

Crump Shells.

On another occasion he was within 80 yards of the German trenches. Fritz did not like the idea of having his features taken, and he turned a machine-gun on to the camera, which accordingly collapsed. "But the weirdest adventure," Dr. Girdwood said to a Sunday Chronicle man, "was when I was in a dug-out, taking pictures through the entrance. Crump shells were threatening to blow us to smithereens all the time. But, despite the duet, I got a fine film. Then two soldiers put their blankets over the door to shut out the light, and I managed to get in another film free from dust.

A Narrow Escape.

"My nearest escape? That was once when something went wrong with the camera that was on a level with the parapet top. I nearly stood up to see what had happened instead of bringing the camera down. If I had not remembered in the nick of time I should not be showing pictures now, for machine-guns at that moment were destroying everything that showed over the top."

Barbed Wire.

He was within 80 yards of the Leicesters when they dropped in dozens on the German barbed wire. He shows you Allied troops working with unimaginable energy to consolidate fallen trenches. And on the land over which they have swept you see the figures of wounded men writhing in agony. "With the Empire's Fighters" is an epic of courage and endeavour. It took courage to "get" it, and a little bit is necessary to see it through.

The Union Caucus Talks Of A $3,500 Indemnity

M.P.'s Say They Can't "Make Ends Meet" at Present Salary

OTTAWA, Feb. 28. — Government supporters in both Houses gathered in full caucus yesterday and continued in close conference until the dinner hour. W. S. Fielding was not present.

The movement to have the sessional indemnity increased from $2,500 to $3,500 per annum was mentioned at this caucus. Members claim that with the cost of living doubled throughout the country, and accentuated at the capital for temporary residents by the shortage of accommodation, they are unable if a session is prolonged "to make both ends meet." Several previous efforts have been made on the part of members to have their indemnity enlarged, but without success.

Mr. J. E. Armstrong presided at the caucus to-day, and Sir Thomas White addressed it.

Mr. W. S. Middlebro, the Chief Government Whip, stated at its conclusion that the discussion had been "most harmonious."

"The spirit displayed augurs well for the permanent unity of the party," he said. "It was the best and most encouraging expression of opinion regarding the solidity of the Government party that I have ever heard in caucus.

It was decided to leave the larger questions over to be passed upon by special caucuses. There were some references to the tariff question, and it is stated by one of the prominent members that a leading manufacturer, who is also a member of Parliament, made the suggestion that to effect a compromise between the East and the West on this important matter, the tariff should be reduced.

GAS IN THE STOMACH IS DANGEROUS

Recommends Daily Use of Magnesia To Overcome Trouble, Caused by Fermenting Food and Acid Indigestion.

Gas and wind in the stomach accompanied by that full, bloated feeling after eating are almost certain evidence of the presence of excessive hydrochloric acid in the stomach, creating so-called "acid indigestion."

Acid stomachs are dangerous because too much acid irritates the delicate lining of the stomach, often leading to gastritis accompanied by serious stomach ulcers. Food ferments and sours, creating the distressing gas which distends the stomach and hampers the normal functions of the vital internal organs, often affecting the heart.

It is the worst of folly to neglect such a serious condition or to treat with ordinary digestive aids which have no neutralizing effect on the stomach acids. Instead get from any druggist a few ounces of Bisurated Magnesia and take a teaspoonful in a quarter glass of water right after eating. This will drive the gas, wind and sour right out of the body, sweeten the stomach, neutralize the excess acid and prevent its formation and there is no sourness or pain. Bisurated Magnesia (in powder or tablet form—never liquid or milk) is harmless to the stomach, inexpensive to take and the best form of magnesia for stomach purposes. It is used by thousands of people who enjoy their meals with no more fear of indigestion.

There's a unique feature about a Chesterfield — every member of the family has a liking for it. When you enter a room with a Chesterfield in it don't you instinctively make for it. You love to luxuriate in its soft depths, to curl up in a corner of it with a book, perchance to use it for your afternoon nap.

The Hall Chesterfields are entirely different to the ordinary Chesterfield. The lines are different, the coverings are different, and there's a vast difference in the workmanship and the filling that goes into their make up. We will be glad to explain all these Special features to you.

Peterborough Fair Board Asks Council For Grant Of $2,000

Presented Their Plea to Finance Committee Last Night Stating That the Industrial Exhibition Was Virtually a Public Enterprise and Deserved Generous Support

CITIZENS ARE ASSISTING

Suggesting the sum of $2,000, a deputation from the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition last night appealed to the Finance Committee of the Council for a substantial grant toward the furtherance of the improvements to the Fair Grounds which have been planned for this year.

Mr. Roland Deane, president of the Exhibition Board, was accompanied by Messrs. J. W. Fraser, S. Dickson Hall, R. M. Glover, Thos. Brown, R. H. Turner, Fred Roy and F. J. A. Hall.

The committee promised the deputation every consideration of their request, which they will discuss next Tuesday night.

Although the city had reduced its grant last year from $600 to $500, the Board spent $6,100 on permanent improvements, Mr. Deane said. During the year $18,000 had been expended in prize money and improvements.

"We want to build up the Fair," Mr. Deane continued. "We need better accommodation for the horses, proper lavatories for the public and a new stand for the performers."

Mr. Deane stated that one horse barn was estimated to cost $2,000 and another one $1,050.

Began With Nothing.

"We hadn't a nickel when we started out last year," Mr. Turner stated, "but in spite of every obstacle the directors refused to lose courage, and with the assistance of many citizens, who gave generous contributions, and of the public who attended the Fair and the holiday attractions, the Board has succeeded in accomplishing some of its plans to the unanimous approval of the citizens and other visitors."

Exhibition is the City's.

"This is not the Exhibition Board's proposition any more than it is the City Council's," Mr. Glover emphasized. "The money we spent last year from the manufacturers, the merchants and the working people proved that Peterborough is ripe for a big Fair. When we come to you for money it is not because the Fair doesn't pay. Every performance pays for itself and leaves a little profit, but we want to fix the grounds so that the Peterborough Fair will be equal to other places." The visiting gentlemen then left the room.

Ald. Taylor said that the Council had always been generous with the Fair Board. They were, like ourselves, working for nothing but the interests of the city. We feel that the Board has backed up with performance what it said it would do. We have built up the Exhibition to the extent that the people are taking a pride in it, and the Council should look on it as an asset to the city."

Lease For Ten Years.

Mr. Fred. Hall said the committee that the Board held a lease of the grounds for ten years.

Mr. Roy said he was present simply as a citizen. The Exhibition Board devoted a great deal of time unselfishly in the promotion of the Fair, and he considered the city was justified in backing them up. In the old days, the people used to spend their holidays in Cobourg or Lindsay, whereas now there are attractions at home and visitors are coming here. In this way money was both kept and brought here.

"Our deputation is not asking the city to take over the Exhibition," Mr. Fraser remarked, "but they do solicit your liberal support. The directors are working in the interests of the city, and those are the interests the Council is striving to serve."

Nothing for the Directors.

"The directors get nothing out of this," Mr. Brown reminded the committee. "Last year we had to go into our own pockets. The Exhibition and grounds by right belong to the city, and the time is coming when you will have a revenue coming in from them. Lindsay is planning to hold a demonstration on Dominion Day, a sign that they realize what we have been doing."

Voluntary Contributions.

Mr. Deane stated that for this year the De Laval Company, at their annual meeting, made a grant of $250 to the Exhibition. J. J. Turner and Sons had also been generous, Mr. W. G. Morrow had given $250, Richard Hall and Son $100, and Mr. Walter Stocker $10. This assistance, he declared, indicated the appreciation and the interest that is being taken in the advancement of the Fair.

"If you give us $2,000 we will guarantee to get the rest," Mr. Deane concluded, after referring to the fact that two years ago the Board had given its Dominion Day proceeds to the Health Association, and intended to hold a veterans' celebration on May 24th next.

Ald. Taylor turned over the page, so to speak, and remarked that the Council had to keep the tax rate down.

Mayor Duncan — "I wish to say that I appreciate all the things our gentlemen have done. I am surprised and delighted with what they accomplished last year with the money they had. I was impressed with the need of decent accommodations for the ladies and gentlemen who visit the Exhibition, and I should give the Board a substantial grant.

Liquor Cargo Was Captured

Two Men Appear in This Morning's Police Court

Melville Manson Moyse, a resident of Cobourg, and Alf. Huffman, a house-mover in this city, appeared in the police court docket this morning, charged with having liquor in a place other than their residence. Moyse pleaded guilty and Huffman not guilty. Moyse is suspected of breaking into several tailoring establishments in Cobourg, which were burglarized some time ago. Moyse asserts that he was freed of all connection with the theft in Cobourg. Chief Ruse, of the Lake Shore town, has asked that Moyse be held and after the charge of having liquor is disposed of he will be held for the second and more serious charge. It is said that Moyse arrived in the city with a regular cargo of the fire water—three suit cases, each holding 22 bottles.

Amateurs Made Poor Showing

The Picture Part of the Performance Was Excellent

The last amateur night at the Grand theatre under the present management was held last evening. The best part of the performance was the announcement that it was all over and the disappearing coat-tails of an elongated looking individual who attempted a coon impersonation. Walter Parsons sang a couple of songs which, considering the performer's age were fairly creditable. He was followed by W. Thompson, who gave a fairly good imitation of a Harry Lauder performance. He had the crooked stick and the rolled oatmeal brogue but lost out on the mannerisms that are so characteristic of the scotch comedian. It was a fairly good number and the crowd brought Mr. Thompson back for some more.

A gentleman whose baptismal name was given as Stanley Bishop has more nerve than ability as the crowd discovered when he essayed to deliver a piano solo. Stanley mistook the applause of the audience at the close for an encore and came back with a second dose. He was hooked off the stage before the outpouring melody was completed.

Mr. Archie Barbeau in a feat of strength interested the crowd but not so much as the small boy who walked on the stage and carried off the fifteen hundred pound weights and a salt barrel labelled three hundred pounds with which Barbeau had wrestled the crowd by elevating above his head. It was a neat trick with a laugh at the finish.

Charles Leonard in a coon attire did not justify the trouble he must have gone to in dressing up for the occasion.

The picture performance was of the usual high standard and the concluding feature entitled "Roped" a western romance, more than compensated the audience for the intrusion of the amateurs.

CHARTERED FOR FLOATING BARS?

NEW YORK, Feb. 27.—The Acer Restaurant Company with headquarters in Newark, N. J., filed articles of incorporation which state the objects of the company to be "the operation of cafes and eating places upon any of the rivers and harbors of the United States, or upon the deep seas, together with all kinds of business included therewith." Thirsty souls are wondering if this has anything to do with recent rumors to the effect that floating bars, operated outside the three mile limit, would be introduced when the United States goes dry.

AQUITANIA ARRIVES IN NEW YORK.

(Canadian Press.)

NEW YORK, Feb. 28. — The British liner Aquitania, bringing 5,893 American soldiers and with a distinguished passenger list, including Lord Reading, the British ambassador to the United States, and J. P. Morgan, arrived here to-day from Liverpool by way of Brest.

Monthly Meeting Of The W.C.T.U.

At the regular monthly meeting of the W.C.T.U. held on Wednesday afternoon in the Green Room of the Y.W.C.A. at which about forty members were present, Mrs. A. J. Thomas gave a very interesting account of a recent conversation she had with Mrs. Thornly while visiting in London. She said that Mrs. Thornly had given her some interesting and valuable ideas on Mothers' Pensions, the Social Service Department, a week of prayer, and on Mothers' Meetings, and strongly advised the idea of supporting a deaconess. She said that she asked Mrs. Bigelow, the W.C.T.U. organizer, to come to the city to speak to the local branch.

Using the Ballot.

In a discussion of the use of the ballot the members were asked to conduct a campaign endeavouring to instruct and persuade the women of the city to use the ballot to the best interests of humanity.

The scripture lesson was read by Mrs. Goodfellow, and Mrs. Ellis led in prayer.

MARINE STRIKE IN NEW YORK HARBOUR

(Special to The Examiner.)

NEW YORK, Feb. 28. — Unless President Wilson interferes New York Harbour will be tied up by a strike of marine workers to-morrow, according to Thomas L. DelaHunty, President of the Marine Workers' Affiliation to-day. DelaHunty has sent a telegram to the President notifying him that the Macy wage award is unsatisfactory to the 16,000 boatmen involved.

CUT THIS OUT

OLD ENGLISH RECIPE FOR CATARRH, CATARRHAL DEAFNESS AND HEAD NOISES.

If you know of some one who is troubled with Catarrhal Deafness, head noises or ordinary catarrh cut out this formula and hand it to them and you may have been the means of saving some poor sufferer perhaps from total deafness. In England the scientists for a long time past have recognized that catarrh is a constitutional disease and necessarily requires constitutional treatment.

Sprays, inhalers and nose douches are liable to irritate the delicate air passages and force the disease into the middle ear which frequently means total deafness, or else the disease may be driven down the air passages towards the lungs, which is equally as dangerous. The following formula which is used extensively in the damp English climate is a constitutional treatment and should prove especially efficacious to sufferers here who live under more favorable climate conditions.

Secure from your druggist 1 ounce of Parmint (double strength). Take this home and add to it 1-4 pint of hot water and a little granulated sugar; stir until dissolved. Take 1 tablespoonful four times a day. This will often bring quick relief from distressing head noises. Clogged nostrils should open, breathing become easy and hearing improve as the inflammation in the euctachian tubes is reduced. Parmint used in this way acts directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system and has a tonic action that helps to obtain the desired results. The preparation is easy to make, costs little and is pleasant to take. Every person who has catarrah or head noises or is hard of hearing should give this treatment a trial.

THE J. C. TURNBULL COMPANY, LIMITED

The 57th Chapter I.O.D.E. May Again Affiliate With Local Council Of Women

Association Was Severed Until the Local Council Ceased Relations With Alien Countries—Seventh Annual Meeting of the Chapter—Interesting Reports Presented

At the Seventh Annual Meeting of the 57th Chapter I.O.D.E. held in the Green Room of the Y.W.C.A., the officers elected for the ensuing month were:

Hon. Regent—Mrs. J. Mills.
Regent—Mrs. J. C. Davidson.
1st Vice Regent—Mrs. Vincent Eastwood.
2nd Vice Regent—Miss F. Davidson.
Standard Bearer—Miss Charlotte Revel.
Corresponding Sec.—Mrs. C. R. Widdifield.
Recording Secretary—Mrs. F. S. Sharpe.
Treasurer—Mrs. Gordon Hall.
Echo Sec.—Mrs. Hounsell.

The Executive Committee consisting of Mrs. Clegg, Mrs. Cottrell, Miss E. Rubidge, Mrs. Walker, Mrs. Robert Neill, Mrs. Hay, Mrs. Gemmell, Miss Rush, Mrs. Greer, Mrs. C. E. Jamieson. Convenor of the Visiting Committee, Mrs. Mills of the Flower Committee, Miss Mabel Collins, of the Hospital Committee, Mrs. T. A. S. May, and of the Knitting Committee Mrs. Cottrell.

Preventorium Hospital Cot

It was decided to support a cot at the Toronto Preventorium Hospital and the Secretary was instructed to ascertain whether a patient might be sent to the cot from the city. It was also decided to send $25 to the Grenfell Mission Fund.

Dispose of Socks.

Following the reading of the report of the knitting committee a discussion arose over the disposal of the socks at present on hand and it was decided to obtain the names of any soldiers on active service and forward to them such socks as are required.

Will Hold Tea

Mrs. Vincent Eastwood very kindly placed her home at the disposal of the Chapter for them to hold a "Birthday Tea" to celebrate the seventh birthday of the Chapter. While the anniversary falls on the 8th of the month, it was found inconvenient to hold it on that day. Consequently Tuesday, the 11th of March was selected for the occasion. Mrs. H. S. MacDonald was appointed convenor of the tea committee with a committee of Mrs. Crowe, Mrs. Sharpe, Mrs. H. O. Fiske, Mrs. C. H. Amys and Mrs. Robert Neill.

Fee to Council of Women

After a certain discussion concerning the forwarding of the affiliation fee to the Local Council of Women, from which the Chapter severed its affiliation some time ago, on account of the Council's affiliation with allied enemy countries, it was decided to leave the matter to the new officers to take up. The Council recently severed all relations with the alien countries.

Committee Reports

The Flower Committee which undertakes to send flowers to all bereaved families of soldiers who have fallen, reported sending flowers to 72 families during the year. The Visiting Committee reported 163 visits during the year.

Mr. F. Barber Can Design The Hunter Street Bridge To Cost $100,000 Less Says Mr. R. R. Hall

It is certainly a great pleasure to note that the Dominion Government have seen fit to make a contribution of $50,000.00 toward the cost of the construction of the Hunter street bridge.

Your Hunter street critic found fault with the fact that I pointed out that the Dominion Government should make this contribution. Your critic wanted to see the contract. There was no pretence that such a contract was made. It was simply an understanding that in lieu of the Government being at the expense of a swing, it would bear a fair share of the costs of a high level bridge.

The discussion has resulted in a saving to the City of $50,000.00. Mayor Duncan and the Council are entitled to some credit for this. Your critic gives them none.

Next, there comes a new suggestion, that "by extending the filling on either side of the river it would be possible to cut off two arches and so effect a saving of $17,000.00."

And still another saving is suggested:: "Another saving of $20,000.00 could be made by having the work done on a cost-plus basis plan."

So far so good. A saving of $50,000.00, plus $17,000.00, plus $20,000.00, making in all an $87,000.00 saving on the cost of this bridge, is worth while.

If this river had a quick sand bottom or a limited discharging area there would be some excuse for a long arch extending from one side of the river to the other.

You do not require to be an engineer to know that.

Why not use the natural conditions of a solid rock foundation in the bed of the river? It will cheapen the cost of the bridge, make it stronger, more durable and cheaper to maintain. Mr. Barber can design such a bridge and it will cost our ratepayers $100,000.00 less than his present design.

R. R. HALL.

Omemee Egg Cases Contained Alcohol

Thirteen Gallons of Alcohol Located By Inspector

License Inspector Thornbury was in Omemee Wednesday night where he took possession of two cases of eggs. When the eggs arrived at Omemee station on Wednesday (being hauled from the village on a hand sleigh) the suspicion of the station official was aroused. The cases were placed on the train for the purpose of taking them to the other village station and on the way a man approached the station official and offered him $5 if he allowed the goods to go through. He was a poor man, he said, but his request met with a curt refusal. He raised the offer to $10, but the official informed him that he intended having the goods held and also having word sent to the License Inspector.

License Inspector Thornbury went to Omemee on the 8.00 o'clock train and took possession of the egg cases. Underneath the eggs cans containing 13 gallons of alcohol were discovered.

It is understood that two Hebrews are mixed up in the affair.

Ottawa Lose To Canadiens

Flying Frenchmen Outplay Senators on Letter's Ice and Win 5 3

OTTAWA, Feb. 28. — George Kennedy and his Canadiens took a strangle hold on the championship of the N.H.L. last night when they defeated the locals by 5 to 3, thus making it two straights in the post-season series to decide which of the Eastern teams shall go west to play against Vancouver for the Stanley Cup. The series now stands 2 to 0 for the Canadiens and in order to tie it up Ottawa must vanquish the Montreal team at the Metropolis Saturday night, then win again here in the fourth game on Monday next.

Last night's defeat came as a blow to the Ottawa club and to the players, but on the hour's play Lalonde and his team-mates deserved the laurels, as they out-generaled the home team, showed a superior brand of inside hockey throughout the match and were particularly strong and steady in the pinches.

The Senators on the other hand, lacked their usual aggressiveness and were out-skated time and again by the flashy red shirts.

BOWLING NEWS

A meeting of the Business Men's Ten-Pin League will be held at the Water Street Alleys at 3.30 on Saturday afternoon. All captains of each team are requested to be on hand.

BETTER BRING THIS TEAM TO PETERBOROUGH

On Thursday the Lakefield preparatory school defeated the Warsaw team on home ice by a score of 11-9. The Warsaw team had the same players they had five years ago. Most of them are returned soldiers. The Grove team have yet to be defeated in ten games that have been played this winter.

Bankers Won Hockey Games

A snappy game of hockey was played on Brock street rink last evening from 5 to 6 o'clock, between the Bankers and the Collegiate Institute team. The Bankers won out by a single tally, 5-4.

Aura Lee Are Beaten Again

U. T. S. Qualify to Meet Cornwall in O.H.A. Semi-finals

TORONTO, Feb. 28.—Before one of the largest crowds to attend a junior fixture this season, University Schools last ight qualified to meet Cornwall in the O.H.A. semi-finals when they defeated Aura Lee 4 to 2 and won the round by 3 goals. The winners showed grand form from beginning to end, and clearly demonstrated that they are worthy of their laurels.

The game proved of the thrilling variety, and the spectators were on their feet the greater part of the time The University Schools Rooters' Club were there in large numbers and cheered themselves hoarse as it became apparent that the Blue and White were destined to win. Aura Lee gave the best that they had, every player working with a will, but they could make little headway against the fierce backchecking of the U. T. S. forwards, the stonewall Munro-Rowell defense, or the ace of junior goalkeepers, Joe Sullivan.

The losers started out fast and kept up a continuous bombardment on the U. T. S. citadel, but without success. During the first five minutes play was in the Blue Shirts' territory 95 per cent. of the time, but Sullivan escaped unscathed. After eighteen minutes of the first period had elapsed Aggett put his team two goals up on the round when he beat Devitt with a wicked shot. Thereafter it was an uphill struggle for Aura Lee, but try as they would they were unequal to the task.

Peterboro' Curlers Lost in Finals

Ice Was in Fairly Good Condition in Spite of Temperature

Canadian Press:

TORONTO, Feb. 28.—High Park Curling Club won the District Cup this morning at the Granite Rink, defeating Peterborough by fifteen shots. The ice to-day was in fairly good condition, despite the rise in temperature. Scores:

High Park		Peterborough
D. M. Clark	20	J. W. McDermid	8
H. M. Patten	16	R. P. Best	12
Total	36	Total	21

In the semi-finals yesterday afternoon High Park put Orillia out of the running by the score of 27-26, and Peterborough won from Dundas by 50-22. In this game McDermid was up two shots and Best 26.

LINDSAY COULDN'T COME.

Lindsay telephoned this morning that they were unable to get four rinks together to send to Peterborough for the annual cup games, but they are expected some time next week.

In the meantime the Waddell Cup games, postponed from the open bonspiel, and the conclusion of the scheduled games have to be disposed of.

George St. Choir Entertained

Members Were the Guests of Mr. and Mrs. B. Shortly and Mr. and Mrs. G. Carruthers'

Sometimes between choirs and pew holders there seems to be "a great gulf fixed," but such is not the case in George Street Methodist Church. The warm welcome given the choir and a number of the church members, Tuesday evening of this week by Mr. and Mrs. B. Shortly and Mr. and Mrs. G. Carruthers when its members were their guests, and the spirit with which all hands entered into it making it something that will always be a pleasant memory, showed that choir and church members are one big family and a jolly one at that.

As the evening of this entertainment happened to fall on the wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Renwick, the choir took advantage of the opportunity to present them with a reading lamp. The presentation was made in a unique manner, being introduced among the games. Mr. C. C. Parsons, who was asked to explain the next game, in a few fitting remarks, expressed the appreciation felt by the members of the choir in their associations with Mr. and Mrs. Renwick, and the presentation was made by Miss Emma Worth. Needless to say Mr. and Mrs. Renwick were completely but pleasantly taken by surprise.

Much credit is due Miss Maysie Armstrong, who was in charge of the games for the evening, in making the occasion an informal and pleasant one for all concerned. The games chosen were those calculated to get the guests better acquainted and succeeded admirably in this. It goes without saying that the dainty refreshments served by the hostesses played an important part in the evening's entertainment, particularly with the male element.

At the close of the evening a vote of thanks was falteringly proposed by one of the male members, who was somewhat flabbergasted by having such publicity thrust upon him while still ruminating on some of the good things that had been provided. But all doubt as to its heartiness was removed by the sincerity with which it responded. The evening's entertainment brought the choir closer in touch with the congregation. We only hope the entertainers had as good a time as the guests.

It's a poor valentine that fails either to please a woman or make her mad.

A Fight With The Spartacans

(Canadian Press.)

COPENHAGEN, Feb. 28.— German government troops yesterday occupied the town of Hamborn, in the Ruhr industrial region, after a fight in which a number of Spartacans were killed. The government troops captured 116 prisoners. Rioting broke out anew in Munich on Thursday. Three thousand Spartacan soldiers marched to the Parliament Buildings in an effort to force the Diet to proclaim a Soviet republic in Bavaria.

Double Murder And Suicide

SARNIA, Feb. 28.—Thomas Wooley, 37, his wife Beatrice, 45 and Arthur Seigmiller, 28, are all dead as a result of a double murder and suicide at the railway Y.M.C.A. here this morning. Wooley, who is a cook at the Y. met Seigmiller, a Grand Trunk freight engineer, in the wash room, and after some argument, shot him dead. Then he went upstairs and killed his wife, afterwards shooting himself. Their little girl, aged seven, ran out of the bedroom crying, "Daddy has shot mother and himself." All parties were of Sarnia. Jealousy is supposed to have been the cause.

FORTY MILLION MARKS FOR SPARTACAN RIOTS

BERLIN, Feb. 28.—Damages to the amount of 40,000,000 marks have been demanded in 4,000 suits filed up to the present time for losses sustained as a result of the Spartacan riots in Berlin.

EXPIRED WHILE SAWING WOOD

COBOURG, Feb. 28.—As Thomas Bonghen was sawing wood with another man with a cross-cut saw at "Hamilton House", the residence of Mrs. Tracy, he was suddenly stricken with heart failure and passed away immediately.

A VERSATILE MUSICIAN.

An Irish vicar, according to the San Francisco Argonaut, having advertised for an organist, received the following reply:

"Dear Sir,—I notice you have a vacancy for an organist and music teacher, either lady or gentleman. Having been both for several years, I beg to offer you my services."

SHIFTING THE RESPONSIBILITY.

Bessie had just received a bright new dime and was starting out to invest in an ice-cream soda.

"Why don't you give your money to the missionaries?" asked the minister, who was calling at the house.

"I thought about that," said Bessie, "but I think I will buy the ice cream soda and let the druggist give the money to the missionaries."

TO-NIGHT.

Mr. Chas. Innes invites all school children to a free chalk talk at seven o'clock in the Gospel Hall, and at eight o'clock he will give an address on "Future Retribution. What is it? and how long will it last?" Last night's meeting was one of the best yet. Mr. Innes spoke on the other son of Luke 15. He was in the field, and would not join in the joys of the returning one. There are plenty like that, said the speaker. They are out in the field (the world), and are occupied with the things of the world, and if they hear the singing and rejoicing of those who are saved they only kick and grumble and condemn, but God will have His way in spite of every hindrance.

MISSION BAND

The Willing Workers Mission band of St. Andrew's church will hold their regular meeting to-morrow (Saturday), afternoon at three o'clock in the Guild Room of the Sunday School. All members are urged to be present.

NOTICE.

An important meeting of the Commercial Travellers residing in the city, will be held on Saturday, March 1st, (to-morrow) at the hour of 3 o'clock p.m., sharp, in the sample rooms of Stanley Couper, 397½ George street, (over Madill's drug store). Every Commercial Traveller of the city is respectfully requested to attend this meeting as very important business, which is vital to each Traveller, will be discussed. B. Stacey, Secretary, Commercial Travellers. 1d

Was Fined $500 And Costs On A Liquor Charge

This afternoon A. Huffman and Moyse Cobourg were fined $500 and $9.10 costs on a joint charge of keeping liquor in place other than their private dwelling. Default of payment will mean a six month's jail term with hard labour. Huffman who pleaded not guilty at this morning's session of the court, changed the plea to guilty.

The liquor was owned by Moyse who brought it from Port Hope. He hid it in a woods adjacent to the city under leaves and brush but recently took ten bottles to a country dance where he sold it.

"I sold it to one man," inserted Moyse.

"He was a hog," commented the Chief.

Moyse appeared to be badly battered up and had one hand bound in a sling. His demeanour was all confidece and he did not attempt to hide his guilt seeking rather to lay all the blame on his shoulder instead of his partner in the transaction.

HOME WHERE JEWS CAN LIVE IN PEACE

Zionists Demand That Palestine Be Erected Into a Jewish State.

PARIS, Feb. 28.—Dr. Sokolow, a representative of the Zionist movement, will present the claims of his organization to the Supreme Council at its session to-day. The Zionist claims vary and the minimum comprise establishment of Zionist communities in Palestine and the guaranty of special rights and sovereignty for these communities. The maximum claims call for the erection of a Jewish state in order that the Jews may have a national home where they can live in peace. Several governments, especially England and the United States, have shown a special interest in the movement.

LONDON, Ont. Feb. 28.—It became known that Miss Elizabeth E. Frank, who lived a recluse on her farm in South London until [illegible] death on February 8, left no will, and as a result her estate of $73,757.80 will be distributed equally among the following nephews and nieces: Richard C. Frank, Komoka; Charles J. P. Frank, Kimoka; Richard M. H. H. Frank, city; Richard Frank, city; Sarah Emma Park, R. R. GRAIN MARKET

The tone of the market was generally firmer yesterday, though the February option went off slightly towards the close, to 1-2c. lower than Thursday's close. All the other corn options closed strong, March 1-2c. up, May 2c. up, and July 1 7-8c. up. In spite of free selling by the bears, the market readily absorbed all offerings, the commission houses being the principal buyers. It was early understood that there would be no change in the hog price fixing situation at least for a few days, and this helped to strengthen the market. Oats and barley were both a little firmer. There is a little movement in rye in the local cash market, which is quoted 5c. higher.

Manitoba wheat—In store, Fort William: No. 1 northern, $2.24 1-2; No. 2 northern, $2.20 1-2; No. 3 northern, $2.17; No. 4 wheat, $2.1[illegible] 1-2.

Manitoba oats—No. 2 C.W., 70 1-8c., in store, Fort William; No. 3, 68c.; extra No. 1 feed, 65 1-8c.; No. 1 feed, 64 5-8c.; No. 2 feed, 56 [illegible]8c.

American corn, new crop—No. 3, $1.50; No. 4, $1.47; prompt shipment, track, Toronto.

Manitoba barley, in store, Fort William: No. 3, C.W., 85 [illegible]8c.; No. 4, C. W., 80 1-2c.; rejected, 74 3-8c.; feed, 73 3-8c.

Ontario wheat—No. 2 winter, $2.14 to $2.20; No. 2 winter, $2.11 to $2.19; No. 3 winter, $2.07 to $2.15; No. 1 spring, $2.09 to $2.12; No. 2 spring, $2.08 to $2.14; No. 3 spring, $2.02 to $2.10 f.o.b. shipping points, according to freight.

Ontario oats—No. 2 white, 58c to 61c; No. 3, 57c to 60c, according to freight outside.

Barley—Malting, 75c to 83c.

Peas—No. 2, $1.80, nominal, according to freight outside.

Buckwheat—No. 2, 90c to 92c., nominal.

Rye—No. 2, $1.30, nominal.

Manitoba flour, government standard, $10.85 to $11.10 Toronto.

Ontario Flour—Government standard, $9.85 to $9.75, Toronto-Montreal, $9.85 to $9.75, new bags.

Mill feed—Car lots, delivered, Montreal, shorts, $42.25; bran, $40.25; feed flour, not quoted; middlings, not quoted; good feed flour, per bag, $3.25 to $3.50.

The 57th Chapter I.O.D.E. May Again Affiliate With Local Council Of Women

Association Was Severed Until the Local Council Ceased Relations With Alien Countries Seventh Annual Meeting of the Chapter—Interesting Reports Presented

Corresponding Secretary's Report

Regent, Officers and members 57th Chapter I.O.D.E.,

I beg to present the Seventh Annual Report of the 57th Chapter I.O.D.E., as follows:—

The principal activity of the Chapter has been the supplying of comforts to our soldiers. If it were impossible to send these the money was raised and given for the purpose. The faithful knitters kept a goodly number of socks on hand which were consigned to Peterboro boys at the front or dotted [illegible] Field Comforts Commission and the Canadian War Contingent Association.

As in previous years the work has been done by standing committees in the various departments, and excellent results have been obtained.

Owing to the scarcity of food and the restrictions imposed, the Tea Room was closed in the early spring. At the March meeting, Mrs. W. R. Morris spoke re the food situation and every effort was made to help in the production and conservation campaign.

On May 1 Madam Grosgrain, Regent of the Madeline de Verchers Chapter, Ottawa, addressed the three local Chapters and outlined her scheme for French Relief. As this matter was to be brought up at the National Annual, no action was taken.

Miss Ada Ward gave a lecture in May under the auspices of the Chapter. On the afternoon preceeding the Regent entertained the members at her home when they met Miss Ward and a very pleasant social hour was spent.

A rummage sale held on May 17 and 18 and another in October gave pleasing financial results.

National Meeting

At the National Annual Meeting held in Toronto, the Regent, Mrs. Eastwood was the delegate. A most interesting and instructive report was given at the June meeting.

A service of prayer and intercession was held early in June in St. Paul's church. All the local chapters co-operating on this occasion,

On Empire Day the cemeteries were visited and the graves of departed soldiers decorated.

A booth was operated by the chapter at the Exhibition Grounds on Dominion Day with satisfactory results.

Following the usual custom, no meetings were held during July and August.

On the 24th of September several members attended the I.O.D.E. conference at Norwood and the following evening at our monthly meeting we were honored in having Mrs. Bruce, National Treasurer, Mrs. Birdsall of Norwood and Miss Boulton present all of whom addressed the meeting: Canon Davidson also spoke briefly.

At this meeting it was announced that a Junior Chapter called the Major George Bennett had been formed. It is now doing effective work.

During the influenza epidemic several members were privileged in being able to assist in the preparations of opening the Emergency hospital.

A Bazaar was held in the Y.M.C.A on December 6 and 7 which was well attended and yielded very gratifying results. A high tea was served the first evening and afternoon tea the second day.

The Regent donated a sweater which was drawn for and won by Mrs. Dolby.

At Mrs. Davidson's suggestion, the Chapter decided to undertake the maintenance of a cot in the Preventorium for the coming year.

In conclusion let me add that the sincere thanks of the Chapter are due all our friends, who have helped make the past year so successful.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

Kathleen B. [illegible] Jamieson,
Corresponding Secretary

Knitting Committee

To the Regent, Officers and members of the 57th Regimental Chapter, I.O.D.E. your committee begs to present the following annual report.

From February 25th 1918, to February 27th 1919:

Number of socks on hand at beginning of year	225
Number taken in during the year	869
	1094
Socks were sent to the following:
The Canadian War Contingent Association	132
	Pairs
The Queen Mary's Needlework Guild for Queen Mary's Silver Wedding Shower	100
The Navy League in October	150
Sergt.-Major Mills	25
The Navy League in January	126
To the Peterboro men in France	390
Number of socks on hand	171
	1094

3 pairs of socks donated by Mrs. Richard Hall.

3 pairs of socks donated by Mrs. Duncan Walker.

46 spindles of wool given out to the knitters.

Your committee wishes to thank all the knitters, who have made it possible for them to send overseas so many much needed socks.

Respectfully yours,
[illegible] Cottrell,
Convener Knitting Com.

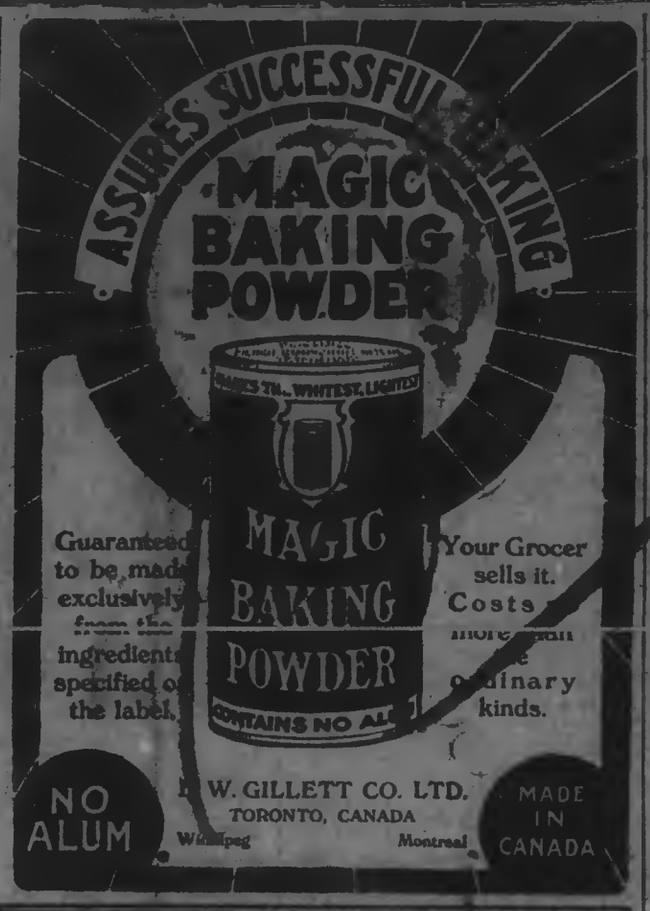
OPPOSE A PRESS BUREAU.

Some British Papers Object to the Plan Being Considered by Cabinet.

LONDON, Feb. 28.—The setting up of a department for public information is being considered by the British Government, Andrew Bonar Law, the Government leader, announced in the House of Commons. He said that attention would be given to the undesirability of committing the Government to propaganda on controversial questions, but he though there were many subjects on which information could be circulated.

The proposal to establish a Ministry of Information is already arousing unfavourable criticism. The Manchester Guardian says that unless such a department were virtually independent of the party in power it could only become a kind of Ministerial press agency which would supply newspapers gratis with camouflaged information.

The Daily News says: "We have had to tolerate spoon feeding of the public during the war, but that is no reason why we should permit this form of Prussianism becoming a permanent part of our public life."



Fifty Per Cent. of The Fruit Trees Were Killed Last Winter

Growers Are Urged to Plant New Orchards on a Large Scale

MEETING AT ST. KITTS

ST. CATHARINES, March 1.—Addressing the members of the Niagara District Fruit Growers' Associations at their annual convention here, President David Allan, of Grimsby, reminded them that the organization was in its 25th year, and made the claim that no other organization had done so much for the benefit of the district and of the fruit-growing industry in general. The object of the association was to educate and instruct and its aims had been achieved, but more work lay ahead. He asked for the best efforts of all present toward increasing the membership from its present number of 300 to a total of 1,000 at least, in order to provide backing for delegations that have to be sent from the association at different times to ask legislative concessions of the Government.

Oppose Increased Rates.

A present instance was the committee appointed to oppose the suggestion of an increased express rate which would affect fruit growers more severely than any other body of people if allowed to go into effect. The committee, he said, had had a very satisfactory interview with the Railway Board in Toronto on this express rate matter, and had been instructed by the executive of the association to continue to look after the matter, in the fruit-growers' interest, until it is settled. He said fruit growing was not all gold and glitter and that the growers had had a hard time during the war on account of the labour shortage, and that the climax was reached, in the winter injury that resulted from the extreme cold of last winter. He said that he believed 50 per cent. of the fruit trees in Ontario had been killed, and that this occurrence provided a very good reason for undertaking the planting of orchards on a large scale in the spring of 1919, a work which he was sure the Niagara District growers would not shirk. Nevertheless, he was not entirely in favour of Prof. Macoun's suggestion that the growing of apples should be more generally practised in the Niagara Peninsula, "as it is the only district of any extent in Canada that is distinctly suited to the production of peaches," and the growers in the section should take full advantage of their peculiar opportunities to supply the increasing demand for all tender fruits.

Farmers' Cost Accounting.

Dr. G. C. Creelman, who announced that he was going to devote his attention particularly to the work of the Ontario Agricultural College after his term as Commissioner of Agriculture for the Province, said that the farmers do not have enough good times. They had worked harder and more consistently than any other class, and from now on must hold themselves together to secure higher prices, if farming is to be a success in the future. He advised getting down to a system of cost accounting, so as to learn exactly what means and methods to use in order to provide for a profit. He said that the farm surveys had shown that among general farmers those who crowded their stables with live stock had been securing the best results in cash returns, and he asked, would it not be possible for fruit-growers to keep more live stock? He had found, while in England, that the fruit-growers there made a practice of wintering cattle on purchased feeds, and, in addition to a profit on the beef, had the manure to use on their fruit land.

Value of Good Roads.

Dr. Creelman said that there were three or four things that the farmers should speed up in securing aid, that one of the most important was good roads, which had now become a slogan with many people in the country. The men who lived away from a main road should get together to build a good road out to the main road, and until this is effected the full benefit of the main roads will not be secured, he said. In connection with the work of road building he emphasized the importance of drainage for maintaining the surface and sub-work of the good road when once constructed. He asked for a greater show of interest in the rural school problem, and said that whenever a deputation of farmers had approached him, in his capacity as acting Minister of Agriculture, with a hard-and-dried proposition for the improvement of country schools he had had no trouble in securing the interest of the Minister of Education in the matter. He advocated the more general teaching of agriculture and domestic science in the primary schools as a means of interesting the children in country life, and he pointed out the connection between good roads and a successful rural school system.

Hints on Packing.

Addresses on matters of particular interest to the growers were delivered by Prof. J. W. Crow on Winter Injury of Fruit in 1917-18; Prof. W. T. Macoun on Prospects for Increased Production of Apples in the Niagara Peninsula; Mr. W. A. Ross, of Vineland, on Some Fruit Pests of Last Season, and Mr. C. E. Nicholl, of Model City, N.Y., on Pruning and Growing Peaches.

Dominion Fruit Commissioner C. E. Baxter indicated the splendid opportunities for marketing fruit that exist now and can be increased by special attention to care in selecting and packing the crop by the growers and by more thorough distribution of the product. He cited the success of the advertising campaign for apples in 1914 as evidence of the possibilities for increasing a demand for fruits of all kinds. "If properly organized the marketing possibilities for Niagara fruits could only be limited by the total possible production of the section," he said.

As for the future demand for apples, quality would count for more than in the past in disposing of the crop.

A resolution was adopted calling attention of the Government to the loss occasioned by delay in carrying out the fumigation regulations regarding nursery stock at the border, and asking that the enforcement of the Act be discontinued, or if this were considered unpracticable, that the Government so aid and instruct its employees that nursery stock coming from the United States be immediately delivered to the fumigators on arrival and reshipped without delay.

The members of the association put on record their unqualified disapproval of the Daylight Saving Act, protested against its being put in force in the coming season.

Approval was expressed of the appointment of a permanent standing committee on experimental and investigational work in horticulture, and the committee was appointed as follows: A. Onslow, Niagara-on-the-Lake; G. A. Robertson, St. Catharines; Arthur Smith, Vineland; Hamilton Fleming, Grimsby; J. P. Bridgeman, Winona; J. A. Railton, Fruitland.

The meeting confirmed the resolution of the Ontario Fruit Growers at Toronto, asking for a fruit survey of the province, and requested that the Niagara Peninsula be selected as the starting point of the survey, that district being the most important fruit centre in Canada.

CATTLE MARKET

Strong active markets have been the feature of the cattle trade this week: Opening on Monday with a moderate run of cattle of fair average quality, and including a few very good loads of cars of export quality, for which there is still a good demand, prices held good and firm at the previous week-end advance of about 50 cents. This was improved upon in the succeeding markets this week, the general average prices for the entire week showing an advance of 25 to 50 cents on good butcher steers and heifers mixed and on choice heavy steers. The action of the market this week would seem to indicate that the big packing houses are preparing for an early resumption of exprt meat business with the Old Country. It has been officially announced, in fact, during this week that the British Board of Trade, at the request of the Food Controller, is issuing a general license permitting the importation into Britain of bacon, hams, and lard after March 10. It is expected that similar provision will also be made regarding the free importation of beef supplies.

The demand for butcher cattle for local and outside points in Canada, as well as shipment across the border, has been particularly active during this week, while supplies have been but moderately light. A number of outside buyers were observed in the market the latter part of the week. Under these conditions the market closed for the week decidedly strong.

In the line of small meats, calves have been especially active, and strong.

Lambs have been very firm, advancing about 50 cents early in the week, but weakening slightly in the closing market.

Union Stock Yards, Toronto, Monday, Feb. 24, 1919.

Receipts of live stock at the Union Stock Yards this week—803 cars, with 6,723 cattle, 557 calves, 6,283 hogs and 1,171 sheep and lambs.

BROADWAY "TERROR" TAKEN BY POLICE

NEW YORK, [illegible]—A brazen bandit hold-up at a chop house down Broadway in broad daylight, in which revolver shots were fired while pedestrians looked on in bewilderment, was followed here by the capture of a bandit suspect called by the police "The Unknown Terror," believed to be responsible for eighteen or twenty daring robberies in the theatre district bounded by 42nd street and Columbus Circle.

The prisoner, Charles McGovern, alias William Smith, alias John Ryan, wore a soldier's uniform and was armed with a revolver filled with dum-dum bullets.

Ruth Receives the Congratulations of Her Friends

CHAPTER CXXXII.

Arthur Mandel had seen the announcement that Brian had been advanced and decorated for his bravery under fire; and his heart sank. He knew something of the glamour such an action must naturally have for Ruth—as it would to most women. Not that he begrudged his country the service Brian had done; or that he thought with anything but pleasure that a gallant officer's life had been saved by his act. But, in a way, it seemed to make Ruth seem farther away. His winning her more doubtful.

Ruth heard from Brian. Their letters crossed. He told very simply of what he had done to win his advance mostly making light of his danger, but showing in every line his gratitude that he had been able to save the life of the officer.

Ruth showed the letter to her aunt. "A very nice letter, Ruth. It shows much fine feeling," she had commented after reading it. "He did a very brave action."

It pleased Ruth enormously to think that her aunt praised Brian in any way, for anything he might have done. The lady's prejudices were so strong, she had so objected to him, that Ruth took it as a good omen that she spoke kindly of him now.

Mr. and Mrs. Roberts had to run in that night to discuss the wonderful news and congratulate Ruth that Brian had come through in safety. Mrs. Curtiss also called up and told how wonderful she and Mr. Curtiss thought him. All her friends save only Arthur Mandel—whom she had come to consider friend as well as employer—were more than kind. Even Mrs. Livingstone wrote Ruth a little note telling her that she sympathized with her in her joy.

"It's queer he doesn't say something about it," Ruth said to herself the next morning after he had finished talking of the orders in the morning mail. There was a feeling of disappointment which amounted almost to resentment that Mandel had said nothing to her. Surely he knew.

But about eleven o'clock he passed her desk on his way out.

"I see Mr. Hackett has been distinguishing himself," he said to Ruth.

"Yes, isn't it wonderful! I am very proud of him."

"And with reason," was the reply, accompanied by a stabbing hurt of which Ruth never dreamed.

"It is wonderful to think he came out of it 'without a scratch as he expressed it," she returned. Then; "I hope it doesn't make him reckless."

"No—I don't think you need worry about that. A really good soldier is never foolishly reckless."

"Thank you." Ruth was very pleased at the implication.

That night she told her aunt what Mandel had said.

"Poor fellow," Mrs. Clayborne remarked.

"Why 'poor fellow'?" Ruth asked with a laugh. "I know of no one to whom that remark is less applicable."

"There are many reasons to feel sorry for him. He is a man eminently fitted to make some woman very happy; to be very happy himself in doing so. Yet he leads a lonely bachelor life. Isn't that reason enough to 'poor fellow' him?"

"I hardly think so, Aunt Louisa. He surely could have married, had he desired. He is very good-looking, has money; and besides he has a most attractive personality. No, I imagine he remains single because he wants to—is queer that way."

"That, or he either hasn't met the woman he cares for enough to make her his wife—or she is already married."

The remark went home. Ruth flushed crimson, and at once changed the subject. She knew Mandel liked her, she hoped he did not care too much. So he thought of him in such a way that she would hate to make him suffer; or know he was unhappy.

Her aunt noticed the blush and misinterpreted it.

"It's a shame they aren't together and happy," she said to herself. "They are exactly suited to one another. Then: But who knows what may happen? Ruth is young."

Then, before they had hardly accustomed themselves to thinking of Brian as a lieutenant, came other news.

THE DOUBLE RED CROSS.

Emblem of Anti-Tuberculosis Workers All Over the World.

The double red cross, the symbol of the war against tuberculosis, was first adopted as the symbol of the International Anti-tuberculosis association in Berlin in October, 1902. The proposal of the symbol was Dr. G. Sersiron of Paris, who is now associated secretary of L'Association Centrale Francaise Contre la Tuberculose.

The emblem is being used by anti-tuberculosis workers in every part of the world, even in Iceland, India, South Africa, Labrador, Japan, China and the Philippines. The double red cross is similar in shape to a cross used frequently in the Greek Catholic churches and also to the Lorraine cross of France. All of the arms of the cross are pointed, the two cross arms being of the same length. The width of the cross is taken as the unit in determining the proportions. The length of the lower arm is seven units, the arms are three units on either side, the point above the arms two and a half units and the distance between the arms one and a half units. These measurements hold good for any size.

In the United States over 1,200 anti-tuberculosis associations and committees, nearly 550 sanitariums and hospitals, 400 dispensaries and about 200 open air schools, besides a number of other organizations, are using the double red cross as their emblem. Wherever it is seen it means war against tuberculosis.

Norway's Tree Planters.

Founded in 1900, the Bergens Tree Planting society, Norway, has undertaken a task which will require many years and large expenditures of money and labor to complete, as it proposes to cover the mountain sides and the untillable acres of western Norway with forests, as they were centuries ago. Assisted by wealthy contributors and timely government aid, it has excellent prospects of succeeding. Since the society started, thirteen years ago, 36,000,000 young trees have been produced, covering about 14,000 acres within the borders of the two Bergenhus counties.

A Curious Legacy.

The editor of a Swiss newspaper, the Schweitzerische Volkswacht, has just had a legacy of $20 per annum left him by a man whom he had never even heard of. The clause of the will containing the bequest is rather a curious one, running as follows: "On Jan. 1 and Aug. 1 of each year a sum of $10 shall be paid to the editor of the Schweitzerische Volkswacht on condition that he shall drink on the two days above mentioned a glass of beer in honor of the deceased. This legacy shall hold good until the death of the testator."

Destitution in Near East Supplies Great Problem And Also Provides Lesson

DESTITUTION in the Near East is ably described in the Christian Science Monitor. It says the statement made recently to the eastern bureau of that paper by Dr. James L. Barton, of the American Committee for Armenian and Syrian Relief, as to the present and future needs of the committee, if the destitution prevailing in the Near East is to be adequately met, or even mitigated, is deserving of the utmost attention. It is not only that the call to relieve the necessities of those peoples is urgent to the last degree. The matter is important also because any just appreciation of the situation cannot fail to bring with it a fuller realization of the obligation which is of necessity being laid upon the Allies to relieve the distresses of the war. There is a call that this work of relief shall be done on an unparalleled scale, and those who will contemplate the situation with any care will recognize the fact that the call will be more insistent than ever now that the war is over. The belief that war conditions came to end over night, on the conclusion of peace, is a misconception that persists, and, if for no other reason, because they do much to dissipate this belief the figures afforded by Dr. Barton are peculiarly valuable.

It is, however, the immediate appeal of Dr. Barton's statement which must claim first place. The figures are eloquent. In Asia Minor alone, Dr. Barton estimates that there are some 3,950,000 refugees, of whom about 935,000 are within reach of the distributing forces of the committee. These people are, for the most part, destitute; that is to say, they are without food, clothing, or houses, and many thousands of them are wandering about a countryside which has been swept clean of every edible root, or are crowded into towns and villages where only the wealthy can obtain food. To meet the most pressing needs of these refugees will cost about $60,000,000 a year, and that when the work is carried out in the most economical and far-sighted way, insuring that every beneficiary shall do as much as he can toward his own maintenance, and that he shall become self-supporting at the earliest possible moment.

When this is done, however, only the veriest fringe of the matter has been touched. "We must take a look forward," Dr. Barton says, "into the development of the next twelve months, and there is every reason to believe that political, military, and other changes will, within the year render accessible the larger portion of all the 3,000,000 that are just now inaccessible. Unless we are at this time to save and provide for this large number. The cost of doing this will be $200,000,000 a year."

Now, it is well to face the facts of the situation just as they stand, the Monitor says. The urgent needs of the Near East are pretty accurately known, but the destitution of the Near East must be only a very small part of the destitution obtaining throughout immense areas of Europe, areas concerning the conditions in which little or nothing is known. From Russia, Poland, however, from Bosnia-Herzegovana, from Serbia and Roumania, from immense sections of European Russia, to say nothing of Belgium and Northern France, something more than rumors have come showing a state of deliberately imposed destitution and deliberately created desolation such as the world has never known since the days, seven centuries ago, when the Mongol hordes swept out of Asia and over Europe, spreading ruin and rapine broadcast.

It is not easy to grasp what this means. But if the cost of ministering to the needs of the comparatively small number of refugees in the Near East is, as it is, one-fourth of the entire national expenditure of a country like the United Kingdom in peace time, some idea may be obtained of the cost which will be involved in meeting the needs of that vast army of destitute which at the present time is inarticulate.

Now this is, of course, very far from being an argument for pessimism. It is, however, an argument for a fuller recognition of the great fact that "the old order is not passing; it is already passed"; that the world will no more be able to return to pre-war conditions than the beanstalk can return to its seed, that after the cost of the war will come the cost of reconstruction, and that whilst this is being met the great work of revaluing values, in the true What exactly the result will be, no What exactly the result will be, on one can precisely say, but toward the achievement of the best result the importance of facing facts cannot be overestimated.

costly mistake. The Government auditor declined to sign the audit, and nearly three months were spent by the office staff going through the whole of the rate accounts, but the overpaid threepence was not traced. Eventually an appeal had to be made to the auditor, as the work of the department was being seriously held up, and the accounts were passed subject to the consent of the Overseers, which has been given. It is estimated that it cost several hundred pounds endeavouring to trace this overpaid threepence.

Chronic Diseases Take Hold Slowly

Kidney and Bladder Troubles don't attack you suddenly. Chronic diseases of these organs are generally the results of neglect. Nature gives you plenty of warning when your Kidneys are out of order and need assistance; you notice a dull pain in the back; you are dizzy, have headaches, feel languid, tired and lifeless.

There is no mistaking the symptoms, and when Nature warns you—obey—or later you will regret it.

Putting off never cures. Gin Pills do. At the first sign of Kidney or Bladder Trouble, buy a box of Gin Pills and take them. They will help your Kidneys to perform their proper function and renew your previous strength and vigor.

Among our hundreds of testimonials is one from Mr. B. C. David, King's Co., N.B. Mr. David writes:

"I was suffering from a dreadful lame back and hips, so much so that I could hardly straighten up. I got a box of Gin Pills and they helped me immediately. I have continued to take Gin Pills, and now the pains in both back and back are gone. I shall always recommend Gin Pills to my friends and other sufferers."

Mr. David's case is only one of the many in which Gin Pills have brought immediate relief. Sufferers from Kidney or Bladder trouble should heed what has been done in such cases and try Gin Pills.

RAT PLAGUE IN ENGLAND.

LONDON.— London and the other great cities of the country would pay willingly to-day the demands of a modern Piper of Hamelin who would relieve their warehouses from the present plague of rats.

Marsh rats have increased lately by millions, and a great migration is in progress from the country to the town, and the loss arising from damage by rats is piling up rapidly.

While a portion of the increase is due largely to the war and the absence of preventive measures, there is no doubt that the regulation prohibiting rat-baiting is the main cause for the present condition.

William Jones, the well-known London rat catcher, stated that before the order prohibiting rat baiting was made it was worth his while to spend a night or two on the marshes outside London for a bag of 300 live rats, which would find a ready market on Sunday morning at Club Row, Spitalfields, at eight cents apiece.

Since the prohibition this rat catcher has sought his livelihood in established buildings, where his attentions may be occupied for several days in clearing out a mere handful of rodents. He estimates the annual loth to the country from rats' depredations at more than $25,000,000.

The City of London Corporation has just appointed an inspector of vermin, with powers to take all measures to cope with the plague.

READY TO HEAR CASE, BUT PRISONER HAD KILLED HIMSELF

NEW YORK, Feb. 27.— Investigation into circumstances surrounding the suicide of Edward Sweeney, seventeen years old, in a cell in the Jefferson Market prison last Wednesday, which was revealed only yesterday, when a charge against the youth was being heard by the Grand Jury, has been begun by District Attorney Swann. Neither the District Attorney's office nor the police learned of the suicide until yesterday.

Sweeney was arrested last Wednesday on complaint of Nora Jankowski, fifteen, of No. 440 West Thirtieth street, and after a preliminary hearing was remanded to the prison, pending action by the Grand Jury. Sweeney was a driver and lived at No. 444 Broadway, Bayonne, N.J. Detective John Dunnigan, who arrested Sweeney, and others appeared yesterday in the District Attorney's office for questioning before the Grand Jury.

Moses R. Ryttenberg, Assistant District Attorney, in charge of the case, was astounded when Dunnigan, the first witness, said:

"I didn't think you were going on with this case. Sweeney killed himself a few days ago.

Where Sweeney obtained a revolver is a question of interest to Mr. Swann and Mr. Ryttenberg. Prisoners, they said, are supposed to be searched upon entering the prison. James A. Hamilton, Commissioner of Correction, also has begun an enquiry into the case.

John Boekel, head keeper of the prison, said that Sweeney shot himself in the stomach at nine o'clock at night and died the next day in Bellevue Hospital. Boekel said he was not on duty the night Sweeney shot himself, and could not account for the failure to notify the District Attorney's office or the police of the Charles street station, a few blocks from the prison.

Word of Sweeney's death was received at the office of the Medical Examiner in the Municipal Building from the hospital, but no details of the shooting or place of occurrence were contained in the report. A similar report, it is said, was sent to the homicide bureau of the District Attorney's office.

"While the suicide is a matter for the attention of the Commissioner of Correction," Mr. Swann said, "this office is ready to inquire into acts of criminal neglizence, if there were any. It is strange that this office was not notified of Sweeney's act. I have not heard the details of the suicide."

A FEW DON'TS FOR BUSY WOMEN

Don't lose your temper. It is of far more importance to keep good tempered and undisturbed even if things do go a little wrong, than to set the nerves of the whole family on edge because of some omission.

Never use water which has been standing over night in the tea kettle. In the morning fill it with fresh water, boil and use at once.

If copper or brass is very dirty, don't worry, but put some fine salt on a plate, dip into it a cut lemon and rub on the metal. The strong acid will remove the worst stain.

Don't allow graniteware to dry over a hot fire, as the heat in expanding may cause the outside to scale.

And, above all, don't cry over spilled milk, or lose heart because to-morrow's task looms large. "Sufficient unto the day" was written for you and me.

A SPLENDID MEDICINE FOR THE CHILDREN

Baby's Own Tablets are the best medicine any mother can give her little ones. They are a mild laxative which quickly regulate the bowels and stomach and are guaranteed to be entirely free from any injurious drugs. Concerning them Mrs. A. D. Weed, Loreburn, Sask., writes:—"Baby's Own Tablets have given me more satisfaction than anything else I have ever given my children. They are easily taken, always work well and though I have given quite a few to my baby they seem to work as well now as at first, which is something other laxatives seldom do. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Americans Are Exonerated of Many Crime

Apaches of Paris Were the Guilty Ones, 'Tis Said— Dressed in U. S. Uniforms

American Soldiers Have Been Given the Best Recommendation.

PARIS.—The apaches of all nationalities dressed in American uniforms were mainly responsible for the acts of violence which have caused broadcast publicity to be given to an alleged American crime wave in Paris, was shown by an investigation conducted by the Associated Press.

It was further ascertained that assaults and holdups are infinitesimal in number as compared withthe published figures of the crime wave, existing nearly exclusively in the vivid imagination of sensational local newspapers.

An opportunity was presented to verify at police headquarters the figures respecting crimes during last December. Thirty-four murders charged to Americans were discredited and dwindled to two; 234 holdups and assaults were reduced by 80 per cent.

There have been numerous fistic encounters, however, but they were mostly between Americans, old-fashioned rough-and-tumble brawls, in which arrests are rarely made in any American cities. For the most part the pugnacious individuals were merely requested by the police to go home, or a humorous policeman would advise them: "If you want to fight go to Europe."

Brigadier-General William W. Harts, of the United States army, in a statement, says:

"The reports concerning the large number of murders of American soldiers in Paris are untrue. They are greatly exaggerated. The number of military police in Paris has been increased merely because of the greater number of soldiers passing through the city, not because of unusual disorder. he statistics show that the American soldiers are maintaining their high standard of discipline in every detail, wherever they may be."

The Paris Chief of Police, M. Monton, said he was greatly pleased at the co-operation of the American detectives, who have recently arrived here. "We have established a liaison between the officers of the American provost marshal and police headquarters," he added. "The French and American police are working in harmony."

Chief Monton declined to make a statement on the extent of crime, but said that acts de of some thefts of automobiles to the prejudice of the American army, American soldiers did not deserve the hard reputation which had gone abroad through various reports.

A high official at police headquarters, referring to the department's records previously mentioned and the street brawls, said:

"Not all of these may be charged to Americans, as there have been many cases in which the similarity of the uniforms of Australians and Americans has led to the Americans being blamed for fights and holdups, in which the Australians were engaged or committed. There have been some arrests by the British military police of Australians for misdemeanors and crimes, for which at first Americans were thought to be guilty. There are also many men, who are engaged in labour at the various American departments, recruited from among workingmen of all nationalities and who were discharged after the armistice. They were wearing discarded American uniforms and in several cases they have been found guilty of holdups.

"Also, our own Apaches, strong in the belief of immunity through the popularity of the American uniform, have obtained by hook or crook some of these uniforms and have gone about their work in earnest.

"Surely there are some real Americans guilty, but the percentage is not nearly as great as that published."

THIN, NERVOUS PEOPLE NEED BITRO-PHOSPHATE

Guaranteed to Put on Firm, Healthy Flesh and to Increase Strength, Vigour and Nerve Force.

Weak, thin people—men or women—are nearly always nervous wrecks, thus conclusively proving that weakness, debility and neurasthenia are almost invariably due to nerve starvation. Feed your nerves and all these symtoms due to nerve starvation will disappear.

Eminent specialists state that the best nerve food is an organic phosphate known among druggists as Bitro-Phosphate, a five-grain tablet of which should be taken with each meal. Being a genuine nerve builder and not a stimulant or habit-forming drug, Bitro-Phosphate can be safely taken by the weakest and most delicate sufferer, and the results following its use are often simply astonishing.

Weak, tired people regain strength and vigour; thinness and angularity give way to plumpness and curves; sleep returns to the sleepless; confidence and cheerfulness replace debility and gloom; dull eyes become bright and pale, sunken cheeks regain the pink glow of health. Bitro-Phosphate, the use of which is inexpensive, also wonderfully promotes the assimilation of food, so much so that many people report marked gains in weight in a few weeks.

Bitro is sold by McDermid & Jury in Peterborough and most all good druggists.

CAUTION — Although bitro-phosphate is unsurpassed for relieving nervousness, sleeplessness and general weakness, it should not, owing to its remarkable flesh-growing properties, be used by anyone who does not desire to put on flesh.

INSURANCE CO. RECOVERS.

Man Convicted of Arson Now in Lunatic Asylum.

TORONTO, Feb. 28.— Chief Justice Falconbridge has ratified a settlement whereby the committee of William Tordiff pays the Dominion Fire Insurance Co. the sum of $500 in settlement of an action. R. S. Cassels appeared for the company and E. C. Cattanach for the Official Guardian. Tordiff was sentenced to the penitentiary on charges of arson, near Bowmanville, but was later removed to an asylum. The company sued to recover the insurance which had been paid over before the crime was detected.

CROSS, FEVERISH CHILD IS BILIOUS OR CONSTIPATED

Look, Mother! See if tongue is coated; breath hot or stomach sour.

"California Syrup of Figs" can't harm tender stomach, liver, bowels.

Every mother realizes, after giving her children "California Syrup of Figs," that this is their ideal laxative, because they love its pleasant taste and it thoroughly cleanses the tender little stomach, liver and bowels without griping.

When cross, irritable, feverish, or breath is bad, stomach sour, look at the tongue, mother! If coated, give a teaspoonful of this harmless "fruit laxative," and in a few hours all the foul, constipated waste, sour bile and undigested food passes out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. When the little system is full of cold, throat sore, has stomach-ache, diarrhoea, indigestion, colic, remember, a good "inside cleansing" should always be the first treatment given.

Millions of mothers keep "California Syrup of Figs" handy; they know a teaspoonful to-day saves sick child to-morrow. Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has directions for babies, children of all ages and grown-ups printed on the bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here, so don't be fooled. Get the genuine, made by "California Fig Syrup Company."

340,197 OUT OF WORK.

Number of Unemployed Increased 18,412 in a Week.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28.— Figures made public here by the Department of Labour show that there has been no improvement in the unemployment situation during the last week.

Reports of the United States Employment Service for the current week show a total amount of unemployment of 340,197, or an increase over last week of 18,412.

Conditions in Connecticut remain about the same as last week. The following surpluses of labour are reported: Bridgeport, 7,500; Derby, 1,000; Hartford, 2,400 which is an increase of 1,500 over last week; Middletown, 400; Norwich, 2,000; New Haven, 6,500, which is an increase of 500 over last week; New London, 200; Stamford, 350, and Meriden, 1,500, which is an increase of 200 over last week. The iron and steel and non-ferrous industries are still laying off men. At Putnam the textile workers are on strike. In Massachusetts the conditions remain about the same as last week, with heavy surpluses in Boston, Worcester, and Lynn. The clearance telegrams show 23,126 textile workers out of employment in the State.

IT'S "Mc," Not "Mac."

OTTAWA, Feb. 28. — The proper spelling of the new sessional leader of the Liberal party is "McKenzie." The name has had various spellings in so-called official records. "Who's Who" has it spelled "Mackenzie," the Parliamentary Guide the same way; the Canadian Press Service has been spelling it "MacKenzie."

The Opposition leader has settled the matter by spelling it himself—"McKenzie."

Zeitung Says Wilson Has Failed

Frankfurter Zeitung Thinks the League Will Never Be Realized.

THE HAGUE. — President Wilson has again left Europe, says the Frankfurter Zeitung, and one may ask whether the great hopes which he himself and the greater part of the world built on his presence at the Peace Conference have been fulfilled. It observes that the "ultra-severe armistice conditions" which Foch "forced Wilson to approve," and the Allies' attitude in the matter of German prisoners, as well as the terrors of the blockade, give the answer. The Zeitung expresses the belief that even Wilson's plan for the League of Nations will be impossible and unjust for Germany and other nations outside of the five privileged powers. It is difficult, it says, to understand how Wilson, a man who declares that he stands for right and justice, can consider this plan worth while. It thinks that the scheme as it stands to-day does not promise a League of Nations, but guarantees France in her policy of alliances. President Wilson, the Zeitung continues, presented the plan as the result of the labours of the League Commission, and it is now reported that he disapproves it, which, however, he would be obliged to do if he still upheld the programme he had when he left America.

"When Wilson left America, it is clear that he went forth to a difficult battle," it observes.

Then it remarks that the Americans are about to realize their wish to deliver food and other necessities to Germany at reasonable prices and get a firm foothold in the country. It says that the question whether the President has achieved his purpose will be asked not only by Germany, but by the neutrals, and first of all by the Americans themselves. The majority of Americans, it says, has not supported Mr. Wilson's League ideas, so that it may be assumed that the last word has not yet been spoken.

Anyway, the Zeitung asserts, America's power is waning, and a new power is gaining. The path of international Socialism is a difficult one, it observes, for the President of a people brought up in capitalism to tread.

The Westliche Zeitung, however, speaks of Wilson's "glorious European triumph," asserting that when history is written, January 15, 1919, will stand out as the summit of that triumph, since that was the day of the real acceptance of the Wilsonian League idea. This paper says that the President has cured the Allied countries, but really brought his League plans in his portfolio from America.

It says Germany's future looks dark; but "let us hope that at the conference or later many provisions of the League directed against Ger-

ONE WAY TO DO IT.

It was Christmas week and the car was crowded to the limit. "Here you," bawled the conductor angrily. "You rang up a fare! Do that again and I'll put you off the car."

The little man jammed in the middle of the car at once rang up another fare. Thereupon the conductor stopped the car, forced his way through the jam, and projected the offender through the crowd and to the edge of the platform.

"Thanks!" said the little man, "here's your dime. I did not see any other way to get through the crowd!"

Took Severe Cold ON HIS LUNGS

COUGHED PHLEGM and BLOOD.

On the first appearance of a cough or cold, do not neglect it, but get rid of it at once before it has a chance to grow worse, and gets settled on the lungs, causing bronchitis, pneumonia and other serious lung troubles.

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup will cure the cough or cold on its first inception and perhaps save you years of suffering.

Mr. G. F. Stratychuk, Canora, Sask., writes: "Last winter I took a most severe cold on my lungs and was coughing up phlegm and blood most of the time. I had the cough for over two months and took a great deal of different medicines, but found no relief from them. At last a friend advised me to take Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, which I did, and it gave me great relief in a very short time, and to-day I am enjoying good health again."

The many cures that Wood's Norway Pine Syrup has achieved of its cures of coughs and colds has caused many so-called "pine" preparations to be put on the market, which do not contain any pine whatever. See that you get the genuine when you ask for it.

Put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; price 25c and 50c. Manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

U.S. "Y" WORKERS TO PRISON

But Most of the Embezzled Money Has Been Recovered.

PARIS, Feb. 28.—The three former Young Men's Christian Association workers who were arrested in January for the embezzlement of funds, have been found guilty by a court-martial and sentenced to imprisonment. George B. Schoeffel, of Rochester, N.Y., was sentenced to five years; Rev. H. B. Atkins, of Texas, and J. Mansfield, formerly of New York, were given ten years each.

E. C. Carter, secretary of the Y. M. C.A., with the American army, issued a statement on January 14, after the arrest of Schoeffel, Atkins and Mansfield, that the misappropriations amounted to $38,940. The irregularities took place at Toul and Brest. Mr. Carter said that a greater part of the stolen money had been recovered.

A Fine Car—Low Priced

WE could build a Gray-Dort car to sell at a lower price. But we don't believe you want such a car—a car whose only merit is cheapness.

We believe you would rather pay a fair price for a good light car. And in buying the Gray-Dort you get the finest light car that engineering skill and high-priced materials can build.

More than that—you get this fine car at a really low price. Efficiency in the factory and big production make it possible.

We have built the Gray-Dort for the man who wants a car of [illegible] performance, free from trouble, comfortable and commodious, equipped for care-free driving, and unquestionably handsome.

The touring car is $1,245; the Gray-Dort Special—the car with added refinement and extra equipment, is $135 extra; there are also the coupe and the sedan. All prices f.o.b. Chatham; all prices subject to change without notice.

THE HOME CIRCLE COLUMN

Pleasant Evening Reveries—A Column Dedicated to Tired Mothers as They Join the Home Circle at Eventide

MOTHER

Alas! how little do we appreciate our mother's tender love while she is with us, though dutiful and devoted to her. After her lips are closed for ever, and we know she will never more lead us by her counsel, cheer us along the pathway when thorns pierce us, shadows gather over us, then we turn memory's pages and feel that if we only had mother back how many rays of sunshine we would bring into her heart. So many kindnesses we might have shown her if we had only known she was going away so soon to return no more.
How often these thoughts will pass through your mind after your sweet old mother leaves you, if she has not even now passed over the Dark River
Yet oft as I look backward o'er the long, long waste of years,
My heart is filled with sudden pain,
my eyes grow dim with tears,
As I recall with vain regret full many a secret smart;
How oft in times of waywardness I grieved her tender heart.
While these thoughts come our mother's tender love comforts. We feel that while we have grieved her many times, her love wrapped the "mantle of charity" about us. This is comfort. To those who are blest with a mother let us beg that you treat her with the tenderest care. For no matter how you treat her when she leaves you will feel many regrets.

THE CHURCH AND THE COMMUNITY

There is nothing that speaks better for a community than to have in its midst a number of good churches. They reveal the standard of the citizenry of their community as nothing else can. They reveal a high standard of morals and living. Their influence, though it may seem small, is a great factor in upholding the laws and in putting down all evil. They have an indirect influence on every business in the community, and this influence is the very life of the community's business. The presence of the churches increases the value of all the real estate round about them. They help to attract settlers and to draw trade. Have you ever thought how few people would want to live in our community if we had no churches?

Besides all the commercial influence that the churches have, they maintain a high standard of morals and righteous living. This is the most important phase of the modern church. It is not so much that churches can, of themselves, save people, but that the churches by standing only for right, help men to live nobler lives. It is the ideals for which the church stands that makes it a power in upbuilding the standard of citizenry. Certain evils and practices would be much more common if it were not for the fact that the church frowns upon such improper conduct.

Our community should be proud of its churches. The high standard of our citizenry must be attributed to their presence more than to any other one factor. Their influence in building up our community cannot be measured. They have been a factor for good and in the future may they exert even a more powerful influence in behalf of justice and right.

It is not pleasant to record the truth that there are mothers, who have sacrificed motherhood to worldly ambition, and the most happy women on earth are those who have set aside filial ties in order to live lives of social frivolity, and the time comes to all such when the bloom of youth foresakes the cheek, the fire of youth dies out of the eye. Such often turn to their homes for sympathy and love, only to find that they, too, have vanished, and when it is too late the sad truth dawns upon them that they are dishonored and unloved. The path of duty is the only safe path, let it be ever so thorny, and the only safe guide-board points to the Christian home.

There is no surer safeguard against the temptations that come to young men and women than a love for home. It has brought back and held many a wonderer in a safe place. It is something not only to love home but to know that you love it—and to know that you are happier at home than in any other spot on earth.

AS FAR AS I KNOW

"As far as I know," said a person one night,
"There is naught in this world but what is just right;
I have all I want to both eat and wear,
The flowers I gather are fragrant and fair,
The birds in the trees always sing a glad song,
And as far as I know there is nothing wrong.

"All people I know are loyal and kind,
And I am contented in body and mind;
I read about folks who are awfully bad,
About children that quarrel and people who fight,
But as far as I know everything is all right.

"I read there are people who do many things
That on the whole are the worst kind of sin-
Like women are wicked and men are untrue."
And sinfulness pranceth society thro',
But as far as I know—as far as I know—
I cannot affirm that these stories are true."

The person that said this as far as she knew
Was a child of six years, and to her it was true;
O, what would we give could we all say to-night,
There is naught in this world but what is just right!
That we have all we want to eat and to wear,
And that justice and goodness abound everywhere.

Government Divided On Continuing Taxes

Attitude of Cabinet Following Carvell's Utterances is a Matter of Speculation

OTTAWA, Feb. 28.—At least one member of the Government has come out openly against a continuation of the Business Profits Tax, and, in doing so has brought to the front an issue which has many ramifications and which goes deeply into the heart of some of the problems worrying the world to-day.

Mr. Carvell is the Minister who doesn't favor this method of taxation. In the debate on the address he said, "I see a very grave difficulty in continuing the Business Profits Tax. It was all right during war time, but in peace time it is an improper method of taxation." Mr. Carvell emphasized the fact that he was speaking personally, "and not in any way for the Government.

"During war time," continued Mr. Carvell "men make tremendous profits, and should hand back a portion to the Government. But upon the restoration of peace I have some doubt whether industry will flourish, whether men will invest their capital to any extent in carrying on business if they see that a very great proportion of their profits is going to be taken away from them. Parliament will have to consider very carefully this question."

It is understood that certain members of the Government are as strongly in favor of the continuation of the business profits tax as Mr. Carvell is opposed to it and that the attitude of the Cabinet as a whole has not been determined. The public now know at least the direction in which Mr. Carvell's influence will turn.

Although it is indisputable that many business men, probably the majority, feel and say that the tax should be removed, yet there is a considerable body of opinion, watching the development of the public temper here and in other countries, which is convinced that the retention of the impost is not necessary from a financial standpoint, but that it is in accord with the humanitarian and social conception of industry, contrasted with what they disdain as the antiquated and selfish view of ultra-individualism.

In an era when the whole morality of private profits is under discussion these observers say it would not make for stability, but rather for an extreme following in the wake of reaction, to allow big business to keep its profits without contributing a share to the State by a direct business profits tax.

How to Incentive.

Their opponents claim, with Carvell, that taking away the incentive of adequate private profit would discourage individual initiative, which, in turn, would have an unfavorable influence on industry and employment.

Mr. Carvell also discussed the income tax. He thought the scope of this tax should be widely extended, "upward and downward." He would put a tax, "not a very big one," on anyone with an income of $1,000.

PRINCETON STUDENTS WOULD ELIMINATE GREEK AND LATIN.

PRINCETON, N.J., Feb. 28.—The Undergraduate Council of the University, which is the mouthpiece for the opinions of the students, has presented to the college authorities a set of resolutions embodying radical views on changes in the university curriculum. The students maintain that the present classical requirements for examination annually divert to other institutions large numbers of preparatory school boys. The students urge:

"The elimination of Greek as a requirement for entrance to the 'A. B. course; the elimination of Latin as a requirement of the Litt. B. and B. S. courses, and the remodelling of the undergraduate course of study so as to eliminate requirements to one classical study," and the substitution of subjects more vitally related to the students' life work."

LADIES! DARKEN YOUR GRAY HAIR

Use Grandma's Sage Tea and Sulphur Recipe and Nobody Will Know.

The use of Sage and Sulphur for restoring faded, gray hair to its natural colour dates back to our grandmother's time. She used it to keep her hair beautifully dark, glossy and attractive. Whenever her hair took on that dull, faded or streaky appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect.

But brewing at home is messy and out-of-date. Nowadays by asking at any drug store for a 50 cent bottle of Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get this famous old preparation improved by the addition of other ingredients, which can be depended upon to restore natural colour and beauty to the hair.

A well-known local druggist says it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, it becomes beautifully dark and glossy.

Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is a delightful toilet requisite for those who desire a more youthful appearance. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

HUN HELMETS HELD HERE PUZZLE FOR THE LAWYERS.

WASHINGTON, D.C., Feb. 28.—Eighty-five thousand captured German helmets, sent to this country by General Pershing for Victory Liberty Loan advertising, and dumped in a huge pile at the Bush Terminal piers, Brooklyn, sent Government lawyers prying into the law books to find some statute under which the "iron hats" might be given away.

At first the War Department said the loan managers' scheme for using the helmets as prizes for the best records in each district could not be carried out because the Government by-law was forbidden from giving away materials. Then Frank R. Wilson, director of loan publicity, thought of an old law permitting the Government to give away "inventions of no value." Now War Department lawyers are checking up on the law.

Meanwhile, a long distance telephone message to the Treasury from the piers said souvenir hunters from the neighbourhood are nibbling into the pile of helmets without awaiting the lawyers' decision.

WOMAN'S RIGHT TO GOOD HEALTH

Most Troubles Afflicting Women Are Due to Weak, Watery Blood

Most Troubles Afflicting Women Are Due to Weak, Watery Blood.

To every woman belongs the right to enjoy a healthy, active, happy life, yet nine out of every ten suffer years of agony, usually from some form of bloodlessness. That is why one sees on every side pale, thin cheeks, dull eyes and drooping figures—sure signs of headaches, weak backs, aching limbs and uncertain health. All weak, suffering women should win the right to be well by refreshing their weary bodies with the new, rich, red blood that promptly transforms them into healthy attractive women. This new, rich, red blood is supplied in abundance by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, which reaches every organ and every nerve in the body. Through the use of these pills thousands of women have found a prompt cure when suffering from anaemia, indigestion, heart palpitation, rheumatism, general weakness, and those ailments from which women alone suffer. There is no part of this broad Dominion in which you will not find some former sufferer who has regained health and strength through the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Among the thousands of women who bear testimony to the value of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills is Mrs. W. Fergusen, Plattsville, Ont., who says: "After the birth of my second baby I was left very weak, and was steadily growing thinner and more bloodless. As time went on I became so run down that my friends thought I was in a decline. I tried different medicines, but none helped me until I was advised to take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I began taking them and it was not long in finding that they were helping me, and by the time I had taken a half dozen boxes I got back my new health. I had increased in weight, my color returned and I was again enjoying my usual health. You may be sure when opportunity offers I will gladly recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills."

You can get Dr. Williams' Pink Pills through any medicine dealer or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

GLASS OF SALTS CLEANS KIDNEYS

If your Back is Aching or Bladder bothers, drink lots of water and eat less meat.

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore, don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys and irritate the entire urinary tract. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean, by flushing them with a mild, harmless salts which removes the body's urinous waste and stimulates them to their normal activity. The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In 24 hours they strain from it 500 grains of acid and waste so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active.

Drink lots of water—you can't drink too much; also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate clogged kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this, also keep up the water drinking, and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and backache.

BALLAD OF IFS AND BUTS.

I might have been a millionaire
And led an autocratic life,
With power and wealth beyond compare,
Had I but married me a wife
(Also I might be doing time
For leading a career of crime.)

I might have been the president
And over all the land held sway,
Not a suburban resident
Who's got to labor every day.
In politics I might have risen.
(But, then, I might have gone to prison.)

In certain of the scientific
I might have shone had I not wed,
Invented new appliances
Or found microbes that make men dead.
(I'm glad I didn't any how.
The world is much too lonely now.)

I might have been a dramatist
Or some such literary guy
Or would be epigrammatist,
Wearing a most outrageous tie.
But matrimony my light hid—
And I am rather glad I did.

TESTIFIES REJECTED SHOES WERE STAMPED AS PERFECT

New York, Feb. 24.—How rejected shoes were packed for shipment to the army at Rosenwasser Brothers' plant at Long Island City was told by Miss Josephine Campbell at the trial of Morris Rosenwasser, Leo Rosenwasser, Colonel H. J. Hirsch of the Quartermaster's Department, and sixteen others charged with conspiracy before Federal Judge Edwin L. Garvin in Brooklyn.

The young woman was employed at the plant from the time the war started until last August. She said rejected shoes were marked with chalk. With a cloth kept for that purpose, she testified, she wiped off the mark and stamped them as examined and passed as perfect.

The witness said this usually was done between five and six o'clock in the afternoon when there were no inspectors present. In some instances, she said, shoes were rejected because or oil stains. These stains were painted over. The packing of rejected shoes labelled as perfect, she declared was a daily occurrence.

Cross-examined the young woman could not definitely fix the time when such shoes were packed. She said the practice endured for "about a year." She named Abraham Weiss, foreman of the finishing room, one of the defendants, as the man who instructed her to pack the shoes. The trial will be continued Monday.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Prescribing for Paul

By JANE OSBORN

(Copyright, 1918, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Aside from any considerations of patriotism—and he really was as true a patriot as any in the county—Paul Dedham longed to join the colors and lamented the youthful bookishness that had made him too astigmatic as to eyesight to be of military use to his country. This secondary feeling of discontent in mufti was frankly due to the fact that he felt completely snubbed in the once-doting circle of his own family, snubbed by the young women of the community by whom his mother had once assured him he was regarded as quite a catch. For the little community of Marden was within short range of an encampment and Marden was doing its best to create a "desirable home atmosphere" for its boys in khaki. Meantime men who still wore gray cheviot, or blue serge, or pepper-and-salt business suits were negligible.

You don't mind not having any sugar on your baked apple? Paul was assured sweetly by his mother at breakfast. "We are making apple pies for the canteen this morning, and those apples were so tart that we had to use all the sugar we had on hand." And when Paul, his mouth in a pucker, put his hand out for the sugar bowl for his coffee his mother passed him a nice little jug of syrup, assuring him that he was going to enjoy using that in place of sugar because they had used practically their entire quota of cut sugar and they would henceforth have it only when they had soldier boys for dinner.

"The boys just love cake," his sister assured him, "and it does seem a pity to use any substitute in it." Then with moisture in her eyes—"They'll be in France so soon the least we can do is so let them have our wheat," and Paul gulped down a soggy bullet of a corn muffin and sipped cautiously the insipid mixture of his coffee.

Occasionally, however, Paul was assured that he was a "perfect dear." That was after he had signed a check for his mother for the Red Cross, or when he had paid the bill for a hundred pounds of candy for a soldier uncle at the canteen. He was a "nice boy," too, sometimes, and was assured that he was one by some of the girls who had once rather vied with each other to meet him on the tennis court or golf links. But to earn that title he had to sit for an hour or more on someone's front porch holding hanks of yarn or winding them from the backs of chairs, while he was actually deserted for a man in khaki.

"If you should happen to get anything the matter with you," his sister told him one morning when he was feeling especially dejected over the cook's most recent attempt at [illegible] muffins, "I do wish you'd let Doctor Pratt have a try at you—not, of course, that I want you to have anything—but if you should."

And on inquiry as to who Doctor Pratt was he was informed that Doctor Pratt was Kate Pratt—that Doctor Peters, being a skilled surgeon, had volunteered for the war and that Kate Pratt, his niece, just from medical college, was going to handle his practice.

"And she has quite a lot of money, so she is going to give all her fees to the Red Cross or to the canteen or something. That is confidential, of course, but I have it on good authority. So it would be awfully nice if you did get something the matter with you to go to her. She's been quite successful. She set Priscilla's chow's leg the other day and the blessed dog didn't even whimper, and she fixed one of the soldiers' ankles at the service club dance. He was dancing with that fat Baldwin girl and she tripped him and he strained his ankle and Doctor Pratt fixed him—but of course she didn't charge for that."

To Paul there was something odious in the idea of letting a woman doctor prescribe for him, but he kept his opinion to himself and merely made some comment on Priscilla's chow, and hoped that he was much better. Meantime he had a new worry. He was wondering how he could get his socks darned, for his mother and sister knit soldier socks now to the disregard of the darning bag. At first he had bought new socks as he needed them, but he had now accumulated three or four dozen pairs and it didn't seem the best solution. He was wondering whether he could arrange with some seamstress to mend them without letting his mother know—he didn't want her to feel offended, of course.

So Paul's spirits and his appetite waned, and before long his mother and sister noticed a lagging note in his step and a stoop to his shoulders that had not been there before. He neglected the unsweetened apples and the coffee with corn sirup and they decided he had no appetite. "Well, any way, it will be a case for Doctor Kate," his sister told him, and because Paul was actually becoming alarmed over his own dejected condition and because there was no other doctor in the place, Paul made a special appointment for consultation and went to see her in old Doctor Peters' office.

Paul had realized before that there would be difficulties in consulting a woman physician, but the difficulties were different from those he had expected. For Doctor Kate proved to be a most radiant and bewitching young woman, who somehow sent strange thrills coursing through one's veins when she felt one's pulse, and for lack of a stethoscope she had to lay her golden-crowned little head against his heart for full three minutes at a time to find out the state of that organ. But, anyway, there were advantages in this new embarrassment. At least she was taking him seriously even though she received a fee for doing so—and that was more than any woman had done since the encampment was established near Marden. She told him that he surely did need treatment, but that she would have to think the matter over before she could prescribe.

Meantime Paul went home encouraged and Doctor Kate cultivated the acquaintance of Paul's sister and mother. She had suspected something and she found it to be true. Then she laid out a plan for a cure and proceeded to apply it. But the cure did not come in any pill boxes or medicine bottles. The first dose was an invitation to dinner at her house, on the pretext of meeting her mother. And Doctor Kate watched with satisfaction that was not all professional as he accepted his fifth muffin—they were made with as much wheat as the Hoover regulation allowed—and watched him eat the dessert to make which she and her mother had foregone sugar for two days. Doctor Kate had a wonderful way of finding things out, for Paul himself never told her about his socks. But before many weeks had passed he was actually bringing his socks stealthily to Doctor Kate's mother, who assured him she had a perfect passion for darning, and since her own boy had gone to the front she had had none to do.

Then Kate prescribed some sort of electrical treatment for her patient that had to be administered every morning in her office before breakfast, and she also assured him that the good effects of the treatment would be offset if he went out afterward without eating. Having breakfast with Doctor Kate and her mother therefore became part of the treatment.

And Paul recovered rapidly. He regained the lost pounds, and presently his case was spoken of as a feather in the cap of Doctor Kate Pratt. Gossip had it that he was in an actual decline when she took him in hand. No one knew just what the treatment had been, but it had required many visits, and the fee that was handed over to the Red Cross as a result was enough to buy all the yarn that Marden women could knit up in a year.

And the funny thing was that when Paul sued for Doctor Kate's heart and hand and gained them both Marden women folk were a little peeved, even to Paul's own mother and sister. "It's always that way with eligible men," was the comment. "The girls in the home town can get them and pamper them for years. But the first nice girl from out of town is the one they marry."

For Marden failed to see how pitifully susceptible Paul Dedham had become as a result of the neglect he had suffered.

ALL HAVE DREADED GHOSTS

Spirits Play a Most Important Part in the Lives of Primitive Peoples of the World.

Ghosts are extremely ancient. The people of old who dwelt in caves were well acquainted with them.

In the lives of primitive peoples of today a very important part is played by ghosts. Their world is thickly populated with them. When a man sleeps his phantasm, which cannot sleep, goes a-traveling.

With this phantasm he is quite familiar, because it visibly attends him in the daytime. It is his shadow. Savages are usually more or less afraid of shadows.

To the savage, not only animate but even inanimate things have their ghosts. Concealed within every object is a mystery—a noumenon lurking behind the phenomenon, as a psychologist would express the idea. In any rock there is fire hidden. One has only to strike it with another piece of rock and sparks fly.

Among the most appalling spooks that haunt the Iroquois is a carnivorous ghost that feeds on men. Echo, in their belief, is a phantom that repeats their words mockingly among the hills. Particularly malevolent are certain huge heads, without bodies, that go flying about.

Where Americans Lead.

The American is fascinated by novel problems, by ungauged and ungaugeable difficulties. He glories in building a Panama canal after Europe's most famous engineer had failed. Because Europe had never ventured to build skyscrapers that is no reason why a Woolworth should not rear a [illegible] in the air. For centuries man had dreamed of flying, but without success; yet two obscure Americans [illegible], nothing daunted, experimented until they conquered the air. The original McCormick was a farmer, not a mechanic, but that did not deter him from making up his mind to produce a machine which would cut grain, and he did not give up until he had made both a [illegible] and a fortune.

Henry Watterson Calls League 'A Mirage' And Declares That Eternal Peace Is Impossible

Eminent Publicist Criticises President Wilson's Assumption of Leadership in World Movement and Says Attitude Savors of Prize Ring Hectorings

Miami, Fla., Feb. 28.—"I do not like the criticize the President," said Henry Watterson, in answer to a request for an interview. "After all, he is our leader. I am not a partisan and have no hostile motive or purpose.

"There will always be in a democracy, two or more sets of rival leaders or two or more wandering groups of followers," Mr. Watterson continued. "Hitherto history has classified these as conservatives and radicals. But as society has become more and more complex the groups have had their subdivisions. As a consequence speculative doctrinaires and adventurous politicians are enabled to get in their work of confounding the issues and exploiting themselves."

"'What are these fireworks for?' asks the rustic in the parable. 'To blind the eyes of the people,' answers the cynic."

Asked for his estimate of President Wilson, Mr. Watterson replied:

"I would not say that Woodrow Wilson is a conscious man or even an intentioned, deceiver of the people. He is rather a victim, though a lucky victim, than a principle. He is a child of circumstance, eager for action, easily caught by the show, who feels that he will be lost unless he moves with the procession. But it must be well toward the top.

"In all that he does he can descry the schoolmaster, who arrived at the front rather late in life. One needs only to go over the record and mark how often he has reversed himself to detect a certain mental and temperamental instability clearly indicating a lack of fixed or resolute intellectual purpose. This is characteristic of an excess in education; or of the half baked mind overtrained. The overeducated mind fancies himself a doctrinaire when he is in point of fact only a disciple.

Calls League a Mirage

Mr. Wilson was born to the very sophisticated culture of the too, too solid South. Had he grown up in England he would have been a follower of the Della Cruscans. He is a clever writer, has what is called a facile pen, though it sometimes runs away with him. It seems to have done so in the proposed League of Nations. Inevitably such a scheme would catch the fancy of one ever on the alert for the fanciful. It is a pretty mirage. But it is little more than a mirage.

"I cannot too often repeat that the world we inhabit is a world of sin, disease and death. Men will fight whenever they want to fight, and no artificial scheme or process is likely to restrain them. War is mainly the costliness of war that makes most against it. But, as we have seen the last four years, it will not quell the passions of men or dull national and racial ambitions.

"All that Mr. Wilson and his proposed League of Nations can do will be to revamp and may be for a while to reimpress minds of the rank and file, until the bellowing followers of Bellona are ready to spring.

"Eternal peace, universal peace, was not the purpose of the Deity in the creation of the universe. Else why sin, disease and death?

"Nevertheless it is the duty of men in great places and of us all, to proclaim the gospel of good will and cultivate the the art of peace, I have no quarrel with the President on this score. What I contest is the self-exploitation to which he puts a popular instinct and familiar text.

"I do not like his 'consortin'' with the despots of Europe as Simon Suggs observes, and 'snorting and cavorting' in foreign lands. I challenge his quitting his appointed sphere and post of duty, 'to look around in individual crusades,' as Sut Lovingood on a famous occasion said of Andrew Johnston. The cables are at his service. There are ambassadors to speak for him. He lowers the dignity of his office, and its personal dignity, setting out for popular applause and erecting a peripatetic talking machine."

Believes Country Will Protest

"What do you think of the several propositions he lays down?" Mr. Watterson was asked.

"The trend and phrase of the Presidents observations at Boston," he replied "are those of a special pleader, not a statesman. Every man, each of the nations, is for peace as an abstract proposition. That much goes without saying. But Mr. Wilson proposes to bind the hands of a giant and take lottery chances on the future. This, I think, the country will contest.

The President is obsessed by the idea of a League of Nations. If not his own discovery he has yet made himself its zealot. He talks flippantly about 'American ideals' that have won the war against Germany, as if there were no English ideals and French ideals. He calls all who contests his League of Nations fad as devoted to 'those narrow, selfish, provincial purposes' which seem so dear to come minds that have no sweep beyond their nearest horizon,' and speaking of the rejection or failure of the 14d, bitterly denounces those opposing it. He indicates that he is stripped for the fray by saying in a rather bullying tone—'I have fighting blood in me, and it is sometimes a delight to let it have scope, but if it is a challenge on this occasion it will be an intelligence' and adds that if the world is to be disappointed in the great hope for a League of Nations he would wish 'for my part never to have had America play any part whatever in this attempt to emancipate the world,' meaning, of course, unless under his special supervision, closing with, 'I have no more doubt of the verdict of America in this matter than I have doubt of the blood that is in me.'

Fight for New Congress

"All this reads very like Rhodomontade. It is all the essence of the hectoring of the prize ring. We shall know the situation better when the new Congress, with its reoublican majority in both branches, picks up the glove he throw down, eager to give him as good as he sends."

A recent interview with David Jayne Hill, formerly Ambassador on the subject of the League of Nations, was shown to Mr. Watterson. He read it carefully then said:

"I fully agree with Dr. Hill. I agreed with him that we should faithfully perform our part in the preservation of peace among the nations and in defence of the principles of international law. I agree with him that occasions may arise, for one has already arisen, when it may become our duty to send armies to distant lands in order to suppress a common enemy. But, as Dr. Hill truly says, this does not require our entering into an unlimited obligation in all circumstances to assume protection of distant peoples, to enter into their disputes, to place our resources at the disposal of a central authority that may at some time be dominated by a combination of interests adverse to our own, to submit to foreign control our standards of life, our conditions and rewards of labor, and even power over our fortunes and our lives."

"I think with Dr. Hill that there is no good reason why we should commit our prosperity to such unnecessary hazards."

NUMEROUS PRESENTS TO PRINCESS PATRICIA

Widowed Mother of a Canadian Soldier Sends Interesting Ornament.

LONDON, Feb. 27.—Nearly 700 presents to Princess Patricia and Commander Ramsay are on view at the St. James' Palace. A remarkable feature was the extensive collection of jade articles, while furniture was conspicuous in variety and value, but jewelry was not very conspicuous.

One of the most interesting of the small presents was a glass ornament encrusted with sea shells apparently through long immersion in the bed of the ocean. This present bore the inscription: "From the Widowed Mother of a Canadian Soldier." Another little gift was a set of cuff links with the Canadian arms, marked "Merely from a Soldier."

The following are the principal gifts:

From the royal family, the King and Queen, silver canteens.

Queen Alexandra, silver coffee service, Indian shawls, and diamond pin.

Duke of Connaught household linen and antique chairs

Princess Louise, dinner service.

Prince and Princess Arthur of Connaught, mahogany table.

[illegible] Arthur, ash trays.

[illegible] Arthur, cigaret lighter.

[illegible] to bridegroom, [illegible] valuable bust.

[illegible], filled bag of [illegible]

[illegible] Canadian presents

[illegible] dical corps, Montreal Patrol.

[illegible] Yukon, [illegible]

Colonel Blaylock, silver mounted tea case.

Sir Robert Borden, mahogany sofa table.

Mrs. Rivers Bulkeley, works of Shakespeare.

NO CONSTIPATION NO PILES

We think, without a doubt, that constipation is the most prevalent, and at the same time, one of the greatest troubles human nature is afflicted with, and causes more sickness than anything else.

Unless a free action of the bowels occurs at least once a day, constipation is sure to ensue, then comes the sore and uncomfortable piles, sick and bilious headaches, coated tongue, obnoxious breath, sour stomach, heartburn, water brash and many other ailments.

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills will regulate the flow of bile, affect properly on the bowels, thus removing the constipation and its afflicting troubles.

Mr. Dan Doucette, East River Crossing, N.B., writes: — "I have been troubled for years with constipation and trying everything I know of. A friend advised me to use Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills. I used four vials and am completely cured. I can gladly recommend them to anyone who suffers from constipation."

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills have been on the market for the past 35 years, and have been used with the best results by thousands of people in that time, and we have yet to hear of a complaint as to their curative powers.

Married Her Dead Husband's Brother

Wife's Action Upheld by Court But Amount of Award Reduced

The Court of Appeal has decided the case of the validity of the marriage of a woman of her deceased husband's brother as affecting her civil rights to claim as indemnity for her second husband's death. Mr. Justice Weir, in the Superior Court, has decided in favor of the woman and had awarded her $7,000 damages The Court of Appeal confirmed the judgment, though on an appreciation of facts, it reduced the award to $4,500.

The case was an appeal of the Corporation of the United Townships of Mansfield and Pontefract, from a judgment of the Superior Court which condemned it to pay Dame Mary Denault $7,000 in compensation for damages to herself and her two minor children for the death of her husband, John Armour, as a result of a driving accident, for which the Corporation named was held liable through its negligence to properly repair the road.

The Corporation denied any liability, and argued that if any damages were maintained. Mrs. Armour had no legal right of action, as she had married her first husband's brother, an action in itself prohibited by law.

Mrs. Armour pleaded successfully before the Superior Court that she had never had any certain knowledge that her first husband and her second one were brothers; that she and her second husband were Roman Catholics and were married under a dispensation, and the said marriage was contracted in good faith, and produced civil effects giving her the right of action.

The Court of Appeal held that the marriage of Dame Denault to John Armour had been contracted in good faith and was regular, and the judgment of the Superior Court was confirmed with the exception already stated in the reducing of the award.

WHOOPING COUGH.

Mr. Arthur Haines, Arthur Farm, Perley, Sask., writes: "Two years ago whooping cough was very bad in this part of the country; our cows in the stable caught it and had a very severe time. A neighbour advised the use of Dr. Wood's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine and we gave it and nothing else with the result we could realize. When the older boys took the whooping cough we used this medicine promptly and prevented serious trouble, as the cough passed off in two or three days".

WILL HAVE BACON MARKET.

Britain Will Soon Be Able To Take All of Canada's Surplus.

OTTAWA, Feb. 28.—Sir Thomas White stated that the bacon situation is satisfactory. The British Food Ministry will purchase a large amount of tonnage immediately and the British market will be free for commercial purchases and importation after the first of March, and for commercial sale and distribution after the first of April.

A CONFLICT THREATENED

Italians and Jugo-Slavs Are Ready to Spring at Each Other's Throats —A Tense Situation

THE PEACE-MAKER

By Fred S. Ferguson,
(United Press.)

PARIS, March 1.—America stands to-day as the chief factor for averting the latest threatened European war.

The squabble between the Italians and the Jugo Slav for control of the Adriatic has reached a stage bordering on actual hostilities. Both countries, however, are dependent on America economically. In case open warfare results America will immediately cut off their supplies of food and money, rendering them practically impotent, it was understood from reliable sources.

Just now near Italy and the Jugo Slavs are to an armed clash is evidenced by the fact that the Italians have closed their entire frontier, as established by the Austrian armistice, giving as their reason that they "do not wish to have immediate resort to military action in occupying the territories consented to in the armistice."

Eleven Divisions.

The Italians claim the Jugo-Slave have eleven divisions mobilised near the Italian border. They say an Italian food train has been attacked, and that in one instance the flag of a train bringing repatriating Italians, was torn down and burned.

The trouble so far has centred in Laibach. The Italians alleged the Jugo Slavs forced the departure of the Italian military mission, which had been stationed there in conformity with the armistice for the purpose of revictualling Jugo Slavia and Czecho Slovakia. The Jugo Slavs explain they based their actions on the ground that they have been not recognized by the Allies, as a result of which Laibach can no longer be considered a part of the former empire of Austria-Hungary. The Italians deny that such recognition has yet been granted.

The Jugo Slavs deny the charge that they have ordered a general mobilization and make the counter charge that the Italians have still under arms an army of more than 3,000,000.

The peace delegates are understood to be discussing the situation informally, but have taken no action. It is considered probable that when the general conference convenes again after President Wilson's return, it will be necessary to lay down definite boundaries in disputed territories, beyond which no encroachment will be permitted.

St. Andrew's Church

In St. Andrew's Church to-morrow morning, the Rev. P. K. Dasfoot, a specialist in Religious Education will speak.

In the evening the Rev. W. L. H. Rowand will deliver the second of his discourses in the David Series, on "David and Goliath."

This is one of the Bible stories that is associated with our childhood, but has a meaning and message for manhood. When David left home for the camp with "eats" for his soldier brothers, he was only the shepherd lad of Bethlehem, but when he returned he was the greatest hero in Israel.

Special music will be furnished at these services, and the public are cordially invited.

FRANK JENNE SAYS:

If it were the actual wearing out of fine cravats which made it necessary for the wearer to purchase new ones the purchasing would be reduced to a cipher. Ties are discarded, as many other things, when they lose their freshness and distinction.

I have received beautiful new cravats in the latest colorings for Spring. Come in to-night and select a few to brighten up your Winter suit

Come to Me

THE WEATHER

The particularly fine and mild weather that has prevailed this winter is a subject of common remark. During February the thermometer did not once go below zero, in fact the last time below zero was reached here was January 12th. A February without any below zero days has not been known in Peterboro before. The nearest approach to the present conditions was February of 1897, and February of 1909. Each of these months had but three days of zero weather. The usual average here is about 12 days of severe cold during the month of February.—W.P.

Three Great Powers Have Decided To Prohibit Trading With Bolshevists in Russia

Export and Import Trade Cut Off —Bolshevists Request For An Armistice is Refused.

TOWNS CAPTURED

(United Press Service.)

WASHINGTON, March 1.—Trading with the Bolshevist in Russia has been practically barred by three great nations, the United States, England and France, as a result of an order issued by the Federal Reserve Board which temporarily suspends exportation or importation, officials believe that commercial and financial transactions with that part of Russia under Bolshevist control is cut off.

Request Refused.

(United Press Service.)

STOCKHOLM, March 1. — The Lithuanians have refused the request of the Bolsheviki for an armistice, it was stated in an official despatch from Kovno to-day.

The Bolsheviki were said to have asked for a cessation of hostilities following the advance of more than thirteen miles from Vilna by the Lithuanians in which several towns were captured. The Lithuanian commander refused, demanding immediate retirement of the enemy from Lithuania.

Buildings Destroyed

Fire Broke Out in the Outbuildings on the Property of Mr. R. Morrow

Fire completely destroyed the barn and outbuildings on the property of Mr. R. A. Morrow, just west of the city near Bolivar Street. The cause is unknown. The alarm was rung in at box 32, corner of Bolivar and John Streets, at 7.31 a.m., and when the brigade arrived on the scene the barn and the attached outhouse was one mass of flames. The chemicals were useless, as the fire was too far advanced, and being outside the city limits, no hydrants were in reach. A bucket brigade was formed, and, augmented by a garden hose and a strong south-westerly wind, the firemen, with great difficulty, kept the rapidly spreading flames from reaching the house. The outbuildings, which covered a considerable area of ground, were built of wood, and extended in the form of a one-storey shed from the rear of the house. Included in this chain of buildings, which make two turns in direction, are the driving shed and a large barn with a stone foundation. The fire originated in the driving shed at the end of the chain and rapidly spread to the barn by means of the connecting shed. The firemen demolished part of the outbuildings between the barn and the house, but the flames jumped this space and seemed determined to reach the house. Another assault was made on the outbuildings, and this time the firemen were successful in isolating the blaze. At 8.30 the fire had consumed all of the outbuildings, including the barn, which was empty, the ice-house which had been recently replenished with the summer's supply of ice, the fence, the driving shed and the long sheds. In the driving shed was a cutter and buggy, which were destroyed.

The loss, which will be heavy, is covered by insurance.

In case of emergency within the city, the Chief left part of the brigade and equipment at the hall. This is always done in cases where the brigade respond to fires outside of the fire area.

The garden hose did efficient service, and without the cistern from which the water was drawn and a good south-westerly wind, the whole block of buildings would have been completely destroyed.

Fifteen Cords of Wood Cut By The City

Dead Trees on the Boulevards Are Being Eliminated

With only part of the area covered Mr. Harry Evans, the Street Commissioner, has already cut down fifteen cords of wood from the dead trees on the boulevards. Most of this, which is maple and ready to burn, has been turned over to Mr. F. W. Miller, the Relief Officer, to distribute in half-cord lots as charity. The balance, which is green, is stored in the City yard. Mr. Evans has pretty well cleared up the West End of the city, but says that there are a few more he has his eye on. His four men will proceed with their clearing up soon.

Gassed At Lens, Died Here This Morning

Gunner Jack MacLeod Made Supreme Sacrifice After Coming Home

John (MacLeod, late gunner of the 23rd Howitzer Battery, died at the Nicholls Hospital this morning from the effects of German poison gas with which he was overcome at the battle of Lens. He was the son of the Rev. Roderick MacLeod, of Garrabost, Scotland, and was in his 30th year. The deceased was formerly employed with the Bank of Nova Scotia in Peterborough. He enlisted here with the 93rd battalion and in England was transferred to the 23rd Howitzer Battery, with which he served eight months in France. Gunner MacLeod married Miss Bertha Lytle, who survives him.

The funeral will be held on Monday, under military auspices, at 3 o'clock, from the residence of his father-in-law, Mr. Thos. Lytle, 297 Simcoe street, to the Little Lake cemetery.

VITAL STATISTICS FOR THE MONTH

Death Rate Was Much Higher During the Month

The death rate in the city was twice as high during February, 1919, as during the same month last year. The birth rate also shows an increase, while the marriage rate is less than half that of February, 1918:

Presented With An Umbrella

Last evening a number of friends gathered at the home of Mrs. Turner, 11 King street, and presented Miss Isabel Turner, who is leaving the city shortly to reside in Bedford, New York, with a slight remembrance of the happy times spent in their midst. The following address was read by Miss Hazel Lang, while the presentation was made by Miss Dorothy Scrace,

Dear Isabel,—It is with sincere regret that we learn of your intended departure from our midst. We hope that in your new home you may make many friends, as you have done here. We wish you every success wherever you may go or do. And we will all be ready to extend to you a welcoming hand back into our midst. We now wish you to accept this umbrella as a slight remembrance of the happy times spent in our midst. Once again we wish you every success in your new home.

Signed on behalf of the spinners.

MARTIAL LAW PROCLAIMED

Provision Shops in Madrid Were Attacked by Mob—Government Takes Possession

SOCIAL QUESIONS

Clashes Between Police and Rioters in Madrid.

(United Press Service.)

MADRID, March 1—Martial law was proclaimed in Madrid yesterday following clashes between the police and food rioters, in which a number of persons were injured. Mobs stormed and looted several shops.

(Canadian Press.)

MADRID, March 1. — Martial law has been declared in Madrid, and troops are now patrolling the streets. Order has been restored but some theatres have been closed. This action was the result of rioting against the profiteers. To-day provision and butcher shops were being attacked by mobs. The government has taken procession of the bake shops.

Premier Romanones has issued a statement saying that protests against the provision dealers had assumed such an aspect that it was necessary to take serious precautions, and that martial law had been declared so as to enable the government to work better for the settlement of pending social questions.

The trouble began on Friday afternoon when attacks on bakeries and food shops occurred, principally in the suburbs and in the evening there was a movement by the people which resulted in their occupation of the butcher shops. Skirmishes with stone throwing occurred between the demonstrators and the police around the markets.

CONTRACTORS HAVE AN EASY TIME

Very Little Snow to Remove From the Sidewalks

The seven contractors for the snow-ploughing in the city constitute one body of men who have benefitted considerably by the mild nature of the winter. While their pay went on the same as last winter, when they were on the job at least three times a week and frequently more, they have only made five rounds so far this year. The contract, which covers five months at $245.80 a month among the seven men, constitutes only a side line for them, consequently they made some easy money this year. Mr. R. H. Parsons, the City Engineer, said to-day that generally the money does not represent ordinary wages. Last year the horses played out several times and others had to replace them.

WAS REMANDED FOR A WEEK

Accused Says He Was Stricken With Prevailing Malady

In police court Mr. Joseph Wearing, appearing for the defence of Leo Alfred Frobart, of Lindsay, charged with being a defaulter under the M.S.A., pleaded extenuating circumstances, although he did not attempt to deny the prisoner was guilty. He asked for a week's remand in order that important witnesses may reach the city. He will attempt to prove through these witnesses that Frobart gave himself up last October when amnesty was granted to those defaulters who would report to their respective battalions. Frobart did so, but on the day that he surrendered he was taken ill with complications of pneumonia and Spanish "flu" which lasted until after the armistice was signed.

The Magistrate said he could not deal with the circumstances. The Minister of Justice should be appealed to and not the Magistrate.

The case was finally remanded until Friday, March 7 at 3 p.m., when it is altogether likely that a plea of guilty will be entered.

Germany Faces The Most Serious Situation Since The First Revolution

New Spartacan Uprising Developing in All Parts of the Country—Government is Losing Power.

RAILWAYS TORN UP

(United Press.)

BERNE, March 1. — The German Government to-day faced the most serious situation since the first revolution. Since the new Spartacans' uprising, now developing in all parts of the country, despatches indicated that further successes of the radicals in the central districts might render the government virtually powerless.

The Spartacans, apparently determined above everything else to isolate Berlin from Southern Germany, were concentrating large forces in the central districts for the purpose of preventing the movement of government troops southward. Weimar had already been completely cut off from the rest of the country. If the revolution triumphs in the south the National Assembly may fall. Some despatches indicated that at least a portion of the cabinet had succeeded in reaching Berlin.

SECOND AND THIRD BAVARIAN ARMY CORPS ORDERED TO MUNICH

(United Press.)

STOCKHOLM, March 1.—The Second and Third Bavarian Army Corps have been ordered to Munich to present an ultimatum to the Provisional government there, according to a despatch received from Berlin to-day. They will demand immediate summoning of the former Diet, reconstruction of the Parliamentary government and disarmament of civilians.

Governmental affairs in Munich are now being administered by a triumvirate consisting of Herren Niekisch, Sekuser and Gandorfer, acting under an executive council consisting of fifty Spartacans, Majority Socialists and Minority Socialists. Niekisch has announced that the various nations are working together harmoniously.

OFFICERS REPORT ON THE SITUATION IN CENTRAL POWERS

(United Press.)

LONDON, March 1.—The Paris correspondent of the London News stated to-day that the Economic Council has reported to the Supreme War Council that a preliminary peace must be concluded at once with Germany, or the blockade raised. The recommendation it was said, was based on the report of fourteen British officers, revealing the seriousness of the situation in the Central Powers.

LOYAL TROOPS IN THE CAPITAL

The presence of great bodies of loyal troops in the capital has so far prevented a renewal of the January riots. Strikes, however, are reported to have resulted in reducing Berlin's electrical supply to a minimum.

President Ebert and Chancellor Scheidemann are said to be growing increasingly apprehensive, but so far have failed to agree on remedial measures. The former is understood to favour a compromise, while the latter wishes to employ force. Two-thirds of the workmen in Saxony, Thuingia and Franconia are reported to be striking. Fear that the railway strike would not completely paralyse traffic between Berlin and Weimar is reported to have led the Spartacans to tear up long stretches of the rails.

Refusal of Dr. Muehlon, former director of Krupps, to constitute a new ministry, is said to have increased the political confusion in Bavaria. Muehlon has returned to Switzerland, and Bavaria is said to be practically without a government. The military commander at Munich is said to have forbidden all public meetings, but is understood to have been ignored by the Spartacans. The Central Council also refused to recognize his authority.

PRESENTATION TO MRS. RATHBONE

On Thursday evening, after the rehearsal of All Saints' Choir, at the school room, a social was held and the rector and wardens of the church were the invited guests of the choir. A very pleasant time was spent, and after the supper, which was supplied by Hooper's, in excellent style, the health of the retiring men in the persons of Mr. Herb. Rush and Mr. Harold Fair, was drunk with unusual honours, and replies to in excellent speeches. During the evening Mrs. Rathbone, a retired member of several years' standing was made the recipient of a presentation which took the form of a casserole. Mrs. Rathbone returned thanks to the members, and regret at leaving, with her usual eloquence. The party broke up with the singing of Auld Lang Syne and God Save the King.

France and Japan Want a Greater Measure of Protection For Their Special Interests

STRENGTHEN LEAGUE

(By Lowell Mellett—United Press).

PARIS, March 1.—Returning from the United States, President Wilson will find a movement under way to incorporate several important amendments in the League of Nations constitution.

France and Japan particularly wish to obtain a greater measure of protection for their special interests. Japan will be ready to present her view regarding immigration, but indications to-day were that she will not make a real fight for their acceptance, allowing the matter to rest after it is on record. The French will again put forward their plan for an international army, stating their case in the strongest possible terms, since they firmly believe it would greatly strengthen the League. However, it is learned from an authoritative source that she will not make acceptance a condition of her ratification of the League, since reports of opposition in America have practically wiped out all opposition here.

Butter Up In Price This Morning

Eggs Sold Down to Forty Cents —To-day's Market

Butter rose this morning two cents a pound higher than last week, and the market women themselves could not state any reason for the extortionate price other than by asking the objector to observe how scarce it was.

Butter sold at 48 and 50 cents a lb.
Eggs at 40 and 45 cents a dozen.
Chickens at 30 and 35 cents a pound.

On the outside market prices were much the same as last week, potatoes selling at $1.35 a bag; apples at $3.00 a bag; pork at 28 and 30 cents, beef, at 18 and 20 cents, and lamb at 26 and 28 cents a pound.

A CONFLICT THREATENED

Italians and Jugo-Slavs Are Ready to Spring at Each Other's Throats —A Tense Situation

THE PEACE-MAKER

By Fred S. Ferguson,
(United Press.)

PARIS, March 1.—America stands to-day as the chief factor for averting the latest threatened European war.

The squabble between the Italians and the Jugo Slavs for control of the Adriatic has reached a stage bordering on actual hostilities. Both countries, however, are dependent on America economically. In case open warfare results America will immediately cut off their supplies of food and money, rendering them practically impotent, it was understood from reliable sources.

Just now near Italy and the Jugo Slavs are to an armed clash is evidenced by the fact that the Italians have closed their entire frontier, as established by the Austrian armistice, giving as their reason that they "do not wish to have immediate resort to military action in occupying the territories consented to in the armistice."

Eleven Divisions.

The Italians claim the Jugo-Slavs have eleven divisions mobilized near the Italian border. They say an Italian food train has been attacked, and that in one instance the flag of a train bringing repatriating Italians, was torn down and burned.

The trouble so far has centred in Laibach. The Italians alleged the Jugo Slavs forced the departure of the Italian military mission, which had been stationed there in conformity with the armistice for the purpose of revictualling Jugo Slavia and Czecho Slovakia. The Jugo Slavs explain they based their actions on the ground that they have been recognized by the Allies, as a result of which Laibach can no longer be considered a part of the former empire of Austria-Hungary. The Italians deny that such recognition has yet been granted.

The Jugo Slavs deny the charge that they have ordered a general mobilization and make the counter charge that the Italians have still under arms an army of more than 3,000,000.

The peace delegates are understood to be discussing the situation informally, but have taken no action. It is considered probable that when the general conference convenes again after President Wilson's return, it will be necessary to lay down definite boundaries in disputed territories, beyond which no encroachment will be permitted.

St. Andrew's Church

In St. Andrew's Church to-morrow morning, the Rev. P. K. Dayfoot, a specialist in Religious Education will speak.

In the evening the Rev. W. L. H. Rowand will deliver the second of his discourses in the David Series, on "David and Goliath."

This is one of the Bible stories that is associated with our childhood, but has a meaning and message for manhood. When David left home for the camp with "eats" for his soldier brothers, he was only the shepherd lad of Bethlehem, but when he returned he was the greatest hero in Israel.

Special music will be furnished at these services and the public are cordially invited.

FRANK JENNE SAYS:

"Come to Me"

THE WEATHER

The particularly fine and mild weather that has prevailed this winter is a subject of common remark. During February the thermometer did not once go below zero, in fact the last time below zero was reached locally was January 12th. A February with but any below zero days has not been known in Peterboro before. The closest approach to the present conditions was February of 1897, and February of 1909. Each of these months had but three days of zero weather. The usual average here is about 12 days of severe cold during the month of February.—W.P.

Three Great Powers Have Decided To Prohibit Trading With Bolshevists in Russia

Export and Import Trade Cut Off —Bolshevists Request For An Armistice is Refused.

TOWNS CAPTURED

(United Press Service.)

WASHINGTON, March 1.—Trading with the Bolshevist in Russia has been practically barred by three great nations, the United States, England and France, as a result of an order issued by the Federal Reserve Board which temporarily suspends exportation or importation, officials believe that commercial and financial transactions with that part of Russia under Bolshevist control is cut off.

Request Refused.

(United Press Service.)

STOCKHOLM, March 1. — The Lithuanians have refused the request of the Bolsheviki for an armistice, it was stated in an official despatch from Kovno to-day.

The Bolsheviki were said to have asked for a cessation of hostilities following the advance of more than thirteen miles from Vilna by the Lithuanians in which several towns were captured. The Lithuanian commander refused, demanding immediate retirement of the enemy from Lithuania.

Buildings Destroyed

Fire Broke Out in the Outbuildings on the Property of Mr. R. Morrow

Fire completely destroyed the barn and outbuildings on the property of Mr. R. A. Morrow, just west of the city near Bolivar Street. The cause is unknown. The alarm was rung in at box 32, corner of Bolivar and John Streets, at 7.01 a.m., and when the brigade arrived on the scene the barn and the attached outhouse was one mass of flames. The chemicals were useless, as the fire was too far advanced, and being outside the city limits, no hydrants were in reach. A bucket brigade was formed, and, augmented by a garden hose and a strong south-westerly wind, the firemen, with great difficulty, kept the rapidly spreading flames from reaching the house. The outbuildings, which covered a considerable area of ground, were built of wood, and extended in the form of a one-storey shed from the rear of the house. Included in this chain of buildings, which make two turns in direction, are the driving shed and a large barn with a stone foundation. The fire originated in the driving shed at the end of the chain and rapidly spread to the barn by means of the connecting shed. The firemen demolished part of the outbuildings between the barn and the house, but the flames jumped this space and seemed determined to reach the house. Another assault was made on the outbuildings, and this time the firemen were successful in isolating the blaze. At 8.30 the fire had consumed all of the outbuildings, including the barn, which was empty, the ice-house which had been recently replenished with the summer's supply of ice, the fence, the driving shed and the long sheds. In the driving shed was a cutter and buggy, which were destroyed.

The loss, which will be heavy, is covered by insurance.

In case of emergency within the city, the Chief left part of the brigade and equipment at the hall. This is always done in cases where the brigade respond to fires outside of the fire area.

The garden hose did efficient service, and without the cistern from which the water was drawn and a good south-westerly wind, the whole block of buildings would have been completely destroyed.

Gassed At Lens, Died Here This Morning

Gunner Jack MacLeod Made Supreme Sacrifice After Coming Home

John (MacLeod, late gunner of the 23rd Howitzer Battery, died at the Nicholls Hospital this morning from the effects of German poison gas with which he was overcome at the battle of Lens. He was the son of the Rev. Roderick MacLeod, of Garrabost, Scotland, and was in his 30th year. The deceased was formerly employed with the Bank of Nova Scotia in Peterborough. He enlisted here with the 93rd battalion and in England was transferred to the 23rd Howitzer Battery, with which he served eight months in France. Gunner MacLeod married Miss Bertha Hogle, who survives him.

The funeral will be held on Monday, under military auspices, at 3 o'clock, from the residence of his father-in-law, Mr. Thos. Lytle, 207 Simcoe street, to the Little Lake cemetery.

VITAL STATISTICS FOR THE MONTH

Death Rate Was Much Higher During the Month

The death rate in the city was twice as high during February, 1919, as during the same month last year. The birth rate also shows an increase, while the marriage rate is less than half that of February, 1918:

Fifteen Cords of Wood Cut By The City

Dead Trees on the Boulevards Are Being Eliminated

With only part of the area covered Mr. Harry Evans, the Street Commissioner, has already cut down fifteen cords of wood from the dead trees on the boulevards. Most of this, which is maple and ready to burn, has been turned over to Mr. F. W. Miller, the Relief Officer, to distribute in half-cord lots as charity. The balance, which is green, is stored in the City yard. Mr. Evans has pretty well cleared up the West End of the city, but says that there are a few more he has his eye on. His four men will proceed with their clearing up soon.

Presented With An Umbrella

Last evening a number of friends gathered at the home of Mrs. Turner, 11 King street, and presented Miss Isabel Turner, who is leaving the city shortly to reside in Bedford, New York, with a slight remembrance of the happy times spent in their midst. The following address was read by Miss Hazel Lang, while the presentation was made by Miss Dorothy Horace,

Dear Isabel,—It is with sincere regret that we learn of your intended departure from our midst. We hope that in your new home you may make many friends, as you have done here. We wish you every success wherever you may go or do. And we will all be ready to extend to you a welcoming hand back into our midst. We now wish you to accept this umbrella as a slight remembrance of the happy times spent in our midst. Once again we wish you every success in your new home.

MARTIAL LAW PROCLAIMED

Provision Shops in Madrid Were Attacked by Mob—Government Takes Possession

SOCIAL QUESTIONS

Clashes Between Police and Rioters in Madrid.

(United Press Service.)

MADRID, March 1—Martial law was proclaimed in Madrid yesterday following clashes between the police and food rioters, in which a number of persons were injured. Mobs stormed and looted several shops.

(Canadian Press.)

MADRID, March 1. — Martial law has been declared in Madrid, and troops are now patrolling the streets. Order has been restored but some theatres have been closed. This action was the result of rioting against the profiteers. To-day provision and butcher shops were being attacked by mobs. The government has taken procession of the bake shops.

Premier Romanones has issued a statement saying that protests against the provision dealers had assumed such an aspect that it was necessary to take serious precautions, and that martial law had been declared so as to enable the government to work better for the settlement of pending social questions.

The trouble began on Friday afternoon when attacks on bakeries and food shops occurred, principally in the suburbs and in the evening there was a movement by the people which resulted in their occupation of the butcher shops. Skirmishes with stone throwing occurred between the demonstrators and the police around the markets.

The contract, which covers five months at $248.80 a month among the seven men, constitutes only a side line for them, consequently they made some easy money this year. Mr. R. H. LONDON—A story of a cat's warning of a tragedy was told at an inquest at Rotherbithe on Ann Johnson, aged fifty-eight. The husband said that when he went home at night he took some meat for the cat. At the door the cat, instead of taking the meat from his hand, made a peculiar noise, and ran backwards and forwards between him and the scullery, where he found his wife hanging from the framework of the door.

THE Y.M.C.A. LIFE PROBLEM CLUB MEETING

WILL AMEND COVENANT

France and Japan Want a Greater Measure of Protection For Their Special Interests

STRENGTHEN LEAGUE

(By Lowell Mellett—United Press).

PARIS, March 1.—Returning from the United States, President Wilson will find a movement under way to incorporate several important amendments in the League of Nations constitution.

France and Japan particularly wish to obtain a greater measure of protection for their special interests. Japan will be ready to present her view regarding immigration, but indications to-day were that she will not make a real fight for their acceptance, allowing the matter to rest after it is on record. The French will again put forward their plan for an international army, stating their case in the strongest possible terms, since they firmly believe it would greatly strengthen the League. However, it is learned from an authoritative source that she will not make acceptance a condition of her ratification of the League, since reports of opposition in America have practically wiped out all opposition here.

Butter Up In Price This Morning

Eggs Sold Down to Forty Cents —To-day's Market

Butter rose this morning two cents a pound higher than last week, and the market women themselves could not state any reason for the extortionate price other than by asking the objector to observe how scarce it was.

Butter sold at 58 and 60 cents a lb.
Eggs at 40 and 42 cents a dozen.
Chickens at 37 and 38 cents a pound.

On the outside market prices were much the same as last week, potatoes selling at $1.35 a bag; apples at $2.00 a bag; pork at 28 and 30 cents, beef, at 18 and 20 cents, and lamb at 25 and 28 cents a pound.

THE EXHIBITION.

The request of the directors of the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition for a substantial grant from the City Council towards the cost of erecting new buildings at the Exhibition Grounds is one that should receive sympathetic and earnest consideration on the part of the aldermen. The Exhibition has come to mean a big thing for Peterborough, and indications point to an even greater and more substantial development in the future than has characterized the past few years of its history. The time is apparently not far distant when Peterborough will have a week's fair, with thousands of visitors each day from outside points. The value of such an institution to a city is considerable, and the Peterborough Exhibition by the steadiness of its growth and its bright prospects is to be regarded as a distinct asset. The whole community should stand behind the directors in their efforts to make the annual event the banner exhibition of the Province, outside of the bigger city fairs. The Council is asked to make a grant of $2,000, which will be expended in helping to erect some new buildings that are badly needed. $2,000 of course will not finance all the work that is required, but the directors have promised that if the city will do its part by granting that sum they will undertake to raise the balance that will be needed.

It is a straight business proposition. The management of the Peterborough Industrial are running the exhibition for the benefit of Peterborough and this district generally. There is nothing in it for themselves except hard work. Frequently have the directors had to go down into their own pockets to help finance the affairs of the Exhibition, and they have done so cheerfully, feeling that the work they were doing was something that was in the interests of Peterborough. The Council's grant last years was $[illegible]. This year should [illegible] increased [illegible] ed. The improvements made to the grounds last year show that the directors may be relied upon to wisely expend any sum that the city may be able to place at their disposal.

THE RED CROSS.

The announcement that the Canadian Red Cross Society proposes to apply to the Dominion Government for an amendment to its charter, whereby it will be allowed to extend its activities to the community generally during peace times for the alleviation of pain and suffering, is a welcome one to those who have watched with admiration the great work that the Red Cross has carried on during the war. So effectively did the society bring together in the spirit of its war service the different elements of the community that it would be a shame to have the organization disbanded now that there is no longer need of its services in connection with the war. There is much that can be done by a society like the Red Cross, in peace times, and the decision to keep the organization as it exists will be generally applauded. The statement of Sir Richard Lake, Lieutenant-Governor of Saskatchewan that in the sparsely settled districts of the west no force had been more potent than the Red Cross in cementing together the various widely separated elements which went to make up the population, is one that could be truthfully said of many other sections of the country. Members of the Red Cross who have valued the comradeship that was engendered by working together in the common cause, will rejoice to learn that there will be no necessity of severing the ties now and that the machinery that was used to lessen the ravages of war will be placed at the disposal of Canada to assist whenever a helping hand is needed.

DAYLIGHT SAVING.

In the controversy over the daylight saving measure it is interesting to note that Great Britain is adopting the plan again this year, commencing on March 30th and ending on September 28th. The system has worked out so satisfactorily during the years of the war that the Motherland has unhesitatingly adopted it as a permanent measure. It has justified itself if only in the saving of fuel and light, that is effected, and while the farming community in England found a certain amount of inconvenience, the benefits that were gained by the people as a whole made it essential that the measure should be continued.

Whether or not Canada will re-enact the daylight saving bill this year depends upon the action of the United States. If our neighbours decide to maintain the system again this year, Canada will follow their example, but if the plan is rejected across the border, similar action will undoubtedly be taken here. In the latter event the Toronto Globe believes that a number of municipalities will probably adopt a daylight savings scheme on their own responsibility. The cities and towns of Canada are undoubtedly strongly in favour of the plan, and urban dwellers would be sorry to hear that it had been abandoned.

THE MONARCH LIFE.

The annual report of the Monarch Life Assurance Company shows that the great war has, if anything, increased public confidence in the value of insurance.

The Monarch enjoys the distinction of being one of the three Canadian life companies to reach the fifteen-million-in-force point in the shortest period of years. Of the twenty Monarch men who went overseas, eighteen are safe and being provided with a position by the company. The company has fifteen millions of business on its books, and with a strong organization the outlook for 1919 is very promising. The applications received for the month of January alone amount to over $1,000,000, which augurs well for another good report for the present year.

The previous directors were all re-elected, namely: J. T. Gordon, president; W. A. Matheson, first vice-president; F. W. Adams, second vice-president; managing director, J. W. W. Stewart; directors, W. R. Bawif, Col. H. A. Mullins, C. E. Gordon, H. W. Eccles, R. G. Ironside; secretary and actuary, J. A. Macfarlane, A.I.A.; medical referee, E. S. Popham, M.D., and Wm. Rogers, M.D.; auditors, John Scott & Company; solicitors, Taylor, Ross and Leach. Mr. Hughson Johnstone is the local agent of the Monarch Life.

SOLDIERS FIRST.

Mr. F. B. McCurdy, M.P., who was formerly parliamentary secretary of the Department of Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment, and who resigned from that position because he was disgusted with the lack of progress made in looking after returned soldiers, has given notice of a resolution that he will move in the House of Commons, that preference shall be given to wounded soldiers in making civil service appointments. No fault will be found with Mr. McCurdy's resolution, but the general public will wonder at the necessity of any such motion being introduced. Mr. McCurdy's motion sets forth "that in the opinion of the House the civil service should be amended so that while having full regard to efficiency a preference to appointments to the public service should be afforded to the members of the Canadian expeditionary force who have become casualties in a theatre of war." That expresses accurately the feeling of the great majority of Canadians and is such a simple matter of justice to the men who fought for Canada over there that is is disquieting to find that is is necessary to have this matter brought up in the House. People have been labouring under the impression that the principle set forth by Mr. McCurdy had guided the government in its selection of civil servants since men started to come home from overseas, but when the late secretary of the Department, created to take care of returned soldiers, finds it necessary to bind the government by means of a resolution, it seems prima facie evidence that hitherto ex-service men have not received the consideration from the government that their war records entitled them to in regard to these appointments.

GERMAN WRANGLING OVER THE WAR.

As it is authoritatively announced in England that thirty-seven of the surrendered German submarines are to be assigned in the following proportion, sixteen to France, ten to Italy, seven to Japan and four to the United States, we must console ourselves with the hope that our allotment may make up in quality what they lack in quantity. In any event the prizes will constitute an interesting object lesson for our people, for though we have suffered bitterly from the forays of the Hun underwater boats, we have had a glimpse of but two, the commercial craft Deutschland and that merry roisterer of the deep blue sea, the U-52, which visited Newport, had a satisfactory look around and then sneaked off to Nantucket's off shore waters to harry all the unfortunate shipping that he had the safe chance to rake in as innocent victims of his piracy.

In the meantime a fierce controversy is raging in Germany over the supposed cause of their defeat. Naval and military critics have come to blows over incidental points, but in the main all, with the exception of Captain Persius, appear to be in agreement that the German legend of victory by actual battle must be maintained and that surrender was forced, not by defeat on land and sea, but by the collapse of the "home front" precipitated by allied propaganda. "We were invincible everywhere on both elements," howls one crackbrained writer in the Tagezeitung, and "to read the newspapers," adds the Naval and Military Record of England, "one might suppose that Foch and Beatty had nothing to do with the Kaiser's downfall, and that while the Huns could have defied the allied armies and navies for many years, their resistance was speedily overcome by showers of Lord Northcliffe's leaflets." Only when the new armistice terms are driven home and then possibly only to a degree will Germans realize how complete has been their defeat by arms and superior strategy of the Allies.

One result of this naval controversy is the side light thrown on the matter of German submarine construction. During the war, from beginning to end, the underwater tonnage turned out or ordered represented a total displacement of 563,000 tons, but of this 333 submarines aggregating 225,000 tons were ordered only two months before the war, and it is extremely unlikely under most circumstances, especially when the Hun's diminished resources are remembered, that any of these could have taken part in the conflict. It has been reported that some submarines have been found on the building ways, and it is possible that the least advanced of these may have belonged to the classes ordered a day or more after the game was really up.—New York Herald.

Polar Party Safe

Storker Storkerson Disproves Theory of Westward Arctic Current.

OTTAWA, Feb. 28.—The safe arrival on the north coast of Alaska on November 7 last of Storker Storkerson, the Arctic explorer, and his four companions was announced in a despatch from him forwarded from Fort Yukon to the Canadian Department of Naval Service.

The explorer set out from the north coast of Alaska in March, 1918, to drift westward on an ice cake across the Pola Basin on the theory that the currents would land him on the coast of Siberia. It appears from his despatches that the ice cake on which his party camped merely carried them around in what might be considered a huge eddy.

In addition to upsetting the theory current among geographers and polar authorities, of a westward current, Mr. Storkerson reported that his trip had resulted in the taking of important deep sea soundings.

The work carried out by Mr. Storkerson and his party was arranged by Vilhjalmur Stefansson, who intended to command the party personally, but was prevented by illness.

The party started on March 15, 1918, from Cross Island, on the north coast of Alaska. At the outset it consisted of nine whites and four Eskimos with eight sledges. After about two weeks of travel Mr. Storkerson sent back four of the men and three sledges and a short time later sent back three more sledges with all but four of the men.

The party then established camp on the ice and prepared for a trip which was expected to last all winter. Virtually without provisions, they subsisted comfortably throughout the trip on seals and polar bears, which were shot.

The drift began at about 73 degrees north latitude and 148 degrees west longitude. The most north-westerly point reached, Mr. Storkerson reported, was 74 degrees north longitude and 152 degrees west latitude, while the most easterly point reached was 144½ degrees west longitude.

Fritter batter to cover fruit should always be thin.

Apples are delicious baked with raisins and marshmallows.

MESSAGE SOLD FOR $2,500

Lloyd George's, Autographed, Bought by Joseph Duveen at Auction.

An autographed message to the American people from David Lloyd George, the British Premier, was sold at auction for $2,500 from the stage of the Forty-fourth street Theatre after addresses had been made by former Governor Whitman and Philip Gibbs, the war correspondent. The letter was bought by Joseph Duveen, who announced that he will present it to the Historical Society of New Hampshire, at Concord. The money paid will go to the Fund for Dependents of British Sailor and Soldier Journalists.

The Premier's message was as follows:

The British Nation is full of admiration and gratitude for the magnificent way in which the United States of America took their part in winning victory for the Freedom of the World and the Welfare of Humanity.

This co-operation has served to give additional and permanent strength to the bonds of friendship and sympathy which exist between the people of the United States and those of the British Empire.

Mr. Gibbs, in a brief address telling if his personal friendship with the British Premier, said that "Lloyd George and President Wilson are working pretty much together to accomplish the same ideals."

The Lloyd George letter was auctioned by Al Jolson between the acts of "Sinbad." Representatives of Henry Clews and George T. Wilson participated in the bidding, as did Mr. Jolson and Roscoe Arbuckle.

Brother Identifies Boarding House Murder Victim

Dr. J. W. Kelly Comes From Mansfield, Ohio, and Claims George Robee as Kin

New York, March 1—The indentity of George Robee, who was murdered last Tuesday morning in a boarding house which he conducted at No. 228 Madison avenue, has been established by Dr. J. W. Kelly of Mansfield, Ohio. Dr. Kelly is the brother of the dead man. In an interview with Captain Arthur Carey of the Homocide Bureau, he stated that George Robee Kelly left his home in Mansfield just before the Spanish-American War, and that his family had since heard from him infrequently.

According to Dr. Kelly the murdered man was fifty-eight years old. He left his home in 1897 and was not heard from again until 1907 when Dr. Kelly received word that he was in business in New York. Last November "Robee" made a trip to Mansfield, and at that time, according to Dr. Kelly, he seemed to be happy and declared that he had been successful from a business standpoint.

According to Dr. Kelly his brother had been liberal with his funds. He could see no motive for murder and was of little help to the police in that regard. His brother had changed his name for business reasons, Dr. Kelly stated. Dr. Kelly said that many persons from Ohio, friends of his brother, had called upon his brother when in this city and had accepted his hospitality.

Captain Carey and the detectives were active yesterday to find some clue to the mystery. They worked all day with but little success. The theory that the murder may have had a connection with the slaying of Winfield Scott Plower, a close friend of the dead man, who was found dead in his apartment at No. 148 East Thirteenth street last month is flouted by the police.

$3,000,000 BARTOL WILL CONTESTED

Daughters Practically Disinherited Say Father Was Insanely Prejudiced Against Them.

PHILADELPHIA—Contest by two sisters, one a Baroness, for the $3,000,000 estate of their father, Henry Welchmann Bartol, was begun here today. After a brief hearing it was continued until March 25.

The contestants are Mrs. James M Parr, of Wilkesbarre, Pa., and the Baroness Katheru De Monolas. They seek to have the will set aside on the ground that the father was "insanely prejudiced" against them, was subject to "delusions" about his wife and daughters, and that when he made the will he was not a resident of the United States, but of Nice, France.

Mr. Bartol died here last December. He made a fortune in sugar refining and railroad stocks. He lived in this city and in Nice.

Under the will the sisters and a brother, Henry G. Bartol, would receive only about $5,000 each in an estate of $100,000 accumulated in France. The bulk of the $3,000,000 estate is left to the Franklin Institute in this city.

METHOD FOUND TO LENGTHEN LIFE OF UNION GOVERNMENT

Increase of $1,000 Per Year In Indemnity Will Probably Stifle Desires of Some to Consult Constituents, Especially Those Who Fear They May Be Rejected

OTTAWA, Mar. 1.—This Union Government has learned the power of propaganda. When Hon. James Calder, on Wednesday, shouldered his way into the debate and took a pasing whirl at the tariff, it was generally believed that he was sounding the keynote for yesterday's Unionist caucus. But he wasn't He was just sowing the seed of tariff talk that would get the public accustomed to thinking of tariff tinkering without a shudder.

The tariff was only mentioned casually at the caucus, but a grand object lesson was given the whole party re compromise on tariff issues. If echoes from the caucus chamber can be believed, Cockshutt, of Brantford, the lion of protection, stated that he had been led up to the fence and was prepared to straddle it to the extent of dropping the 7½ per cent. super tariff if his old antagonists, headed by Dr. Michael Clark of Red Deer, were prepared to do likewise The straddling proposition was not accepted, and the whole question will be discussed at a special session to be called later.

Fixed Their Decision

And, while this compromise propaganda was sinking in the hearts of the private members were made glad by an intimation that in future the sessional indemnity will be $3,500, instead of the contemptible $2,500, that was sufficient when the elections were on. The increase in stipend probably has a two-fold object. First, it will enable the mere members to live in the same style as the employes of various commissions. Secondly, it practically assures the longevity of Union Government. Members who were trembling between the two emoluments of office and the wishes of their constituents, have found the argument that has finally fixed their decision. Three more years of faithful following of the government they were elected to support, means $10,500. That's a lot of money. It looks large, indeed, besides the uncertainty of election. And all the more so that some Liberal Unionists have terrorizing visions of a split on party lines that will leave them without even nominations. Nesbitt, of Oxford, is said to be one of the latter, and he would, so report goes, have a Unionist party formed immediately. It would, of course, take the place of the old Tory party that is fast being delegated to the back benches in the present House of Commons.

The Liquor Question

Temperance legislation, however, occupied most of the time of the caucus. Members who dare not talk in the House lest the pastors of their various churches read their speeches are said to have taken advantage of the alleged secrecy of caucus to display symptoms of their growing thirst. They did not shout for free beer, nor did they raise the cry: "Barkeeper, fill 'em up again," but they protested that the provinces should be allowed to make their own liquor laws. They were finished with the promise that the purposed legislation would provide for a referendum as soon as the soldiers get home.

But the biggest row of all was over the proposal to hand the money to be spent on highways and housing over the provinces. There may be a doubt as to whether patronage has been abolished at Ottawa but Tory members here believe it still blooms in all its beauty in those provinces in which the Grits hold the reins of government. They could see their opponents in the next election spending good Unionist money on works that would help their Grit opponents in the next election, and they stood up and said things. Whether the Government will yield to the clamor and keep expenditures in their own hands, remains for the future to unfold. But if the legislation comes down in its present form, there will be a lot of loud talk in the House and it won't come from the Opposition benches, either.

No Apparent Rush.

And coupled with tariff propaganda and promises of bigger indemnities, come whispers of a short session now and an adjournment till after the peace terms are signed. The Government is said to be anxious to get through some pressing legislation now and lay its real troubles over till the fall. But this is hardly in keeping with present performances. The Premier, or rather Acting Premier, who is practising being a good fellow, most assiduously is encouraging his followers to make speeches and adjourning the House not later than eleven o'clock, so they can be fresh for their labors next morning. He surely does not act as if he were pushed for time or was aiming at any rush work.

Not Much Excitement.

So far as the House went yesterday, it did not furnish much that was exciting. To be sure, W. C. Kennedy, of North Essex, entered into a general arraignment of the Government's lack of business methods, and issued a clarion call to the Premier to come home and treat this country's troubles instead of pacifying the Bolsheviki and possibly earning the famous title of "Earl of Prinkipoo." It was a rather caustic criticism of several branches of the administration ,but the member of North Essex was not in good voice, and did not get his usual punch behind his remarks. Burnham of Peterboro rather squelched the rising Grit enthusiasm by declaring that Mr. Kennedy got his arguments from the Fenian press across the border, but as the only press clipping quoted was credited to F. A. MacKenzie, correspondent of the Toronto Star, Mr. Burnham was probably wrong as usual.

Doctors get Busy.

Two doctors also contributed. Since the government has announced a new Department of Health that will require a Minister, you can expect to hear from most of the doctors in the House at frequent intervals. It is just as well the Premier should know they were present in case there is trouble finding a man for the job. Anyway, Dr. Sheard, the South Toronto orator, did his bit. He filled in an hour and twenty minutes and not a second of it was devoid of noise. His effort had been heralded as a "bull-moosing" attack on the government, accentuated by the fact that Hon. James Calder had unceremoniously elbowed him out of his place in the talk line. But his oratory won't cause the government any sleepless nights. However, he was faultlessly attired and as far as appearances go might look real nice tied on to the tail end of a portfolio.

Might Overlook Tinkering.

Dr. Steele, of Perth, who also performed, is strong on statistics, and he showed how rapidly the population is being killed off by the lack of a proper health department. He also showed that he is a broad minded person who could overlook a bit of tariff tinkering if asked to join the government of which he is now a humble follower.

"The tariff that was made for the Canada of 1878," he said, "might need considerable remodelling to fit the Canada of 1920," and then he went on with one of those delightful health talks for which he is so justly famous.

However, things are warming up a bit, and if that $3500 per does not chloroform certain people the meetings of the people's representatives promise to become almost interesting.

REBUKES POLICE ARREST IF MADE AS A CIVILIAN

NEW YORK, Feb. 24.—Policemen in civilian attire who when in the performance of their duties are interfered with by citizens, and fail to disclose their identity, are not justified in arresting the public minded individual, according to a decision of the Appellate Division. Such a ruling was handed down in the appeal taken by Charles A. Levy, a law student, who had been adjudged guilty of a technical assault upon Acting Captain John P. O'Leary, of the Greenwich street police station. Levy was arrested after he protested against the officer striking a peddler who was in custody. Although he explained his ignorance of Captain O'Leary's status, Magistrate Krotel held him guilty and suspended sentence. He thereupon appealed to General Sessions, which affirmed the conviction.

Justice Loughlin, writing the opinion of the Appellate Division, said Magistrate Krotel should have discharged Levy and his conviction should have been reversed by General Sessions. It was quite evident, he said, that Captain O'Leary did not disclose his identity.

EXPORT OF WOOL FROM CANADA IS MATTER OF DOUBT

The announcement in a cable from Paris that arrangements have been complete for a credit for Roumania, and that the government of that country has been authorized to purchase in Canada $25,000,000 worth of goods under credits extended, has been received with much interest in manufacturing circles in Montreal.

It was reported some weeks ago that Roumania needed a large quantity of woolen goods, but owing to the fact that Roumania's national purse was threadbare she could not purchase. The suggestion that credits be arranged in Canada for the purchase of goods was met by divers opinions. Some thought well of the suggestion while other business men expressed the opinion that the extension of credit to Roumania was a gamble and doubted if the game was worth the candle. The cable, however, does not state that the credits have been actually arranged in Canada but that the country is authorized through credits extended to purchase goods in Canada. If the credit comes from Canada then Roumania has nothing left to do but buy in Canada.

Here comes another point of importance. Roumania is forced to purchase in Canada well and good, but particularly in the matter of woollens in Canada is called upon to compete in the export market it is not likely that Canadian goods will meet with much success, in the opinion of many.

Past History.

This is not because of the quality of the goods. It will be necessary to quote a bit of history to make the situation clear. Some fifteen years ago during the Laurier regime, it will be remembered that a furore was created in the Canadian woollen trade when the government of that day reduced the protection on Canadian woollen goods to 25 per cent. The woollen manufacturers put up a strenuous fight but nevertheless the 25 per cent protection remained. The result was that not a few woollen mills in the country were scrapped and for some reason or other, in spite of the protection, woollen manufacturers in Canada have never been able to compete with any outstanding success in the export market, and have had to meet very keen competition in the home market. By careful management and clear sighted policy some of the Canadian woollen houses have been able to rise to a position of prominence in the home market but only after great exertion.

Whether or not the old order of conditions can be abolished under the present abnormal condition of affairs and Canadian goods be able to compete with any marked degree of success in the export markets of the world is still problematical, and a point upon which few woollen manufacturers of Montreal at this stage of the game care to express any opinion. On the other hand, if Roumania, by reason of her line of credit, must purchase in Canada, then the question of prices becomes a mere bagatelle.

Need Live Stock.

Roumania, it is stated, requires, it is stated, seed wheat, oats, barley and beans, as well as railway equipment, agricultural implements and tools of all kinds. An interesting note is that live stock is required. There is plenty of the latter in Canada at the present time, but the difficulty is that of ocean tonnage. If this can be secured in any quantity it will cause a revival in the live stock trade in Canada in the opinion of many business men of the city.

Nothing Like It For Bronchitis And Weak Throat

Remarkable Cures in the Worst Cases Reported Daily

CURES WITHOUT USING DRUGS

Doctors now advocate an entirely new methods for treating bronchitis and irritable throat. Stomach dosing is no longer necessary.

The most approved treatment consists of a healing vapor resembling the pure air of the Adirondacks.

This soothing vapor is full of germ-destroying substances, and at the same time is a powerful healing agent. It is sent to the bronchial tubes and lungs through a skillfully devised inhaler that can be carried in the vest pocket. Simplicity itself is the keynote of this splendid treatment.

CATARRHOZONE is the name of this wonderful invention that is daily curing chronic cases of weak throat, bronchitis and catarrh. Every breath through the inhaler is laden with soothing, healing substances that destroy all diseased conditions in the breathing organs, it can't fail to cure because it goes where the trouble really exists, and doesn't attempt to cure an illness in the head or throat by means of medicine taken into the stomach. Catarrhozone is a direct breathable scientific cure.

There is no sufferer from the grippy cold or any winter ill, that won't find a cure in Catarrhozone, which is employed by physicians, ministers, lawyers and public men throughout many foreign lands. Large size lasts two months and cost $1.00 and is guaranteed, small size 50c. sample size 25c, all storekeepers and druggists, or the Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Canada.

Nothing worries a chronic kicker like the refusal of things to go wrong

It is all well enough to "know thyself," but if you are wise you will not boast of the acquaintance.

QUOTES ACTOR'S FERVID NOTE AS CASE AGAINST KEESE

New York, Feb. 24.—A letter full of poetic sentiment and endearing terms was submitted to the Supreme Court by Paul Keese in explanation of his estrangement from Mrs. Frances M. Keese, who is suing him for a separation. The plaintiff asserts he found the fervid missive tucked away in his wife's gown and she admitted the author was "one of her conquests."

According to Mr. Keese the note was written by Frances K. Jackson, an actor, from the Felix Portland Hotel, at No. 132 West Forty-Seventh street. When Mrs. Keese was sojourning in Boston.

After expressing his loneliness, the writer continued:—

"The be-all and the end-all of the average New Yorker are so like their signs on Broadway, a restless, showy vivid bit of mechanism, its blinding glare shutting out all view of the firmament above. Everything here partakes of the exotic and artificial.

"I can imagine you wondering what on earth that mad Englishman is scribbling reams of high falutin talk to poor unhappy Frances. He takes an interest in you. He would hate to think of you ever floating in the driftwood of the wrecked lives of this town."

FORMAL OPENING OF THE NEW DUFFUS GARAGE

The Public Are Cordially Invited to Make Themselves "At Home" During the Week of March 3rd. to 8th. Inclusive

GRAND SHOWING OF NEW MODELS

The Public of Peterborough and the surrounding district will be greatly interested in the formal opening of the new Duffus Garage, at the corner of Charlotte and Water streets, beginning on Monday, March 3rd and continuing each day and evening until Saturday, March 8th.

The new Duffus Garage is one of the first laid out buildings for the purpose in the Province. Much money has been spent in making it an up-to-date Garage for every car purpose, and Mr. Duffus will personally welcome all who come to see the advantages of the Garage, and his big display of Ford, Gray-Dort and Dodge Bros. motor cars, as well as a full line of heavy trucks.

Each evening from 7:30 to 10:30 a series of motion pictures will be shown, illustrating the construction of an automobile from the raw material to the finished product. This, of itself, will be educational and should attract a great many people. At this showing the latest models of cars will be shown in great variety, comprising the latest productions of the Ford, Gray-Dort and Dodge Bros. Plants.

You are cordially invited to be present to look over the handsome and commodious premises, to secure all the information you can in connection with the above cars, to enjoy yourself at the showing of the motion pictures, and the proprietor and staff of the Duffus Garage will do all they can in their power to give you a pleasant afternoon or evening. The invitation is general and everybody should try to attend.

3 Navy Men Blown To Atoms By Explosion Of Depth Bomb

NEW YORK, Feb. 28. — Three men attached to the naval aviation station at Rockaway Beach, were blown to atoms when a depth bomb which they were carrying along the beach, near Rockaway Point, exploded. Not even a button from the clothing of the victims could be found. There was nothing but a great hole in the ground where the explosion occurred.

The dead men were:

Ensign Henry P. Hynson, Chief Boatman's Mate Dedrich and Gunner's Mate Fred Reardon.

Ensign Hynson leaves a wife and two children at his home in Baltimore, Md. Gunner's Mate Reardon's home is in the upper part of New York State. From where Dedrich hailed could not be learned last night.

The three belonged to a party of six who had been sent from the navy aviation station to the Point in charge of a depth bomb loaded with 120 pounds of TNT, with which they were to make a test. The other three men escaped unhurt because they happened to be about one hundred and fifty feet behind the men who were carrying the bomb.

The men left the aviation station about nine o'clock with the bomb in a motor boat. They headed for Breezy point and landed at Kennedy's dock there. From that point it was necessary to carry the bomb across the sand to the other side of the bungalows to a place near Rockaway Shoals.

Survivors Knocked Down.

With two men carrying the bomb and the chief petty officer in the lead the party started along the beach from Kennedy's dock. They had proceeded only five or six hundred feet when the bomb exploded. The three men in the rear were knocked at on the sand by the concussion but were uninjured.

Great quantities of sand displaced from the crater blown in the beach by the tremendous force of the high explosive, was showered on them as they lay stunned for a moment. When they regained consciousness, and looked for their comrades they could find no trace of them anywhere in the vicinity. The three uninjured men returned to the aviation station and notified the officers of the explosion.

There was practically no one at Breezy Point where the explosion occurred except the six navy men. The section is almost deserted in the winter and the one or two persons in the vicinity were indoors at the time. One of the residents who was attracted by the explosion questioned the three survivors and was told that they believed it was caused by an attempt to roll the bomb on the ground for a moment. The bomb was a very heavy load to carry and it was thought that when the men carrying it lowered it to the ground they might have let it slip.

Medical Officer Investigates.

The police and the county officials of Queens did not learn of the explosion until several hours after it had occurred. Dr. William H. Nammack, the medical officer of Queens, went to the aviation station at Rockaway Beach and conferred with Lieut. Reynolds, the officer in charge.

Lieutenant Reynolds told Dr. Nammack, the details of the explosion as related by the three surviving men. He declined to give the names of any of the dead men until the matter had been reported to the Navy Department in Washington.

He said that a board of investigation would undoubtedly be appointed and an official investigation held. Until that time, he said, he could not discuss the matter further.

Dr. Nammack declared he would start an official investigation to-day, and try and find out why the police and the local authorities had not been notified at all, and learned of the explosion by accident.

At Third Naval District Headquarters, No. 280 Broadway, confirmation of the explosion and death of the three men was given, but the names of the men were withheld. Officers in charge said it would first be necessary to notify the relatives of the men.

Increase In Cost Of Female Jail

QUEBEC, Feb. 28.—The high cost of living has hit the women's gaol in Montreal, and the Provincial Government have entered into a new contract with Les Dames Religieuses de Notre Dame de Charite du Bon Pasteur, whereby they will give them an increased allowance for the care and maintenance of the women who are incarcerated in the women's gaol at Montreal. The last contract was entered into May 1, 1910, when a dollar went a long way, twice as far as it will go to-day, and ever since that time the provincial government have been paying to the sisters a sum ranging from $10,000 to $14,000 per annum for the maintenance of the female delinquents.

The average cost per inmate was somewhere around eight dollars a month, and the new contract between the sisters and the government allows them to look after the Roman Catholic prisoners at a price of eleven dollars per month of imprisonment, the government also undertaking to pay to the sisters $16 per month for the rent, lighting, heating, water insurance part of the salary of an engineer during the whole time that the Protestant prisoners shall be entrusted to the care of the sisters in the gaol.

This latter paragraph is, according to the resolutions that were tabled in the Legislature yesterday, to take effect from September of last year. The sisters have to undertake all repairs or minor repairs in the gaol, and provide for all the expense of maintenance, medicines and remedies for inmates, and shall pay all clerks, servants and employes whom they require for the Roman Catholic department, with exterior guards, the government agreeing to pay $250 per month for the salary of four [illegible] for the Protestant [illegible] sections.

The City's Budget And An Item Or Two It Will Not Include

In the preparation of the budget upon which this year's municipal tax rate will be based, the Council is gradually approaching the stage from which the total rate will be visible. The aldermen should find little difficulty in reducing the 1919 tax to a figure commensurate with the conditions and expenditures of restored peace. The Patriotic Fund has done its bit and should be mustered out of service this year. This bulky item will be erased, and there is an agitation up and down Ontario for the abrogation of the Provincial war tax. On the other hand, the Fire, Water and Light Committee has come through with considerably increased estimates, and it will not be surprising if the Board of Works asks for a larger appropriation, probably for the reason that its work has been curtailed by war demands, and also with the intention of providing its share of employment this summer. The Finance Committee is preparing for a field night next Tuesday when the annual grants will be submitted to microscopic inspection. Eventually the budget will be compiled and transmitted to the City Clerk's department where each citizen's share of the taxes will be computed.

Council Is Restricted.

Of the reconstruction generalities that are in the air, ratepayers may rest easy that there will be no reflex movement in the City Council. They need have no fears of experimental innovations. The City Fathers are tethered in a restricted area, and it is their complaint that they have no voice in the expenditure of a large part of the public revenue. Debenture interest has to be met, and provision made without power of veto for the requirements of the Board of Education, Police Commission, Public Library Board, and other bodies. These items must be dutifully inserted in the budget. Hence there is practically no latitude or opportunity for dabbling in new ideas. A well deserved grant of $10,000 has been made to the Great War Veterans' Association, and it is likely that a small sum will be set aside for a bathing place or two for next summer's recreation.

The citizen who impatiently demands that the city lift itself out of the rut of such routine will understand that the cost of the ventures he would propose conflict with the sentiment of the supposed majority who are more than satisfied with a tax rate "the same as last year's," and who would acclaim the Council that can effect reductions.

What Taxes Provide For.

At times even the average ratepayer wonders where his money goes from year to year when he fails to discover new and substantial improvements in the advantages of which he directly shares. He forgets that he is assured of police and fire protection, schools for his children, the convenience of sewers and cement sidewalks, asphalt pavements in the business district which at least arouse his pride in the cleanliness and good order they contribute, and road oil that lays the summer's dust on residential streets. If he lives in the outskirts he has probably developed a chronic grouch on this question, but he may console himself that at least the snow is plowed off his sidewalks in winter.

Hence, the average ratepayer should be mindful of the benefits that derive to him from his annual taxes, and if he desires further public improvements and accommodations he should signify his willingness to pay for them. And the aldermen will tell you that they are not exactly overwhelmed by demands of that tenor.

Bridges And Boys.

Profiting by one of the most impressive lessons of the war and moved by the ideals that are forming in this generation, the City Fathers might launch upon some comprehensive scheme to provide wholesome play and recreation for the boys and girls of to-day. The playgrounds idea has not received the support it deserves. Without the interest and devotion of the ladies and gentlemen who have been promoting it this movement would have soon languished and passed out. Confronted by unusual obstacles and discouragements they have, however, succeeded in extending their work, but it does not begin to embrace all the children of the city.

Athletics Have Proved Worth.

In this direction it must be obvious that some such organization as the City Council should provide the means and perhaps the leadership for athletics of older boys and young men. The vigorous games and sports familiar to Canadian boys undoubtedly contributed to the dash, endurance and self-reliance that were the outstanding fighting qualities of the Canadian soldiers. Furthermore, sports were provided for the men while in camp and billet, and the reasons that prompted this programme during war may be urged to a less extent perhaps under the happier conditions of peace at home. There is also the consideration of the physical benefits to be gained. In the past this feature of the city's life has been ignored by the Council, and left to private associations, the work was scattered and fell far short of the possible results. Playgrounds and athletic fields should afford plenty of room for tennis, baseball, football, and other games with proper accommodation for the large numbers that would certainly use them. After all the city may build good roads, and big bridges, but surely in the light of the revelations of the past four years public spirit should be determined to build up strong, healthy and happy men and women. It should be a public desire and duty. If this lesson has not been learned by Peterborough there are evidences that many other communities realize its significance. The parents to-day and the parents of to-morrow should be anxious that some public scheme should be worked whereby ample recreational and athletic advantages should be offered to the young and those who desire to remain young as long as possible.

But this is one of the innovations that would cost money. The subject is too big and serious to be dismissed in this manner, but there is apparently no other recourse when the city seems to be perpetually impecunious. One might fancy that Peterborough's shield bore that strange comic device of a man walking home in a barrel, with the inscription "Broke."

Public And Music.

Observe the Council when they gingerly address themselves to fixing an appropriation for music (?). This is of course one of the immaterial unessentials in the Council's budget. Custom and precedent has so decided and there must be no deviation. Criticism is not levelled at this or any other year's Council. They were simply running more or less smoothly and regularly in the rut. But as John Bruce told the Labour men not long ago, the people to-day, the working people are demanding as never before, their rightful share of light, life and happiness, and public bands and orchestras, play grounds, athletic fields, bathing places, are important elements in the spectrum of this new sun that is breaking through old clouds.

The musical atmosphere of Peterborough is rent with discords. The air seems to breed them prolifically, and the result is just the usual effect of division where there should be unity. A community of twenty-five thousand persons should at least possess one good band of forty-five or fifty pieces with a repertory that is not confined to so-called ephemeral "hits," an orchestra of at least the same strength, and a choral society of one hundred or more voices. If the people were disinterested in music the present poverty might be understood, but the whole city seems to attend the summer concerts in the parks. Perhaps the Friday evening crowds have simply formed a habit. However, it is evident that this is a pleasure, a little extra pleasure the whole community desires. It is something that transcends material bridges, pavements and sewers, and it carries a ray of that light and happiness mentioned. If the Council spends only $250, or at it $500, for music purposes, bricks should not be thrown at the fiddlers. The people have probably been getting more "music" than they paid for. In fact they accepted the voluntary efforts of one band or another without realizing that these organizations need financial assistance, probably without desiring better music, and without feeling that a splendid band carries a strong ray of that light and happiness spoken of.

This appropriation will be found in the Council's budget, but it has been regarded as something of a nuisance, and it has on occasion provoked unseemly discord that simply defeated the purpose of the extremely limited grant. Bridges must be built, however, and sewage disposal plants constructed, and that ideal of lightful life and happiness to the fulfillment of which music could contribute so largely must remain nebulous and remote until the people decided that the present generation is entitled to some of these ordinary joys of life while they are working and building for the generations to come after them.

They voted to send a note to Washington expressing their disapproval of the recent appointment of Prof. George D. Herron, as American delegate to Prince Island to confer with the Russians.

At the mention of the Professor's name Mrs. Wentz flushed indignantly and said the republican women heartily regretted that a "man who stood for free love and other things" should be so distinguished by the government.

The Rev. Dr. George A. Simons, recently returned from Russia, attacked the Bolsheviki in a speech at the meeting and sounded a warning against allowing the red flag of anarchy ever to wave here.

Major William H. Cressy, wearing the uniform of the Royal Serbian Army, told of his personal experiences in Armenia and Serbia, where he had charge of an American hospital.

FRENCH HAVE "BIG BERTHA"

PARIS, Feb. 28.—One of the German long-range guns, which shelled Paris at intervals during the last few months of the war, is now on its way to this city, and will be placed on exhibition in the Place de La Concorde, according to La Victoire. Marshal Foch, the newspaper says, demanded the surrender by the Germans of one of these guns, which was found by French officers near Mayence, and it is this weapon which is being sent to Paris.

Drinks Gone, Tobacco Costly; Soon Men Can't Even Look

NEW YORK, Feb. 28.— With alcoholic beverages about to be snatched from his lips, with the price of tobacco consolation soaring and income tax higher than ever, here man is destined to receive another blow when the republican women succeed in their anti-lingerie display crusade. This is their latest morality move, and was decided upon at a meeting in Delmonico's.

Already the women are out for a higher decollete and longer skirts, and now the members of the Woman's Republican Club, headed by their president, Mrs. James Griswold Wentz, have appointed a committee of six women to spread the no-lingerie exhibit propaganda in various shops where these alluring rainbow tinted filmy crepe and silk garments are spread out and draped, and otherwise enticingly arranged to attract the eye of the passer-by. On the committee are Mrs. Francis A. Winslow, Mrs. S. M. Starr, Mrs. Herbert C. Smyth, Mrs. William McDermott and Mrs. William Martin.

Accordingly to these recently enfranchised members of society, the display of silken "unmentionables" has reached a point of realism that is well nigh indecent. They have nothing to say against the artistic arrangement.

"Of course the women don't have to depend on the shop window displays of lingerie to know what is being worn because they can go in and look at them closely," explained Mrs. Albert H. Ottinger, one of the active anti-lingerieites. "I should not like to say that the windows are decorated to attract men, but we are against such exhibitions. Lingerie should be eliminated entirely from the windows."

And so bright and early in the morning the chosen sextet will sally forth to persuade the shopkeepers that something more modest in the way of feminine wearing apparel should replace the clouds of chiffon, lace and silk which have hitherto been one of their best drawing cards. Lingerie is not all that the Republican citizens protest against.

John Kendrick Bangs Delighted A Large Audience Last Night

Closing Series of Chautauqua Course Was of the Usual High Character—The Programme.

John Kendrick Bangs, famous lecturer and humourist, who spoke at the Grand Opera House last night, drew a record house of keenly interested people. His lecture on "Salubrities I Have Met," which is the last of the Chautauqua course brought here by the Local Council of Women was considered by the majority of his large audience to be the best in the course, and all shared the hope expressed by Mr. G. N. Gordon, the chairman, that Mr. Bangs' visit would not be the last.

Introduced the Speaker.

In introducing the speaker Mr. Gordon called him the foremost humourist of the past quarter of a century, adding that his greatest qualification in the eyes of his Canadian audiences lay in the fact that he had three boys at the front where the speaker himself had spent three months recently. Mr. Bangs thanked the chairman for his words and said they were the most gracious and comprehensive that had ever been used over the remains. He then told of some exceedingly ridicrous introductions he had had in different parts of the country.

The subject of his lecture had originated in a small country town where he was asked to speak. On his arrival at the town he found himself advertised as about to speak on "Salubrities I Have Met." Perplexed he asked the chairman what he meant and found that by a printer's error he had been given the subject of a lecturer who was to come in six weeks to speak on "Celebrities I Have Met."

A Celebrity.

"A salubrity," Mr. Bangs explained, "is an individual who is a celebrity or not a celebrity." By way of contrast Mr. Bangs spoke first of a celebrity who is not a salubrity, Winston Spencer Churchill, the man who was really accountable for the preparedness of the British Navy at the outbreak of the war. In proving him not to belong to the salubrity class Mr. Bangs described his first meeting with the man called by the late King Edward "half English, half American, and wholly undesirable." At a dinner given for Mr. Churchill on his arrival in America the guest of honour put through the reception of the guests invited to meet him with astonishing dispatch, and Mr. Bangs described his hand shake as a hurried grasp of his three middle fingers. Mr. Churchill then stared abstractedly at the wall while the guests waited the next development in embarassed silence. Presently somebody suggested to Mr. Bangs that he should break the ice which he proceeded to endeavour to do, and on being introduced for the second time, Mr. Bangs explained that he had already been introduced but wished to shake hands with Mr. Churchill's fourth finger and thumb which he had missed. Mr. Churchill surveyed Mr. Bangs from head to foot and turned again to the wall, "and I got," he said, "one of the finest views of a back that has ever fallen to my lot to see, something like the view the maids in William of Hohenzollern's kitchen got of the Kaiser's back as he retreated out of the kitchen windows at Potsdam on his way to Germany." That man could never be a salubrity as he totally lacks a sense of humour, said the speaker.

In introducing his true salubrities Mr. Bangs illustrated his conception of what really constituted such by the story of a crippled old man who lived near him in Maine, and who no matter what the conditions, always carried the same bright smile and greeting. Meeting him one day in the pouring rain the old man raised a crippled arm and declared it was the finest day of the kind he had ever known.

It is time some one made over some of the yellow journals of the day which the muck rakers make it appear that the only way to success lies in graft and trampling over the other man, he said. One of the speaker's most salubrious salubrities had suffered from the muck rakers and been maligned by the as cold and heartless. I speak, he said, of Richard Harding Davis, who I know as full of tender human sympathy. In three Christmases I spent with him I personally knew him to draw from his own money $500 and going into the poverty stricken regions of New York and spend every penny in trying to bring the joy to the poor little children that circumstances had denied them."

Maligned by Muckrakers.

Another great man who has been maligned by the muckrakers is Rudyard Kipling. He has been called the worst mannered man alive, totally lacking in manners and one who should have died twenty-five years ago. Kipling's manners depended upon hiis company and took on the quality of the man he spoke with. His reputation as the worst mannered man dated from his meeting with an editor who in shaking hands commented, "Why you're not such a boor as you are reported to be." "Why my dear sir," responded Kipling, "I have manners of all kinds constantly in stock; can I take your order." If any one tells you his genius has departed, and if you don't find the charm of his works of twenty-five years ago, you may find the reason for his change in character in the death of his little daughter, who was his inspiration. Mr. Bangs himself, considers some of his recent work, however, the finest ever produced.

A Salubriette.

Not all salubrities are men. One of the most charming ones Mr. Bangs ever met was a salubriette, Sir Henry Stanley's wife, Dorothy Tennant. Her proof of salubriousness lay in the gracious tribute she paid to Mrs. Richard Henry Stoddard, whose intellectual gifts had after her marriage been overshadowed by those of her husband. Meeting Mrs. Stoddard at an immense reception given for Sir Henry and his wife in New York, Lady Stanley said, "I do not care to meet Mrs. Stoddard(but I'd love to meet Elizabeth Barstow Stoddard, whose books I have read with keenest interest."

In continuing Mr. Bangs told anecdotes from his personal experience with such celebrities as Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, and Mark Twain, which served as conclusive evidence that these men are true salubrities, and in which one could not fail but recognize the speaker's respect for Great Britain. He concluded by giving recitations of which he was author.

A Programme.

A pleasing programme which Mr. Gordon pointed out had been submitted to the Woman's Council, preceded the lecture. The artists taking part were Mr. S. J. Graham, Mr. W. T. Ward, Miss Lillian Eastwood and Miss Doris Rathbone.

Secret Baker Order Provided That Conscientious Objectors Be Treated With Tender Care

Letter Directing "Kindly Consideration" For Them Read at Senate Hearing—Not to Be Classed as Law Violators

WASHINGTON, March 1.—That Secretary of War Baker ordered divisional commanders of the American Army to treat conscientious objectors with "kindly consideration," and not as having violated military law, was disclosed before the Senate Military Affairs Committee while it was investigating charges that Mr. Baker insisted upon rigid adherence to harsh and unjust court martial procedure against soldiers in the field.

During the defence by high officers of the War Department of the system of army justice Senator Chamberlain interrupted to read into the record a confidential letter which had been sent to the commands of all Nationals Guard and national army camps, ordering consideration for conscientious objectors. Mr. Baker stated this letter under no circumstances was to be given to the newspapers.

In introducing the letter, Senator Chamberlain reserved the right to incorporate in the record "any denial which Secretary Baker may choose to make."

Text of Baker Letter.

The letter which was introduced was as follows:—

War Department, Washington, October 16, 1918.

Confidential.

From the Adjutant General of the Army.

To the Commanding Generals of all National Army and National Guard Division camps.

Subject:—Conscientious objectors.

1. The Secretary of War directs that you be instructed to segregate the conscientious objectors in the divisions and to place them under supervisions of instructors who shall be specially selected with a view of insuring that these men will be handled with tact and consideration, and that their questions will be answered fully and frankly.

2. With reference to the attitude of objecting to military service, these men are not to be treated as violating military laws, thereby subjecting themselves to the penalties of the articles of war, but their attitude in this respect will be quietly ignored and they will be treated with kindly consideration. Attention in this connection is invited to a case where a number of conscientious objectors in one of our divisions, when treated in this manner, renounced the original objections to military service and voluntarily offered to give the best efforts to the service of the United States as soldiers.

3. It is desired that after the procedure above indicated shall have been followed for a sufficient length of time to afford opportunity to judge of the results arrived therefrom, a report of the action taken and the results obtained under these instructions is to be submitted to the War Department by each division commander. As a result of the consideration of all these reports further instructions will be issued by the Secretary of War as to the policy to be observed in the future in the case of conscientious objectors.

4. Under no circumstances are the instructions contained in the foregoing to be given to the newspapers.

(Signed) H. S. LARNED, Adjutant General.

The Quick Way to Stop a Cough

This home-made syrup does the work in a hurry. Easily prepared, and saves about $2.

You might be surprised to know that the best thing you can use for a severe cough, is a remedy which is easily prepared at home in just a few moments. It's cheap, but for prompt results it beats anything else you ever tried. Usually stops the ordinary cough or chest cold in 24 hours. Tastes pleasant, too—children like it—and it is pure and good.

Pour 2½ ounces of Pinex (50 cents worth) in a 16-oz. bottle, then fill it up with plain granulated sugar syrup. Or use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup, if desired. This you make 16 ounces—a family supply—but costing no more than a small bottle of ready-made cough syrup.

And as a cough medicine, there is really nothing better to be had at any price. It goes right to the spot and gives quick, lasting relief. It promptly heals the inflamed membranes that line the throat and air passages, stops the annoying throat tickle, loosens the phlegm, and soon your cough is gone entirely. Splendid for bronchitis, croup, whooping cough and bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of Norway pine extract, famous for its healing effect on the membranes.

To avoid disappointment ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

CHAUFFEUR WAYLAID IN HALL OF HIS HOME AND KILLED

NEW YORK, Feb. 27.—An unidentified man lay in wait in the hallway of No. 65 Grand Avenue, Brooklyn, and when James Canale, a chauffeur, thirty-one years old, was about to enter the house shot him in the right temple. Canale died with a few minutes. The slayer escaped.

The police learned a stranger was seen about the place at about nine o'clock that night, but he was not seen to enter the house.

Several persons heard the shot fired and rushed into the street, but found no trace of the assailant.

Canale's wife and his brother-in-law, Thomas Lamont, told Detective Captain Coughlin, so far as they knew Canale had no enemies and are at a loss to explain his murder.

THE MINSTRELS AT THE Y.M.C.A.

Boom! Boom! Boom! What's that? No it isn't the re-opening of hostilities but the gun to announce the Y. M.C.A. minstrels. This group of artists will present their classy show during the third week of March at the Grand Opera House. The director, Mr. Asa Huycke, is enthusiastic over the work of the minstrels and promises a rare treat for those who are fortunate enough to secure seats for one of the nights. The programme consists of songs, jokes, quartettes, dances and a string quartette. The work of the minstrels will be of the highest class ever presented in this city, either amateur or professional.

The proceeds are to be used to place a fitting honour roll of Y.M.C.A. members who have served in the great war, and the friends of the Association are asked to keep this object in view when canvassed by those selling tickets.

Subscription lists are already out. Those subscribing to these lists will have one day advantage in securing reservation of seats.

MARTIAL LAW.

(Canadian Press.)

PARIS, March 1. — Soldiers' and Workmen's Congress at Munich has declared martial law for all of Bavaria.

Will Assume The Management

Mr. H. F. Dahn has arrived in the city and will assume the management of the Grand Opera House in the interests of Mr. A. J. Small, the purchaser. Mr. Dahn has had considerable experience in theatre management and local patrons may rely on a continuation of the excellent service provided by J. J. Turner & Sons.

THE PIERROT PLAYERS.

Every standard first class orchestra has its bright spots, but just think of a performance that contains a stream of twenty distinct musical productions woven together by bright dialogue, melodious song and sprightly dance. This is the unusual performance of the famous English Pierrot Players, at the Grand next Wednesday, March 5th, with a Special Large Matinee at 2.30, a positive novelty in stage attractions that delight the theatre goer, who has so often been disappointed. Each number in this performance is a gem, a charming combination of fun that is really funny and singing that is really singing. The cast are well known stars in the musical world, headed by Eugene Burkhart, late of the Reviera Girl Company, and augmented by a special ladies' orchestra.

GIBBS FINDS SMALL MEN BEST SOLDIER

Stand Up Better Under Terrific Strain on Nerves, Says Correspondent

NEW YORK,—Philip Gibbs was received with great enthusiasm at the City Club where an audience too great for the main hall gathered to hear him. Many who came were disappointed because no space remained even on the stairs leading to the assembly room where he spoke.

The audience applauded when Gibbs was described as "the finest war correspondent that ever lived" by Frederick Villiers, the oldest and most experienced of war correspondents, from whom Kipling is supposed to have drawn "The Naughai" in "The Light that Failed."

Mr. Gibbs discussed different types of courage displayed by soldiers. He said that it was his own observation, corroborated by the opinions of eminent military men with whom he had spoken, that the men from cities, even those weak in stature and constitution, had proved themselves among the greatest of soldiers

"Strangely enough," he said, "the undersized men, who appeared to be nervous and tongue-tied as if they could never stand the battle strain, held out better than the bigger man This was especially apparent in cases of shell shock The big men of the Sergeant-Major type, the 'John Bull Englishmen, broke up much quicker under this terrific ordeal Men of the little nervous type, by nerve control, succeeded better in standing this and many of the other kinds of strain.

Mr. Gibbs asserted that the bravery of a soldier was not absence of fear, but control over fear and ability to carry on their work in spite of fear. There was no soldier, he said, who had not experienced fear constantly. The apparent callousness and heartlessness of the soldiers in the midst of death, he said, did not indicate blunted sensibilities, but was an armour put on to save himself.

"I remember," he said, "when some Londoners were brought up on one occasion after a heavy bombardment in which many lives had been lost. There was one spot where five men lay, all with their heads torn off by shells. One of the men who saw it exclaimed:

"'Oh, I say, these fellows have lost their heads a bit.'

"In this room I know that sounds ghastly indeed, but this grim and terrible jest did not reflect the mood of the man who made it. He knew that he and those with him would be facing the same fate in a few minutes and he was determined not to let this terrible sight affect his nerve His jest aided him and his fellows in fighting off the dreadful impression of the spectacle."

Mr. Gibbs told various other stories of the courage of undersized and nervous men, including one of a little British Sergeant in charge of a handful of men, who were on top of a German dugout where they had reason to believe a fair sized nest of Huns were in hiding. The Sergeant caught one German coming out, captured him and asked him if he could speak English.

"Nein," was the reply.

"Well, you will have to learn it very quick," said the Sergeant. "You tell the rest of them in there that they will have to come out now, or something terrible will happen them."

The German developed a sudden gift of language, descended the dugout and came out with some forty others.

Mr. Gibbs praised the courage of the Americans, which, he said, was of the highest type. He said that no courage shown by men could exceed the fortitude and bravery which had been exhibited by French, British, Belgian and American women in France and Belgium, and he told many stories to illustrate their courage.

Mr. Villiers, who has "reported" every war since the days of the commune in Paris in 1871, told of his first meeting with Gibbs in the Balkan war, and later in the early days of the present war, when he said that he had predicted a great career for the famous young correspondent. Frank Dilnot, President of the Foreign Press Correspondents in the United States, presided at the meeting.

Appendicitis Operations Not Always Necessary

Internal Bathing Relieves the Cause.

Your physician will tell you that Appendicitis is an inflamed condition of the little sack called the Appendix at the lower right hand corner of the Colon or large intestine. By flushing this Colon with purified warm water by the "J. B. L. Cascade" this sack is cleansed and the inflammation subsides. Hundreds of operations have been avoided by using the warm water cure for Appendicitis. Mr. Jas. McLaughlin of Evanston street, Winnipeg, writes:—

"I have spent over fifty dollars with doctors trying to cure Appendicitis. Finally the doctor said I must go to the hospital at once for an operation Your advertisement interested me. I bought a 'J. B. L. Cascade,' which relieved me at once, and am now completely cured. Never felt better in my life; all pain and soreness gone, and I eat and sleep like a boy. I am grateful to Dr. Tyrrell for this wonderful health-giving invention."

Ninety-five per cent. of all human ills are caused by accumulated waste in the Colon. Internal Bathing with the "J. B. L. Cascade" keeps this large intestine as free from all waste and as clean as nature demands it should be for perfect health. Ask Warne Drug Co., Peterborough, for booklet called "Why Man of To-day is Only 50 Per Cent. Efficient." It is free. They will also be leased to show and explain the "J. B. L. Cascade" to you.

Imported Champagne To Cost $100 A Quart, Say Retailers

NEW YORK. March 1.—Champagne at $25 a glass or $100 a bottle if the whole quart is taken, became an actual probability yesterday when it was learned from hotel and restaurant owners that wholesale dealers, in view of the increased taxation rates, had purchased the entire supply for sale and were holding it for the figures named.

Domestic champagne can be bought for less, said the hotel men yesterday, but imported champagne will certainly bring $100 a quart before June 30, and be scarce at that. The reason, they said, lies in the extraordinary heavy buying of recent days, which emptied almost all cellars with the exception of those which have laid out for higher prices.

The news that the champagne market had been cornered by certain wholesale dealers followed closely upon the raising of prices for every drink in which alcohol is an ingredient. Inquiries at the Commodore, Biltmore, Park Avenue, Vanderbilt, McAlpin and Pennsylvania hotels, at Jack's, Healy's, Murray's, Churchill's and other favourite drinking stands showed that everywhere cocktails and highballs had been increased from five to ten cents a drink, beer the same, and whiskey boosted more than $3 a gallon.

Highballs a Bit Higher.

This increase means that cocktails will range in price from thirty-five to eighty-five cents, with highballs running the scale from forty-five cents to one round dollar apiece. Beer can be purchased at none of the high class bars for less than fifteen cents—the glass in this instance being something a bit larger than a thimble.

Pitchers of beer which have ranged from forty cents to eighty-five cents, according to the locality of the bar, the value of the pictures, the number of girls in the cabaret and the age of the bartender's mother-in-law, have now felt the plebian stage and become patrician at prices ranging from sixty cents to $1.10.

An ojen or an orange blossom cannot be purchased for less than forty cents, where they were formerly twenty-five and thirty cents, while a highball from the well known pinch bottle will demand the exchequer at least fifty cents. Fizzes, rickeys, punches, flips, cobblers, mint juleps and daisies ranges between thirty-five and eighty cents, while Dubonnet, Benedictine, Kiimmel and chartreuse seek even higher level

Fewer Patrons, More Drinking.

Despite the increase in prices cafe and hotel bar managers reported greater sales than for many weeks. There are fewer patrons, they say, but each patron buys more. At one hotel it was said that the bar receipts for yesterday were more than the hotel receipts from restaurant, dining rooms, hotel rooms and the bar combined have been heretofore. This is explained by the bulky packages which are seen crowding the subway nightly that Mr. Shonts may have to build annexes thereto for the budget.

The only [illegible] along the horizon of the cafe and hotel managers yesterday was the [illegible] that President Wilson intended to announce that war conditions and restrictions had been lifted, thereby placing the country on a normal drinking basis until January 23, 1920.

FACTORIES SEEK GOVERNMENT AID IN TRAINING WORKERS

WASHINGTON, D. C.—"Training" will be the watchword in many of the large factories of the United States during 1919, according to indications reported by the Department of Labor. Through its training service the department is now directing 155 training rooms in plants, and there is a long waiting list of applicants for the expert assistance that the government provides.

As a result of meetings of progressive manufacturers, held recently in four large cities in New York State, the training service has been overwhelmed with requests for surveys of large plants in Eastern cities. The purpose is for the trained experts employed by the Department of Labor to show defects in the operation of factories, and to point out weak spots in organization at the same time making suggestions for the improvement of working conditions and the increase of efficiency among persons already employed.

An idea of the scope of this movement may be obtained from the fact that one of the most extensive corporations manufacturing rubber goods has made arrangements to install in each of its fifteen plants an extensive training room. These fifteen training rooms will be under the direction of the Department of Labor. Another big undertaking assigned to the Training Service is the installation of training rooms in the seven plants operated by the largest manufacturer of farming implements in the United States. Two of these training rooms have already been established and are working successfully.

A Measure.

One of the interesting features of what may be called a national awakening to the importance of the scientific training of workers is that all lines of manufacturing appear to be interested. For instance, a manufacturer of cameras and photographic supplies has established recently a large training room, and a manufacturer of lenses has placed so much stress on the value of careful preparation for employment in his factory that he has installed a department in which employees may be instructed in all the delicate processes necessary in high quality production.

In line with these factories engaged on special lines of work, any textile manufacturers are about to establish training rooms. The Department of Labor is preparing extensive plans for an association comprising 300 manufacturers.

In the widespread schooling of workers, economists see one of the most encouraging signs of the times. The war has taught the importance of efficiency, and in the strain attendant on high speed production weakness in organization and defects in methods of operation have been revealed. In preparing for the readjustment attendant to peace, manufacturers are inclined to make the most of the lessons taught in time of national stress.

The training encouraged by the Department of Labor is that which first improves the workers already employed, assuring upgrading and progress. The training of the recruits necessary from time to time is secondaryi in importance, but experts believe that the time has gone when a new worker should be compelled to fumble and experiment in learning to perform any task in a factory.

The C.M.A. Opposing Railway War Board

Important Action in Regard to Order Issued by the Companies.

Great opposition has developed in manufacturing circles to the recent order of the Canadian Railway War Board which demands that shippers pay cash or provide a bond for the freight charges on their shipments.

The situation as viewed by the manufacturers is unfair in that there is no appeal from the order of the Railway War Board which is composed of the railways themselves, and wipes out the old practice of freight settlements on a seven-day basis.

Freight charges were formerly paid on the 7th, 14th, 21st and end of each month, and to obtain a seven-day credit the manufacturers have to put up a bond with a recognized bonding company. The point of view of many of the large concerns is that their credit stands as high as that of any bonding company could possibly do, and that the railways are acting unfairly in making the demand.

As the matter is entirely one of credit the Dominion Railway Board has no jurisdiction in the case, and the railway companies will make a considerable saving in doing away with their collection departments. In Toronto alone the cost of collection was upwards of $3,000 a month, and by making the manufacturers pay cash this cost will be eliminated.

An appeal to the companies for the restoration of the former conditions is being made by the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, which has received hundreds of complaints from members all over the country.

SULTAN USES DOUBLOONS.

Ruler of Zanzibar, However, Exchanges Them in London.

On the occasion of his recent visit to Britain, the Sultan of Zanzibar brought a number of Spanish gold doubloons to meet some of the expenses of his journey. Not being ordinary currency, the doubloons were taken to a city bank, and after the necessary formalities were exchanged into more convenient coinage.

The coins, which are now being melted down, realized some $2,500, the intrinsic value of each doubloon being about $18.50.

The broker who handled them said: "The coins were in a fine state of preservation. They had doubtless been kept for many years in the royal treasury, as they were not in the least worn. I believe all the coins were of the same reign."

Remove the white spots on floors with a cloth moistened with water, and a few drops of ammonia. Finish with oil.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

MIDLAND BASEBALL LEAGUE IS NOW IN PROCESS OF FORMATION

Peterboro' and Surrounding Towns Will Become Members of the League

An amateur Midland League, comprising Port Hope, Cobourg, Oshawa, Bowmanville, Lindsay and Peterborough, is now in the process of formation. Mr. J. J. Solomon, who was the principal promoter of last year's Twilight Baseball League, has communicated with the above places with a view of starting an amateur baseball league, which will to some extent take the place of the defunct Canadian League. Favourable replies have been received from Lindsay and Cobourg, and in a few days word is expected from the other towns proposed to be embraced in the new league. Although all of these towns may not come into the new league, it is practically assured that such a league will be formed. Cobourg may join forces with its neighbour, Port Hope, and Bowmanville may not be enthusiastic, but other towns near this would be willing to join. This league would not affect the standing of the City Amateur Baseball League, which this year will dispense ball at Riverside Park the same as last year.

Twilight Games.

It has been suggested that Twilight games be played in the new league together with Saturday afternoon games. Also if the city could be prevailed upon to change the summer half holiday from Thursday afternoon to Wednesday, ball would be played on that day, as the other towns also have Wednesday as a half-holiday during July and August. Peterborough's team in the new league would be picked from the star players of the City League, who would in this way be members of two teams. The other towns who have no city league would pick a team from the baseball talent of the town, and games rivalling the semi pro-organizations should be seen this season at Riverside. A trophy would be put up for the new league, and would have the advantage over the News Trophy of the Ontario Amateur Baseball Association, that it would be eligible for towns that have no city leagues to compete for it. If the Daylight Saving Bill is kept in force this summer the games will run into the regular nine innings, otherwise a seven-inning game would have to be played.

Dates Announced For The O. H. A. Hockey Finals

The Dates for the Allen Cup Games to Be Played Later

(Canadian Press.)

TORONTO, March 1. — Secretary W. A. Hewitt, of the Ontario Hockey Association, has announced the following dates for playing off the finals in the Senior, Intermediate and Junior Sections:

Senior, Wednesday, March 5th, winner of St. Pats.-Kitchener game (being played to-night) vs. Hamilton. At Hamilton.

Saturday, March 8, Hamilton vs. winner of St. Pats.-Kitchener game. At Toronto Arena.

Intermediate, Thursday, March 6, Kingston, at winner of Seaforth-Collingwood.

Peterborough Lost Opening Round

Lindsay Will Play Return Match Here Next Week

Lindsay rinks finished 20 up on three visiting rinks from Peterborough yesterday, who were on hand to play for the Peterborough-Lindsay cup. Lindsay rinks will play the return match in Peterborough next week. Skip Sisson drew away from Skip Webb early in the game, while Skip Beall had a hard fight with Skip J. Skinner nosing out by 5 shots. Skip Carley was a tie coming home and managed to tally three on the last end.

Voice of The People

RE WOOD ALCOHOL.

Dear Sir,—I see by the press of late there is alarm expressed at the fatalities through wood alcohol drinking, and that by some papers that never condemned the liquor traffic, which for years destroyed not in ones and twos, but by the hundreds, annually. I admit that is sad to read of the three men dead in New Ontario, the ones and twos through the country, and now two in Welland. The deaths in our city caused (safety first) to wish something could be done, and another suggests stopping its manufacture, but the industries demand so much of it. The druggist suggested to the coroner that its name should be changed. My fellow townsman in the long ago, said, "What's in a name would not a rose by any other name smell as sweet."

My suggestion is bone dry prohibition, so that the coming generation will be raised without that craving for strong drink. Permit me to say I have handled in my work wood alcohol for 60 years and thought no more of drinking it than the furniture varnish. It is plain the liquor interests dread the loss of that craving, hence the agitation for the privilege of selling stronger beer. They will try and exploit labour men to help it on.

Yours,
ED. COURTNEY.

THE DOG NUISANCE AGAIN.

To the Editor of the Examiner:

Sir: Is the city dog bylaw dead or only dormant? Or are our City Fathers dead or only sleeping? That they have not become aware of the re-appearance of the dog nuisance. We were all overjoyed last summer and last fall that the dog catcher, Jimmy Gates, had nearly exterminated these pests; but it looks as if the nuisance was going to be allowed to spread again. All this week battalions of dogs have been seen on the warpath in our neighborhood, tramping over and besieging the highways and hedges night and day in a riotous way.

Surely this is not going to be allowed to continue after the good work accomplished by the council last year. I hope to have your help, Mr. Editor, as well as the assistance of our older men in enforcing the dog bylaw, which I hope is still alive and operative. Yours truly, Citizen.

To the Editor of the Examiner,

Dear Sir,—We, Mr. and Mrs. David McIntosh and children, wish to thank the different societies, the G.W.V.A., the churches, the employees and all their friends, who so kindly helped them in their recent trouble. We feel as if we could not express in words our thanks to all who so kindly sympathized with us in our awful fire.

We also wish to say something with regards to the hundred dollars the 57th Chapter I.O.D.E. were supposed to have given us. So many people have spoken to us with regards the hundred dollars. We thought it our duty to explain matters.

As far as we know with regards to it, when we went to the G.W.V.A., Mrs. Mills explained through the telephone that, the chapter was going to give us the hundred dollars, (and that is why it was printed, supposedly in mistake). But Mrs. Mills suggested they turn the hundred dollars over to the ladies Auxiliary. So that is really all we know with regards to the money. Any who have wondered if we got the money, now know, that the G.W.V.A. kindly turned us over all the money except that which they did not receive to give us.

Thanking one and all again and any who would like to call we will be "At Home" to them on Monday evening, March 3rd.

We once more thank one and all and we beg to remain,

Mr. and Mrs. D. J. McIntosh,
272 Charlotte street,
City.

ARE WE DOWN-HEARTED?

Editor, Examiner:

As a one-time resident of Peterborough, who knows Canada from coast to coast, as also much of the U.S.A., I am interested to see Peterborough take her place in the forward movement we all look to see Canada take in the days of reconstruction.

Like many more I went west some years ago, because home was depreciated and the west painted in glowing colours.

In the west they have no room for "knockers," either in city, town, or village. Every one "boosts." A spirit of healthy rivalry and co-operation is developed, eliminating jealousy between the towns. On the whole the natural advantages are no greater than in the east, but are different in character.

Peterborough has magnificent assets in the beautiful chain of waters surrounding; near-by water-power, sufficient for industries of a city ten times our present size; water, as well as rail communication, of the best, and a sanitary situation (underlaid largely with gravel), giving one of the lowest death-rates in the country.

The 20th century is Canada's, and there are a number of the cities going to get a start in this period of reconstruction which will give them an impetus over all the others for all time. Our tradition is for enterprise ahead of the surrounding towns, for I remember when we were larger. This city to-day equals in population and business four of them combined.

Start something. With a live Board of Trade, a Fifty Thousand Club would be a great auxiliary; and get everyone into it, to advertise your advantages to the world, all pulling together. A lot of perfectly good energy goes to waste here, in apology and deprecation of this city, and largely by people who have not travelled and seen those green hills far away.

After three years' service, I returned shortly to the coast, where the spirit I suggest you rouse here anchored so many of us years ago.—Yours for a prosperous Peterborough.

PETROGRAD A CITY OF DEAD AND DYING

Prof. Lappodanilevsky and Other Eminent Scholars Succumb There To Starvation

LONDON, Feb. 28. — Professor Lappodanilevsky has died of starvation in Petrograd. So it goes on. I suppose we must harden ourselves to the thought that the great city is now a city of the dead and dying and that as the weeks pass news of the passing of one's friends will trickle by little by little filter through.

I spent many days with Professor Lappodanilevsky in 1906, when he came over with Professor Struve and Milukoff to lecture at Cambridge. He was a very gentle, unassuming man, a scholar pure and simple, remote from all practical life. He specialized in such abstruse subjects as philosophy and the method of history, and numismatics, and had a great reputation among those who understand these things. Cambridge gave him a doctorate. Now he has died of starvation.

Professor Lappodanilevsky was a Fellow of the Russian Academy, which means he had reached the highest rank in Russian scholarship.

The academy is sadly depleted now. Not long ago another Fellow died of starvation, Professor Smirnoff, a very distinguished authority on the history of art and keeper of the Hermitage, the famous Russian art gallery. People who saw him say his very limbs and his fingers and his face were swollen from hunger before he died. Another Fellow, Professor Liapunoff, shot himself in despair.

"The Secretary of the Academy, my friend Professor Oldenburg, is, I am told by friends who saw him recently, working on at his post, but is shrunken and very gray. Some of those Fellows, like Professor Struve, Professor Rostofftseff, who is now in Oxford, and Professor Hiakhmatioff, the greatest authority on the Russian language, succeeded in escaping abroad. The former President of the Academy, Grand Duke Nicholas Mickaelovich, was recently shot by the Bolsheviki, but then, although he was an eminent historian and wrote the best account of the reign of Alexander I, and took no part whatever in politics, he had the misfortune of being a Grand Duke.

Yet the Academy and professors generally have not been specially persecuted by the Bolsheviki. The Commissary for Education, Lunacharsky, transferred the professor to the first food category, which allows them an amount of rations equivalent to that received by the workmen, whereas other intellectuals are in the third category, which is a euphemism for slow starvation.

But you may easily starve in the first category unless you have money and energy to discover and buy at high prices contraband supplies that alone make existence in Petrograd possible. The temperament of distinguished scholars is evidently not adopted to this kind of underhand foraging, and so they die.

There is food enough in the country near Petrograd. The population of the city is now 700,000 as compared with 2,000,000 before the Bolshevist coup d'etat, but if you try to bring in food from the country it is taken from you by armed guards at the railway stations and toll bars. Butter costs in Petrograd, if you can find it, from 100 to 120 rubles a pound. Near Volocda the peasants bury it in the ground rather than sell it at the Soviet's fixed price or give it up to the Soviet's armed food brigades. This system is throttling the great city.

I think of my German friend there. He was Feigelson, news editor of the Rech and the kindest of men. The paper was closed. He was in the third category. He scraped together enough money to send his family to South Russia. Then for days his friends heard nothing of him. One evening he rang up the wife of a colleague and asked if he might come to her. He was not well. He was hungry. He did not come. The next morning they went to look for him and found him lying in his overcoat in the entry of his flat. He had died of starvation.

Another journalist, a leader writer on the same paper and assistant editor of the Chief Russian Review, was thrown into a foul prison, forced to clean the latrines, and then sent to dig trenches on the Archangel front. —New York Times.

Two Policemen Slain

One Killed Instantly, Other Wounded Fatally After Rahway (N.J.) Street Fight.

NEW YORK, March 1.—Two policemen were killed here while attempting to make an arrest on the second floor of No. 8 Main street, Rahway, N.J. Giuseppe Musachio, of that address is under arrest. The police say he admitted he did the shooting.

Policeman James Lynch, returning from a dance in plain clothes, arrested a man named Pashira after stopping a fight at the junction of Main and Irving streets and Central avenue. He took the man to the police station and returned to the Main street house with Policeman Jacob Kraus to arrest other men suspected of having been engaged in the fight.

The two policemen forced a door in the house and Lynch was killed as he stepped into the room. Kraus followed Lynch into the room and was struck by a bullet just below the heart. He staggered to the police station, reported the shooting and died an hour later in the Rahway Hospital.

While the police were searching Musachio's rooms, he entered the police station in his bare feet to say that some one had been shot in his place. After examination the police say he admitted having done the shooting with a revolver, which he afterward threw into the river back of his house.

Musachio and Francisco Argentina, arrested after the shooting, were locked up and are being held pending investigation.

OBITUARY

WILFRID CROUGH

The death occurred at his home Saturday morning, February 22nd of Wilfrid Laurier Crough, the eighteen year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Crough, Ennismore.

The deceased was a pupil in the second form of the Ennismore Continuation School where he attended regularly up until a few days before his death which resulted from influenza followed by an attack of pneumonia.

Besides a father and mother there is left to mourn his loss, two sisters and four brothers, namely, Spr. Herb Crough now in North Wales, England, Mr. J. A. Crough of Rockyford, Alberta, Miss Eunice, who had been visiting her brother and cousin at Rockyford, masters Francis and Daniel also Miss Flora at home.

The funeral took place on Monday from the family residence to St. Martin's church where high mass was celebrated by the Rev. Father McAuley, thence to St. Martin's cemetery where the body was placed in the vault when it will be laid to rest. Rev. Father Galvin was present at the funeral mass on Monday.

AT MURRAY STREET CHURCH.

In connection with the Sunday School Convention held in our city on Sunday and Monday, Rev. P. K. Dayfoot, M.A., will speak at the evening service in Murray Street Baptist Church on Sunday. To this service all Sunday School teachers and officers and parents will be cordially welcomed. Dr. Dayfoot is an expert in his department, and will be most helpful to all who have problems in connection with their children or their Sunday School classes.

The pastor, Rev. T. R. Webb, will preach in the morning, and the Communion service will be conducted on that occasion.

GRAND SONG SERVICE AT TRINITY CHURCH SUNDAY NIGHT

The services in the Trinity Methodist church to-morrow will be of special interest to both old and young. At the morning service the pastor, the Rev. F. E. Malott, will speak on "Making the Most of Oneself." He will review the character and career of Sir Wilfrid Laurier. The young people of Trinity Congregation are especially requested to be present at the morning service.

At night a grand service of song will be given by the choir. The following selections will be rendered: "Unfold ye Portals Everlasting," from Gounod's Redemption.

"A Song of the Night,' Woodman.

A quartette will be given, and a solo, "Love Eternal," by Stephen Adams, will be sung by Mrs. King.

The pastor's evening theme will be "A Young Minstrel and a Mad King." All are welcome at these services.

Plans Completed For The Sunday School Convention

Several Visiting Ministers Have Arrived in the City for the Occasion.

The stage is set, the instruments tuned, the public enthused and the workers anxious for the curtain to rise for the big Sunday School Convention in George Street Methodist Church, Peterborough.

The following clergymen arrived to-day: Rev. T. A. Halpenny, B.A., who will be the guest of Mr. Walter Fisher, Water street; Rev. P. K. Dayfoot, M.A., who will be entertained by a fellow M.A., Mr. Joseph Wearing, while Rev. C. A. Myers will accept the hospitality of other friends.

The people of Peterborough will be glad to know that one of our own ladies in the person of Mrs. H. R. H. Kenner, B.A., has an important place on the programme, the subject she will deal with being "Lesson Preparation and Presentation." Never in the history of the Association did the enthusiasm run so high and rightly so for never in the history of our Empire was the need so great, the demand so apparent, the importance so imperative as it is right now, facing as our boys and girls are a new dawn filled with responsibilities we had not to face in our day. So it is little wonder that those tireless, unselfish men and women, the Sunday School workers who have the futures of our children so much at heart, get all excited anticipating a Convention which will be not only interesting and instructive, but will fit them the better to help our child.

The officers expect a large County representation and are anxious lest our Country cousins will attend in greater numbers than our city folk, and let it be thoroughly understood that the public are heartily invited and it is hoped many will avail themselves of this opportunity of learning how their children are trained. If you are interested in your boy or girl your presence will show it.

DEATH.

RISHOR—On Friday, February 28, 1919, in Peterboro, Mrs. Charles Rishor. The funeral will take place from the family residence, 168 London street, at two o'clock on Monday to Little Lake Cemetery.

IN MEMORIAM.

IN MEMORIAM.

Written in memory of Mrs. William Lockington, whose life has chimed to eventide at the ripe old age of more than fourscore years, her heavenward journey is now finished, a journey though by no means fraught with ease or luxury, yet trod by her in love, gentleness and godly dignity. In the memory of her family and friends will never perish the knowledge of her worth, warmth of heart and her joy in living—the remembrance of it will stand out as a beacon in the Tempests of Life. And now she has reached the goal which, after all, is the object of mortal aim, here is the heavenly peace, "with all God's servants departed this life in Hill faith and fear."
Peterborough, March 1, 1919.

IN MEMORIAM.

In loving memory of Wm. L. Hunter, who died March 1st, 1918.
We loved him; yes, no tongue can tell,
How much we loved him, and how well,
God loved him, too, and thought it best
To take him to His home of rest.
The blow was bitter, the loss severe
To part with one we loved so dear,
Our loss is great, we'll not complain.
But hope in Heaven to meet again.
—Wife and Family.

HELL

Was the subject of Mr. Chas. Innes' address last night in Gospel Hall. After a lengthy introduction telling of the necessity of governments and punishment—in natural things and also in the Spirit Realm Government was the first requisite.

He read the 16th Chap. of Luke and showed that this is our parable, as Christ was talking to His Disciples and therefore a parable was not used, but it is a straight statement of fact. The rich man of this historic event was buried, and in Hell he lifted up his eyes—first the rich man is located he could see a "great way off." He also prayed, and talked. He was thirsty and tormented, memory was there too, fear for the safety of his brethren on earth was manifest, and in like manner Mr. Innes spoke, with great earnestness, warning any who were unsaved to flee from the wrath to come.

Mr. Innes will remain over Sunday and will preach at seven o'clock on "Saved, Being Saved and Fully Saved."

Grand Picture At The Empire

Last Chance To-night to See "Two Men and a Woman"

STORY OF THE PLAY.

Tony Merritt, the young ward of Bruce Donaldson, a former naval officer, falls in love with Ethel Walling, the daughter of Donaldson's neighbour, and asks Bruce to help him in his wooing.

Bruce and Ethel have loved each other for a long time, but have never spoken of it or admitted it to each other. Donaldson, through affection for his ward, thrusts aside his love for Ethel and asks her to accept Tony. Ethel, surprised at the request, conceals her real feelings and accepts Tony, though her heart really belongs to Donaldson.

Yaki, a Japanese countess in the employ of a foreign government, is commissioned to obtain possession of the plans of a submarine boil which Donaldson has invented, and calls for aid upon a former comrade of Donaldson, who yields to her persuasions and obtains the plans in a manner which casts suspicion of the theft upon Tony.

Wanda, an adventuress, at one time had Tony among the victims of her wiles and he had written letters to her which might interfere with his marriage, demands from Tony a large sum of money for the return of the letters, but he is unable to procure it, and she calls at his home to press her claim. Tony is absent and Wanda is met by Donaldson who learns her errand and endeavours to get the letters. He does this by giving Wanda the impression that he is intensely smitten with her and by making love to her. He succeeds in getting the letters, but not before he is discovered making love to Wanda by Ethel, who comes to the house to see him and enters unawares. Ethel, not understanding the situation, is heartbroken by the discovery and leaves the house unseen.

Wanda later discovers the love Bruce and Ethel bear for each other, and tells Tony of it. He, his better nature stirred to its depths, and realizing the sacrifice made by Donaldson, releases Ethel from her promise to him, and with the scene between Wanda and Donaldson at the house explained, Ethel and Donaldson are made happy.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

Mrs. Dawson, buyer for the Millinery Department of Richard Hall & Sons, Limited, returned from New York on Tuesday, after making the largest selection of exclusive hats that was ever made for the Hall Company.

On Miss Dawson's arrival in New York she was looked after by the Resident New York Buyer for Richard Hall & Son, and shown where the newest and most exclusive models could be found and purchased to the best advantage. Miss Dawson procured a great variety of smart new styles, which will be found only at the Hall Store in Peterboro, among them some stylish and exclusive hats for matrons. Some very smart straw tams for young girls and misses and stunning sailors in Pine Apple straw in a wonderful variety of colors that any one could wear, and look well.

A very special feature will be the extremely moderate prices.

A very enjoyable time was spent at the home of Mrs. Christina Powers, Lock street, Thursday evening, Feb. 27th, when she entertained a few of her friends at progressive euchre in honour of her cousin, Signaller David O'Leary, who recently returned from overseas after an absence of over three years. Mrs. J. Crowley won the ladies first prize, Gertrude Perdue winning the booby prize. Mr. Foley won the gentleman's booby prize.

Lieut. Cecil Nelson spent a couple of hours this morning with Mr. and Mrs. R. J. McWilliams, on his way to Toronto from France. Lieut. Lieut. Nelson has been overseas for over four years.

Mrs. Gordon Douglas Carlisle, nee Mary Gibson, received for the first time since her marriage, yesterday afternoon at her home, 695 George street. Mrs. Carlisle looked lovely in a becoming dress of pearl embroidered white crepe de chine, and wore a corsage bouquet of mauve orchids. She was assisted in receiving by Mrs. John Carlisle, who was handsomely gowned in black satin, with corsage bouquet of violets. In the dining room, where profusions of sweet peas and carnations lent a gay effect to the room, Mrs. W. H. Hill presided at the tea table.

Mrs. F. J. Neal asked a few friends in to meet Mr. John Kendrick Bangs at her home, after the lecture last evening.

Miss Phyllis Robertson entertained at a small tea on Thursday afternoon in honour of Miss Agnes Eastwood.

Announcement

Mr. H. W. STOCK announces to his customers that the baking business heretofore carried on as WILLIAM STOCK & SONS, has been incorporated into a Joint Stock Company and MR. STOCK will be President of the Company, MR. JAMES DUTTON will continue his position as Superintendent, and MR. PERCY STOCK, who has been three years overseas, part of the time in the Royal Air Service, and who was wounded and discharged, will act as Assistant General Manager.

On account of the bread business of William Stock and Sons having increased to such large proportions it was found necessary to incorporate it into a Company, which will carry on the business with the same standard of service as given up to the present time. It is not the intention of the Company to carry on any other business except bread baking, but to give every attention to increasing its output and the development of the business which has already had a most striking growth.

This Company is a purely Peterborough Company, and Wm. Stock and Sons have been known for the last quarter of a century as being at the front with up-to-date methods, sanitary appliances and large and well ventilated bakeries, in which the Company will continue to carry on bread manufacturing.

HOW TO DISPOSE OF $5,000 GERMAN HELMETS, A PROBLEM

NEW YORK, Feb. 28.—Eighty-five thousand German helmets, sent to this country by General Pershing for Victory Liberty Loan advertising and now dumped in a huge pile at Hoboken, to-day sent Government lawyers prying into their books to find some statute under which the "iron hats" might be given away.

At first the War Department said the loan managers' plan for using the helmets as prizes for the best records in each district, could not be caried out, because the Government, by law, was forbidden from giving away materials. Then, Frank R. Wilson, director of loan publicity, thought of an old law permitting the Government to give away "munitions of no value." Now War Departments lawyers are checking up on the law.

Advices from Holland state that a further revolutionary movement in Germany is imminent. Chancellor Schiedemann is said to have resigned.

BLUSHING CHEEKS MADE TO ORDER

English Girls Employ Art of Tattoo in Restoring Color

LONDON—London tattoo artists are working overtime repairing the ravages which war work has wrought to the complexions of the ladies. In fact as one of them said to the correspondent, they have become more beauty doctors than anything else.

Thousands of women who were unaccustomed to daily toil have been engaged in work of national importance during the war, and the close atmosphere of office or workshop has taken the bloom from their cheeks and rendered once rosy complexions pallid and sallow. Face creams and rouge sticks, lip salve and powder have done something to effect a transformation, but these methods involve constant attention and care as well as frequent renewal.

So ladies of all classes have flocked to the tattoo merchant to have the tint of a blush rose permanently stamped on their features by means of roseate pigments worked in by the electric needle.

A leading London professor of the art said that his practice had developed to a remarkable extent of late. "All sorts of ladies come to my studio to have permanent complexions tattooed on their faces," he said. "The majority of them are what you might call 'society ladies.' When the electric needle has done its work they never look tired or wan; they get up in the morning looking as fresh as a flower, no matter how tired they were with festivities of the night before. Many of them improve the colour of their lips by having them tattooed a brilliant red.

"Apart from our 'beauty doctor' work, we are very busy tattooing ordinary designs, and there again many of our clients belong to the 'upper classes.' They include ladies of title and even royalty. I know at least one European Queen who carries a splendid example of the tattooist's art. I should think quite three parts of the aristocracy carry tattoo marks—generally just above the knee— and the designs are invariably dragons, butterflies, snakes or the family creast.

"Soldiers, too, are very keen on tattooing. A few days ago I did a dragon in five shades on an officer's chest. It took two sittings and was perfect when finished. The Tommies usually go in for regimental badges or sentimental designs on their arms, and I have tattooed many of the Waac girls with the badge of their unit.

"I had a strange commission to execute the other day. A young couple came to me with the request that I would tattoo something on each of them that would be complete when they were together. I tattooed in their hands a design showing a heart pierced by an arrow. Half the design was on each right hand and done in such a way that it was only complete when their hands were clasped.

"Sometimes we are asked to obliterate badges of love that has waned. In the first flush of this passion the ardent lover has the name of his girl tattooed on his arm. By and by the love cools, and he comes back to us and asks us to remove it. We can't do that, but we can turn it into a butterfly or a flower, and that is what we do."

QUININE FUNGUS IS FOUND IN THE NORTH.

TORONTO, Feb. 28.—Interesting lectures on the folk-lore of fungi and primitive botany were given here before the Canadian Forestore Society of Victoria College by Professor J. H. Faull and Professor R. B. Thompson. Professor Faull gave an instructive account of a quinine fungus, a type common in Europe and which he discovered in Northern Ontario a few years ago. The settlers call this the pineapple fungus. Professor Thompson showed how the curative properties of plants are often indicated by their outward form, while many slides were shown illustrating curious plants and roots.

Light Is Thrown On Seton Murder Drama

Letters From Mrs. Rutherford to Husband Disclose Domestic Discord

WEARY OF CRUELTY

London, March 3.—When the hearing was resumed at West London Police Court of the charge against Lt. Col Norman Rutherford, of having murdered Maj. Miles Seton, remarkable letters written by Mr. Rutherford to her husband, were read and give the first explanation of the shooting—the revelation that Mrs. Rutherford's desire for divorse was based upon long concealed cruelty and his belief that her decision had been prompted by Maj. Seton.

In outlining the theory of the prosecution, Sir A. BODKIN spoke of the visits paid by Major Seton to Mrs. Rutherford's house in her husband's absence abroad, and continued:

"These visits may have given to him (Col. Rutherford) together with letters which he was receiving, the suspicion, whether rightly or wrongly, whether well-founded or ill-founded, that Mrs. Rutherford had been unfaithful to him with Major Seton.

Mrs. Rutherford Not in Court

Mrs. Rutherford, wife of the accused man, was not in court, when Sir Archibald Bodkin opened the case for the prosecution, but Sir R. Muir held a watching brief on her behalf. Mr. Travers Humphreys appeared for the accused, who listened attentively to counsel's story of the tragic events which occurred at 13 Clarendon road. Sir A. Bodkin said Col. Rutherford and Major Seton were undoubtedly well acquainted for some years. Major Seton used to visit Carshalton Place, where there was also staying a Miss Ward, who had been a governess in the household. Accused returned home on leave on January 6 and remained till January 13.

Counsel referred to a scene between Colonel and Mrs. Rutherford on the evening of January 13 before the colonel left Carshalton, to the arrival of the accused at Clarendon Road, narrated the story of the shooting as previously given and told of the arrest of the accused and the message he wrote to his wife. In an occurrence of this kind, said Sir A. Bodkin, one looked for explanation of the deliberate conduct of the accused, and this would probably be found in letters discovered in the bag which the accused had brought with him from Carshalton, and left in the cloak room at hte Victoria Station.

Suffered for Him

The letters ranged from July 27, 1917, to November of the same year, all written by Mrs. Rutherford to her husband. The first read:

"Your long letter came this evening. The few words at the end rend my heart. Darling, have you ever known me merciless in refusing forgiveness. Only come back to me to help me to complete the task we undertook together. I believe my love for you to be the most vital part of my life. For in driving you out of my life I have suffered tortures both mental and physical which must surely in the end have killed me. Love me with all the strength of your being and I will not fail. Come back to me when the opportunity is given you, and I will be waiting as ever."

'No Trust in your Promise.'

The next letter, after an interval of two months, dated Sept. 14 read: "Dear Norman,—You blamed me once for not being sufficiently candid with you. This time I will be. I have been through hell this last week alone, but I am climbing out, though a different woman writes to you—one who will never return to the old regime. The day in the flat, when you did ill-treated me,—Harry went up to Bird and Bird and put the case before them. They asked me to go in and see them, and conjured me to get a divorce, as the only sane method, and I refused—refused with tears, because I thought I still loved you. Now I know that I do not; that I have not an atom of trust in your promises, and only away from you can I be happy again. This is my last word. I have struggled and tried, trusted and hoped, but the end is inevitable and in common justice I had to tell you so. I shall take no steps, do nothing further but only battle along alone, as before. I am sorry for you but cannot act otherwise."

"I Want to Gain my Freedom."

Then after an interval of some six weeks there was a third letter, dated October 2 also from Carshalton Place. It read:

"Dear Norman,—I need not waste words in making explanaitons. Your knowledge of my nature will make you realize what it has cost me to write these few lines. I want to gain my freedom with as little suffering for you as possible, and if, for the children's sake you will agree to carry the thing through with as little publicity as possible I will hand over the three younger children to you.

"Honestly I believe that that would be the happier for you and it would at least give you some hold on life. I should not feel that you were utterly broken. This is a difficult letter to write. Please make the rest of my task as easy as possible for the sake of all I have so far borne for you."

The next letter, said Sir A. Bodkin, was dated Nov. 7th and acknowledged a letter to the accused of November 3rd. It ran:

"Your letter of the third has just arrived. My tender-heartedness and generosity in the past we generally additional scourge to chastise me. You additional scourge to chastise me. You mean to fight for the childrens, but you will never get them. You give me no credit for what I have done for you, although you know ——— and ——— (naming two of her daughters) both love me before anyone else, and that my first-born son loves me and is understood by me to a very unusual degree.

"You know by your violent temper and frequent ill-usage of me you have suffered in the eyes of the children. It seems to me that it is better for them to have one parent whom they can respect, and for that reason I wish to save them from the horrible scandal of divorce proceedings. I might have known you would have taken my generosity as a sign of weakness. So be it. The minute you walk into this house I shall leave it and go to my parents, who will then see justice done for me.

"Your love for me is of the wrong kind. Your love has always been artificial. You grossly abused the deepest love a woman had for man, and the remainder of your life will be a curse to you for evermore. Don't think I shall be denied justice. I served you well and faithfully and shall reap the reward accordingly. Don't think that you will escape justice for having deceived me and treated me unfaithfully."

"Your Nature will Never Change."

The last letter, said counsel, was dated Noyember 29th, and was as follows:

"I don't think that anyone realizes that the love I gave you can neither completely die nor be repeated, but I am convinced that your nature will never change and that only unhappiness lies with you. Mrs. Clark has been staying with me and left this morning feeling very unhappy about me. She also known what you meant to me in the years gone by and how unable I am to quite forget you. Please help me for divorce is the only means of my obtaining happiness."

"These letters," continued Sir Archibald, "are a painful character. Col. Rutherford comes home on Jan. 6—whether then for the first time is not known—but it would seem to me quite probable that at that time he learned of the visit recently ended of Major Seton and of Major Seton's earlier visits in October, and one or two other week-end visits in the October of last year to Carshalton place. These visits may have given to him, together with these letters which he was receiving, the suspicion, whether rightly or wrongly, whether well-founded or ill-founded, that Mrs. Rutherford had been unfaithful to him with Major Seton.

Evidence of Deliberation.

"And then after some scenes which in fact occurred but the details of which it was impossible to obtain, the maid not hearing what the words were when Col. Rutherford was speaking to his wife, he informed the intention then to kill Major Seton. All the circumstances which I am detailing and narrating to you of his conduct at Carshalton place, his coming up to London, his leaving behind him, because he had no need for it, the ordinary revolver, which was found in the room, but armed, as apparently no one knew he was armed with this other weapon, all these circumstances are those of deliberation. He comes to London and after an interview in which apparently there was no trace of a quarrel, he shoots a defenceless man at a time when that man is seeking to get out of the room in which these two were. That of course quite clearly indicates that the crime of wilful murder was committed.

Sir M. Seton's Evidence.

Sir M. Seton said he did not know it was suggested that his cousin was in England between 1909 and 1916. Since he came to England Major Seton had on several occasions spoken about his friend Rutherford. He had the impression that Maj. Seton and Colonel Rutherford first met in South Africa. Deceased was godfather to one of Mrs. Rutherford's children.

Amy Millyard, house parlor-maid in the employ of Sir M. Seton, said Major Seton went downstairs at once when Col. Rutherford was announced. He did not hesitate as if he had any objection to meeting him.

Inspector Trott said that when he told Col. Rutherford that he would be detained and subsequently charged, he was very quiet.

Mr. Humphreys: "Did you notice he had a dazed look upon his face? Yes, he struck me as being like a man who had been dozing and was waking up."

The case was further adjourned.

How Dominion Rubber System Belting Service Helps Belt Users

For more than fifty years we have specialized in the making of belting and the solving of problems in transmitting power and conveying materials economically.

We maintain a staff of belting experts for the sole purpose of helping Canadian Manufacturers to "speed up" production by cutting belting costs and eliminating power wastage.

These experts will, without charge, analyze your transmission and conveying equipment in its entirety and will recommend changes only where they are necessary to increase the efficiency of that equipment.

You are under no obligation to us in availing yourself of this service—the only return that we request is that you purchase Dominion Rubber System belting when you have been convinced that the changes recommended by our engineer will be beneficial.

This special service is available through any of our branches.

Phone, wire or write the one nearest to you and let us prove to you that the kind of service we have given to Canada's largest industries and the kind we want to give to you, means more than just selling better belts.

Runaway Marriages

Formal Statement Made to Correct a Popular Error Regarding the Famous Church.

NEW YORK, Feb. 28.—If you ever were divorced and your one-time partner is living, if you have not been baptized or you have not the consent of your parents or guardian, even though you be of age, don't let Cupid direct you to the Church of the Transfiguration, familiarly known as the Little Church Around the Corner. If you do the Rev. Dr. George Clarke Houghton, the popular rector there, will ask some unpleasant questions, and he won't tie the knot.

Such always has been the rules at the tiny picturesque Gothic structure hidden almost in the skyscrapers in East Twenty-Ninth Street, just off Fifth Avenue, but Dr. Houghton caused this notice to be issued:

"A popular belief that the Church of the Transfiguration, No. 1 East Twenty-Ninth Street, known to many as the 'Little Church Around the Corner,' is a haven for runaway marriages is rapidly being dispelled. The Rev. Dr. George C. Houghton, rector of the parish, has always insisted on the strictest rules for the eligibility of applicants for marriage. For instance, Dr. Houghton has always refused to marry two parties, either of whom had been divorced or who had not been baptized and had not their parents' or guardians' consent, even where both parties were of full age.

"Despite the recent strictness the American public, particularly those from inland towns, have associated runaway marriages with the 'Little Church Around the Corner,' and for, many years this belief survived. As a matter of fact, this has not been the case except in three or four instances, when the parties made false sworn statements. In actual numbers the marriages at this parish are no more than at the chief of New York churches."

THE WIFE

BY JANE PHELPS

BRIAN IS WOUNDED BUT NOT SEVERELY.

CHAPTER CXXXIII.

Brian was wounded. He was in the hospital. The nurse had written saying he was pretty badly hurt, but doing as well as could be expected. He was conscious and had asked her to write— then not to worry. His right arm had been injured, also he had been struck in the shoulder by a piece of shrapnel, making a painful wound.

"Oh, I wonder if he is really not dangerously hurt!" Ruth exclaimed when she had finished the letter. She had turned pale as she read, and the hand holding the letter trembled.

"I imagine the nurse is telling it just as it is," her aunt replied. "See she says she will write again soon. I wouldn't worry if I were you. He is young, has a good constitution, and will probably be back in the fighting line in a little while."

"Maybe—but—Oh, Aunt, what if something—should happen—if he—should die!" Tears filled Ruth's eyes.

"Now, Ruth, don't allow yourself to even think of such a thing. Just write him a nice, cheery letter, then believe he is all right. You'll hear again soon." Mrs. Clayborne was not as optimistic as she pretended to be. But she wanted to keep Ruth cheerful, and while trying to do so, speculated not a little on the effect his (Brian's) death, might have on her niece's future.

Ruth told Mandel at once that Brian had been wounded. She told him the hospital nurse had written, and that she was fearful she had not told her the danger he might be in; that they had made light of it so that she wouldn't worry.

"No—I wouldn't feel that way," he encouraged. "I have an idea that those army nurses tell things pretty baldly. They haven't time to soften them very much, or to camouflage their words."

Someway, his manner of speaking comforted Ruth. He looked at things from a man's point of view; not as she and her aunt did. Then, too, he was speaking impersonally. He would be sorry for her if anything happened to Brian, but he did not know him, so talked of him as he would of any wounded soldier. Perhaps she was foolishly anxious. She couldn't expect him to wholly escape, when so many were killed. She shuddered as she thought. But if he were badly wounded he might be sent home as soon as he was a little better, then she would nurse him back to health.

She thrilled at the thought. And until she received the next letter—this one written by Brian himself—she planned all sorts of comforts for the invalid soldier.

"I'll be back on the line when you get this," he wrote, "I was gassed a little. But am almost all right now. My shoulder is stiff, but that's about all. I'll soon be gunning for the Huns who did it."

Ruth also told Mandel of this letter. That he seemed rather indifferent, she noticed, and resented.

"He doesn't seem glad about it," she said to herself, "and he is usually so enthusiastic over the soldiers." That Mandel had made an effort to show his sympathy with her in her joy as he had in her anxiety, she could not know. Or that he had taken himself to account more severely than she could or would, because of the realization of his future.

But Ruth soon forgot everything save that Brian was once more all right. In his letter he had not mentioned Mollie, and neither had Mollie been his nurse when he was first wounded and [illegible] "Mary Giddings" had been the name signed to the letter written by the nurse.

Ruth was joyous over the idea that Mollie had not been with Brian in his illness. But her joy was short lived. In Brian's second letter he said:

"It was dreadful to be lying there, having that plain looking woman for a nurse—though she did her best—and to know that Mollie was taking care of some fellow who probably didn't appreciate her. I think I fretted more over not having Mollie nurse me, than I did over my wounds. I have seen her twice since I left the hospital. You can imagine I made her miserable by finding fault because she wasn't with me. Just as though she could run from one hospital to another at her own sweet will just because some foolish home-sick fellow wanted her.

"We took a long walk together late yesterday afternoon when she was off duty. We talked—now that I think of it—principally of you and the kiddie. No one knows how I long to see you both. If the Huns don't do better than they did this time, I shall see you, and tell you how I love you both. Your husband and the kiddie's dad."

FACING DISASTER

Dark Days In Paris Before Turn of Tide.

No one who visited the Government offices in those days will forget what he saw there. Messengers came and went at all hours, dashing up in motor-cars that had darted through the streets at racing speed. Telephone receivers were never on the hook. Telegraph instruments clicked incessantly. Day or night, many of the officials never left their offices—and then, in the midst of their frantic anxiety, commissions from other countries, unaware of the sudden seriousness of the situation, would have to be politely received and ceremoniously entertained.

There was a moment when some of us correspondents were told that the Germans had broken through at the point of juncture between the British and the French; the five days when the British fifth army fell back and back until disaster seemed inevitable; the hour when, in the highest quarters, the word was whispered to a few of us that the road to Paris was open.

Thanks to the dogged heroism of the French and the superb rally of the British, these things are over now, and we may speak of them. Then, however, we said nothing. Even many of the newspaper writers were in ignorance.

One Friday evening I came home with the knowledge that the French reserves would not be concentrated for action before Sunday, and that the outnumbered British might not be able to hold longer than Saturday night. Yet on the street that evening I met a correspondent usually well informed who said to me, with the utmost cheerfulness: "Well, they haven't got here. You see, there was nothing to worry about!"

There have been few such days of suspense as that which followed. Even the uninformed came to know that something was impending. The boulevard crowds were smaller than usual and more restless. People gathered in little knots and spoke in undertones. An American was more or less appealed to:

"Won't the Gen. Pershing let your army come in at last? Surely he will let it come in now!"

Meanwhile, in the Paris offices of the Government, officials waited in tense silence. They awaited what must either be a miracle or a catastrophe.

It was the miracle that happened. The French performed it. Tired and harrassed as they were, the war-weary army of that people whom we used to regard as merely mercurial, said to itself: "We have to do it all over again"—and did it forthwith. The reserves that "couldn't get up until Sunday" got there on Saturday. They halted the Boche; they stopped the first move of the German offensive.

In Paris the gossips said that it was arguments advanced by Clemenceau and Lloyd George which changed Gen. Pershing's attitude. Those gossips point to the consequence of events, which, though possibly not [illegible]

The military situation was serious. In London Secretary Baker was asked to a conference with the Premier.

Mr. Baker hurried to Paris, where he was seen by Clemenceau.

Gen. Pershing was called to talk to Mr. Baker.

Then Gen. Foch, appointed to the place of generalissimo on the north of the western front, was, as such, offered by Gen. Pershing, "all we have and all we are."

Whatever the facts that led up to it, nothing could have had a better moral effect than that offer. In the eyes of the waiting Allies, America was going to do its duty. In the eyes of their splendid enlisted men, they were given the big chance for which they had been so long hungry. How fully that chance was at least immediately taken advantage of there is now no need to tell any reader, English, French, American or German.

To sum up:

What had happened in England has happened in France. The French are a people one of whose virtues is a vast capacity for forgiveness; they can even—and this is the last of all forgiveness—forget. By this time I left France, they had renewed their faith in the United States War Department.

300 SCHOOL GIRLS TRAPPED BY FLAMES; RESCUED BY FIREMEN

PITTSBURG, Feb. 27.—More than 300 girls were rescued by firemen, a score were overcome by smoke and a dozen were injured in a spectacular fire which destroyed the building occupied by Duff's Business College, in the heart of the commercial district. One girl who fell from the arms of a fireman at a third floor window was fatally injured.

Of the 450 pupils in the school when the fire alarm was sounded only about one hundred girls and fifty boys reached the street in safety before smoke and flames cut off escape of the others. Trapped on the second and third floors, the remaining pupils were taken from windows or jumped into fire nets in the street.

Damage was estimated at $100,000.

ONE KILLED IN BLAST AT STAR SHELL PLANT

MINEOLA, L.I., March 1.—As a result of an explosion, followed by fire in the experimental works of the Ordnance Engineering Corporation, at East Grand avenue, Baldwin, Charles Toombs, of Baldwin, is dead and a chemist, David Lubash, is in Jamaica Hospital badly injured. Five others were severely burned and taken to nearby hospitals.

The works are being used for making star shells such were used in the trenches in France. The first intimation of danger was when Lubash heard a small explosion on the first floor and ran upstairs to warn the workers that another and larger explosion might follow. Before he could get to a point of safety, the second explosion occurred, wrecking the building and setting it in flames. Lubash was blown out of a second story window. The clothing of most of the men taken to the hospitals had been burned from their bodies.

A dwelling owned by Charles Wilke adjoining the works was destroyed by flames, despite the work of the Freeport and Baldwin Fire departments. The damage to the building is destroyed is placed at $14,000. The plant was only temporary, a much larger one being about ready for occupancy.

Why Can't I Get to Sleep?

Thousands of people all over the country ask this question but still continue to toss night after night on a sleepless bed and it is impossible for them to get a full night's refreshing sleep.

Some constitutional disturbance, worry or disease, has so debilitated and irritated the nervous system that it cannot be quietened except by the pernicious use of opiates or narcotics. Or again, you have heart palpitation, and sensation of sinking, a feeling you are going to die, or perhaps you wake up in your sleep feeling as though you were about to choke or smother, and the only way that you can get relief is to sit up in bed.

To all who suffer in this way, Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills offer an inestimable boon. They bring back the much needed night's rest by improving the tone of the nerves, strengthen the heart, enriching the blood and making the whole organization act in harmony—then you sleep as restful as a child.

Mrs. James Latcher, 39 Leicester St., St. John, N.B., writes: "For months I could not sleep. I had to sit up in bed, my heart beat so fast and when I walked up stairs I could get all out of breath. A friend recommended Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and after using two boxes I can sleep all night, and am not out of breath after walking."

MANY CASES OF RHEUMATISM NOW

Says We Must Keep Feet Dry, Avoid Exposure and Eat Less Meat

Stay off the damp ground, avoid exposure, keep feet dry, eat less meat, drink lots of water and above all take a spoonful of salts occasionally to keep down uric acid.

Rheumatism is caused by poisonous toxin, called uric acid, which is generated in the bowels and absorbed into the blood. It is the function of the kidneys to filter this acid from the blood and cast it out in the urine. The pores of the skin are also a means of freeing the blood of this impurity. In damp and chilly, cold weather the skin pores are closed, thus forcing the kidneys to do double work. They become weak and sluggish and fail to eliminate this uric acid which keeps accumulating and circulating through the system, eventually settling in the joints and muscles causing stiffness, soreness and pain called rheumatism.

At the first twinge of rheumatism get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; put a tablespoonful in a glass of water and drink before breakfast each morning for a week. This is said to eliminate uric acid by thus assisting the kidneys to normal activity, thus ridding the blood of these impurities.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, harmless and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and is used with excellent results by thousands of folks who are subject to rheumatism. Here you have a pleasant, effervescent lithia-water drink which overcomes uric acid and is beneficial to your kidneys as well.

Try this real hair tonic at home—

"Shampoo, Sir?"

There would be decidedly less baldness if more men knew the great comfort and simplicity of the Lux shampoo. Its rich lather thoroughly cleanses and invigorates the hair and scalp. Washing the hair is oft-times something of a task but with Lux it is no trouble at all.

Lux will remove only the superfluous oil—the dust and grime—it is so pure it can injure nothing that pure water itself may touch.

Rinses out absolutely clean, leaving the hair soft, silky and glossy with new vigor and health.

DEPARTMENT EXAMS LATE.

Time-table Issued This Week—Candidates to Write June 30.

Time-tables for the annual departmental examinations for matriculation and lower, middle and upper school certificates, have been issued this week by the Department of Education. The examinations this year do not commence until June 30, which is nearly three weeks later than has been the custom in the past. The school term has been extended in order partially to regain the time lost during the influenza epidemic. The lower school examinations cover a period of ten days, ranging from June 30 to July 9, inclusive, while the middle and upper school candidates will write until July 18, with a recess between July 4 and 10. Examinations will be held in all the usual subjects on the curriculum.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

The Wide, Wide World

By S. B. HACKLEY

(Copyright, 1918, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

"Oh, Bobby, we can't tell your mother that! How will we tell her?"

Flora Nelson's large eyes filled as she clung to Robert Greer, who had just cautiously entered the back door of his mother's cottage.

Early that morning, in the courthouse at West Hardtown, 100 miles from Burnham, Robert had seen his father, Charles Greer, sentenced for life to the state's prison. In the big front bedroom, Jael, the young fellow's mother, for six weeks close to death of fever, lay slowly recovering.

Two weeks before, the father, who worked aboard the river steamer Mary Ann, had quarreled with Cyrus Canter in West Hardtown. Cyrus and Ananias brothers and surly, had provoked the quarrel that ended in a fight with chairs. Greer had not meant to kill the man, but he forgot the power in his arm, and Cyrus' neck was broken at the first blow.

Robert had warned their friends and neighbors to keep his mother in ignorance of what had happened, and hoped against hope that his father would go free. But the Canters were influential people in West Hardtown, and the trial had ended unhappily for Greer.

The boy, he was scarcely twenty—took his sweetheart's face between his trembling hands.

"We won't tell her, Flo," he whispered, "we won't ever tell mother—not even if she comes to die. Dad said for me to make her believe he's dead!"

"Dead!" gasped Flora, "make her believe that! Why, she's looking for him today as soon as the Mary Ann's unloaded. She came in about an hour ago."

"I know!" Robert's lips trembled. "But we've just got to think of some way to make her believe dad's dead. He must be dead to him—never write to him nor try to see him—he couldn't bear that! The Mary and Well somewhere! He's always wanted adventure and he's never got to have any. He begged me to go with him, when we were first married, to some wild country in South America, where he could hunt, but I was afraid. Then you and your three little sisters that died came along and he quit talking about it. And now, since you've been grown, Bobby, he's hated to say anything about wantin' to wander for fear you'd laugh at him. I just believe he's slipped off from us all to go somewhere and take his fun! And when he's had it he'll be coming back. Why, Bobby, what makes you cry? Don't you know daddy'll be coming back?"

When six months passed with no letters from her husband, Jael explained his silence to her son by the fact that he was in the wilds, where no mail could be sent out, but at the end of the year, at each meal, she set a fancy plate that Charles had always liked at his place at table.

"He'll be coming in at just any time now, Bobby," she told him. "A year is generally all the time men stay on a hunting trip, isn't it?"

"Why, no, mother," Robert explained, "I've read that Englishmen who hunt spend as much as six months or a year in one place, trying out the hunting in each place. Sometimes they put in five years or more at hunting big game, and if they take a notion to go on exploring trips there's no telling how long—"

Jael's face fell. "Stay away from their families all those years, Bobby?"

Robert averted his eyes. "Of course they know they're coming back to 'em, mother."

For an instant her lips quivered, then she smiled again.

"Of course, and we want daddy to have all the fun the rest of 'em have. He knows you'll look after me and never leave me while he's gone, Bobby. Riley worked awful hard all them twenty years that's past, he's earned a long, long holiday. We oughtn't to say a word, even if he's taken a notion to tour the wide world around, and we'll stay right here in this house and wait for him until he comes back!"

Robert's ruddy face paled. Flora's mother had been ordered to Colorado to live, and Flora was her only child and support. Flora would have to go to Colorado with her; her cousin had already secured a teacher's place for her there — and he — he'd intended to take his mother and go out there, too. But now— He knew his mother's gentle obstinacy. Never would she leave her home while she expected his father back! And he could not leave her alone. There was nothing to do but to release Flora from her promise to marry him. But somehow Flora did not understand.

"I'll keep mother at there where she can live, Bobby," she told him, "and I'll wait for you."

"But for how long?" Robert's voice was hoarse. "Mother'll never quit hoping, and I—I can't ever tell her about father, Flora!"

"I know," she answered. "I wouldn't want to walk to happiness over her broken heart. We—we won't be the first people that fate's kept apart, Bobby, and it isn't as if one of us were dead. We can keep on loving each other across that thousand miles, and I'll wait for you, Bobby—I'll wait, if it's the rest of my life!"

Five governors had served in the twenty years before Claudius Bassett was elected. In the second month after his election, Bassett paid a visit to the state prison farm, and the impression made on him by the yearning eyes of the forgotten bits of humanity there—men whose names years before had been laid away in the state's files, as numbers, and forgotten kept the young governor awake that night and for many nights afterward. It stirred him to investigate the records of convicts who had served long terms, to see that mercy was extended where mercy was due, and to permit the rewards of good conduct provided by law.

Governor Bassett's first visit to the prison farm was six weeks past, when one day Robert Greer sat in his mother's garden, while Jael for the twice ten-thousandth time hopefully set the evening table for three, and put the little vase of grass pinks that "Charley" loved, in the center of the white cloth.

The young man held an open letter in his hand—Flora's last letter.

"Dear Bobby," it read. "I'm in trouble. Mother has taken a notion to go back home to live. I don't know what I'm to do. She has not been sick one day in all the years we've been in [illegible] glorious mountains, but one winter back there, Bobby, would mean her death! And, oh, Bobby," the letter went on, "Col. Oscar McClean, that rich old rancher I told you about, has again taken it into his head to marry me! He worries me so. I'm afraid I'm getting more wrinkles than a woman of my age ought to have!"

Robert dropped the letter on the grass with a groan.

"I've let her wait for me twenty years," he said aloud. "I can't stand it any longer!"

The man who had come up silently behind him, touched his shoulder.

"What's that you can't stand, son?"

Robert turned his head. "My God, daddy! Where did you come from?" he cried.

Greer drew his parole papers from his pocket. "I'm free, Robert! I've been here since yesterday, and I've found out what Jael thinks. I've spent a heap of time since I've been down there studyin' over maps and readin' about foreign countries I'd always wanted to see. I can tell her a lot about 'em and she can keep on thinkin' I've been travelin'. Maybe we can go to some of them places together!"

"Go in and tell her," Robert pointed to the house. "I'll go and send a telegram."

An hour later Flora received his message.

"Don't worry anymore. I'm coming tomorrow!"

SHE COULD NOT STAND OR WORK

But Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Restored Her Health and Stopped Her Pains.

Portland, Ind. — "I had a displacement and suffered so badly from it that sometimes I could not get on my feet at all. I was all run down and so weak I could not do my housework, was nervous and could not lie down at night. I took treatments from a physician but they did not help me. My aunt recommended Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I tried it and now I am strong and well again and do my own work and I give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound the credit." —Mrs. JOSEPHINE KIMBLE, 935 West Race St., Portland, Ind.

Thousands of American women give this famous root and herb remedy the credit for health restored as did Mrs. Kimble.

For helpful suggestions in regard to such ailments women are asked to write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass. The result of its long experience is at your service.

A roar that shook the panes in the windows drowned his words. The Mary Ann would never sail up the river again! Before many days the bodies of the captain and the three deckhands who died when the explosion sent the boat to the bottom of the river came to the muddy surface of the stream and were identified, but the bodies of the remainder of the crew were never recovered. It was easy to say that Charley Greer was one of the dead, but Jael refused to believe it.

"Charley was always the first man off the boat when she docked!" she insisted. "He'd always come to the house to see me a moment, then he'd go back and help unload. I tell you, Bobby, Charley isn't dead. He's alive

the richness of ordinary milk
CARNATION Milk—as it comes to you—has double the richness of ordinary milk.
It is fresh, rich milk—evaporated. Water is taken away from it.
When used, therefore, as ordinary milk—for example, as a nourishing, satisfying drink for the children—you should add an equal quantity of water.
For cooking—where you have been using skimmed milk—you may add even more water to Carnation Milk.
But for tea, coffee, fruit or cereals, you can use Carnation Milk as cream—just as it comes to you. It whips splendidly.

"MOTHER KNOWS"

When I feel crappy and mean, mother never scolds. She usually finds my tongue is white, my breath bad, then she says, "My Pet needs a Cascaret." I gladly take Cascarets because they taste like candy. Next morning I wake up feeling dandy. Do you give your children Cascarets or nasty castor oil, pills or calomel? Cascarets never hurt as kids.

Cascarets, candy cathartic, cost only 10 cents and mothers will find directions for children's dosage at all ages on each box. Cascarets work like a charm when the child's little stomach, liver and bowels need cleansing and regulating.

How Josh Billings Arrived.

Josh Billings, the humorist, was not appreciated when he offered his first contribution to a paper in his home town, according to a correspondent of Christian Register, who was personally acquainted with him. He then concluded to follow Artemus Ward's example and misspell his articles so as to attract attention. "In this absurd shape," he said, "I sent one of my unfortunate productions to the New York Weekly. I soon got a letter accepting my manuscript and asking me for more. In time I was under a big salary not to write for any other paper." One of Josh Billings' eccentricities described was his "lecture on Milk." In this lecture he never said a word about milk, but a glass full of that liquid stood on his desk while he talked and was occasionally sipped by him as he spoke. As milk was his support while he talked, rather than water or something stronger, he's nature was in truth given "on milk."

The Point of It.

Tourist (exasperated at not being able to get a satisfactory answer)—But, hang it all, man, you surely must know how far it is to the station. Is it three miles?

Road Mender—No, sir, it ain't so far as that—not if you 'urry.—London Tatler.

Bad Education.

"I don't know how we'll face our neighbors when they return."

"What has happened?"

"We were taking care of their cat and their parrot. Yesterday the cat ate the parrot and then died of indigestion."—Kansas City Journal.

Great Facts Hard to Win.

The highest truths are hard to put into entertaining forms. You expect to teach children through stories, games and the exhibition of the concrete. Grown-ups are expected to learn from the facts presented, arguments and the abstract. Empty heads and near-empty heads have to be constantly amused. Abstract facts are too elusive for particular observation and perception. They need spoon-fed products. With men of brains it's different. They solve problems hard to solve. They grow by responding to life's challenges. So when you think things tame look to find why they are so. The chances are you will find the fault in you. You haven't given all the attention you should. The greatest facts have to be sought to be won. Only the ordinary and fleeting courts you.—Exchange.

Charity.

"Oh, the awful thing that's happened to Cutie Smith, over in France!" gasped Heloise of the rapid-fire restaurant. "He was in a front line trench, and the Hun devils attacked with flame throwers and burnt poor Cutie nearly all over!"

"Aw, a good scout like Cutie!" wailed Claudine of the same establishment. "Why couldn't they be decent enough to serve him raw instead of well done?"—Kansas City Star.

Price of His Head.

M. Raemaekers has now taken up his abode in England. While he was working in Holland, many attempts were made to assassinate him by the Germans, both by application to the Dutch Government and by crude methods of their own.

M. Raemaekers was asked one day at how much in hard cash he was valued by the Boche. He admitted regretfully that his price had gone down, and that he had been valued at no more than £400.

M. Raemaekers speaks English quite fluently, and but for his extremely fairness is rather English in appearance.—Tit-Bits.

Pimples Broke Out All Over Face, Arms and Neck

Pimples are sure sign that the blood is not in its proper shape.

While the skin is the seat of the irritating, unsightly pimples, the real disease is in the blood.

Medicated lotions and powders may allay the itching and the irritation, but never cure, no matter how long and faithfully continued, and the condition is often aggravated, and the skin permanently injured by their use. The disease is more than skin deep, the entire circulation is poisoned.

Burdock Blood Bitters quickly and effectually cures blood and skin troubles because it goes right to the root of the disease and removes the cause, giving healthy action to the different organs, cleanses and enriches the blood, and thus relieves the system of all poisonous secretions.

B. B. B. cures permanently because it leaves none of the original poison to ferment in the blood and cause a fresh attack.

Miss E. [illegible] Dayshed, Alta., writes: "Last summer I was greatly troubled with pimples, breaking out all over my face, neck and arms. I was afraid to go out, and [illegible] I tried many remedies and other treatments, but they all failed. I finally decided to try B. B. B., and after using [illegible] I was entirely cured. I shall always recommend B. B. B. to my friends." B. B. B. is 50c. a box, at all dealers, or The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

'Twas A Lucky Day Says Mrs. O'Connor

Her Improvement, After Taking Tanlac, Was Simply Wonderful

"It was certainly a lucky day for me when I got my first bottle of Tanlac," said Mrs. John O'Connor, of 336 East Oldham St., Knoxville, Tenn.

"For five or six years," she continued, "I had been in a dreadfully run-down and nervous condition, was awfully weak and suffered with spells of dizziness. I had terrible nervous headaches and my stomach was so weak I couldn't digest even the lightest kind of food. I could sleep very little and became so despondent that I was afraid nothing could help me regain my health.

"I wouldn't have believed it if anybody had told me any medicine would cause me to gain eight pounds in a day, but that is exactly what Tanlac has done for me. Soon after I started taking it I began to eat better, sleep like a baby and feel just fine and my steady improvement has simply been wonderful. I have thrown away all my other medicines and will stick to Tanlac, for I think it is the finest medicine on earth."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. B. Warne Drug Co., Ltd., in Havelock by A. C. Denike, in Lakefield by Tanner Drug Co., Ltd., in Fowler's Corners by W. A. Hunter, in Gelert by A. J. Scott, in Westwood by G. Pringle & Son.

TO RESUME SOUTH AMERICAN VOYAGES.

NEW YORK, March 1. — In spite of announcements made earlier in the year to the effect that the services of the Royal Holland Lloyd line between New York and the east coast of South America were to be discontinued, the management of the line declared that their steamship the Hollandia would steam for South American ports the latter part of March and that the company expects further voyages from New York to follow. This steamship is now en route to New York, bringing officers and enlisted men from France.

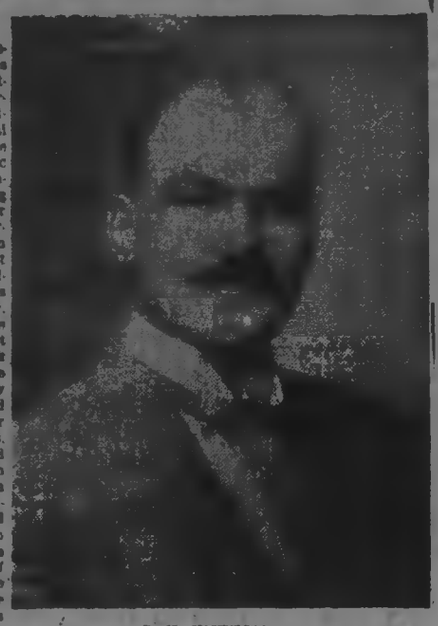
New Head for C.P.R. Demonstration Farms



G. H. HUTTON

IN being able to secure the services of George H. Hutton, B.S.A., as Superintendent of its Agriculture and Animal Industry Branch, the Canadian Pacific Railway is to be congratulated in finding a worthy successor to Dr. J. G. Rutherford, who has been appointed to a seat on the Board of Railway Commissioners for Canada. Dr. Rutherford, who has been a prominent figure in livestock circles all over the continent for many years, has been head of this branch for more than six years, during which period he earned the esteem of farmers, stockmen and others throughout the country, and many farmers in Western Canada owe a large measure of their success to the advice and assistance given by him. His successor, Mr. Hutton, has had considerable experience in Western Canada, and few men are better informed than he on the agricultural possibilities of Western Canada, and particularly of Alberta. Since 1906 he has been in charge of the Dominion Government's Experimental Station at Lacombe in Central Alberta, where his work, especially in connection with livestock, has been of the utmost value to farmers throughout the province and elsewhere in the Canadian West.

Mr. Hutton has been connected with farming so long that he does not remember when he first began. He is a thoroughly practical farmer. During his boyhood days he did those tasks which usually fall to the lot of a boy brought up on the farm. Later he went to college where he obtained his B.S.A. degree, in 1900. After operating a farm of his own in Eastern Canada for about six years, he went West to take charge of the Government's Experimental Station, which he is now leaving to take up his appointment with the Canadian Pacific. He is known throughout Western Canada as one of the foremost agriculturists in the country, and his activities in connection with the live stock industry may be gathered from the fact that he is president, vice-president or past president of six different breeders associations, besides holding numerous directorships.

Few men have done more than he in promoting mixed farming methods among the farmers of Central Alberta. This he has done by showing the immense possibilities of the country and by proving in the practical manner how favorable the conditions are for the raising of live stock and dairying. Sent to Lacombe to operate the Government Experimental Farm there with a view to ascertaining and demonstrating the varieties of grains, grasses, fruits, and vegetables most suitable to local conditions, and the best methods to employ to secure the most economical results, he soon saw that if there was a great and useful field in this work, there was also a very valuable one in the live stock industry in all its phases. He accordingly suggested to the Department of Agriculture that the work of the station should include experimentation with livestock in addition to grains and other crops, and succeeded in convincing the head of the department of the merits of this suggestion. From small beginnings, Mr. Hutton and his assistants have built up at Lacombe the largest flocks and herds of any experimental station in Canada, with the possible exception of the Central Farm at Ottawa.

The information gained as a result of the experiments conducted at Lacombe have been very valuable to farmers throughout Western Canada. Hog-raising, sheep-feeding, beef and milk production are all subjects that have had most careful attention. During the last three years more than three thousand hogs have been used on the farm in tests of various breeds to ascertain which were the most economical pork producers under local conditions. In a grazing-up experiment with sheep now being conducted more than four hundred ewes are included. An excellent herd of Angus cattle has also been established, and the foundations laid for a first class herd of Holsteins. From the sale of live stock, the farm has a revenue running into many thousands of dollars annually.

Mr. Hutton's work with the Canadian Pacific will be along lines similar to those along which he has previously been engaged. His new duties will include the supervision of the system of demonstration farms operated by this company, at which settlers in Western Canada may receive advice based on the experience of many years as to the best farming methods to employ, thus giving the new settler a chance to avoid many of the mistakes likely to be made by farmers coming from a country where different conditions prevail. Probably no other private company land—railway or any other kind—in any country has spent so large a sum or taken so great an interest in getting the farmer started right as has the Canadian Pacific Railway, and the appointment of a man of Mr. Hutton's ability and experience to be the head of its Agriculture and Animal Industry Branch indicates that no change in this policy is contemplated.

PARSNIP CUTLETS.

Scrape and boil until tender the necessary number of parsnips; then slice lengthwise, rub with salt and paprika and sear over quickly in a little hot pork fat. Cool and dip each slice in a batter made from one egg, half a tablespoonful of vegetable oil, half a saltspoonful of salt, half a cupful of sifted flour and about one-quarter of a cupful of cold water. Fry until well browned on both sides in hot bacon dripping.

How French Would Deal With Ex-Kaiser

Group of French Soldiers Would Provide for Bill Long Marches, Real Trench Life and Rations.

A little French weekly, the Cri de Paris, lately received from a group of French soldiers the following letter on the subject of the ex-Kaiser's punishment.

This is how we think the Kaiser ought to be punished:

William II, shall wage war until death ensues.

Every day he shall march 15 miles with full pack and equipment, carrying a quick-firing rifle and a load of hand grenades. He shall wear a trench helmet and never be allowed to take it off.

At the end of his 15-mile march he shall be made to cross marshy ground with water up to his waist.

He shall be made to walk down sodden communication trenches in which telephone wires shall have been artfully arranged so as to entangle him.

He shall spend every night in a narrow trench, in which a few dozen rats shall be kept, and near which there will lie some decaying carcasses.

As soon as he begins to doze off a few hand-grenades shall be exploded, as well as a mine, which should throw him bodily some ten yards away.

Every night he shall be made to walk for two hours in the dark across broken ground, and to cross several wire entanglements while carrying sacks of hand-grenades.

As for hygiene and comfort, he shall change his underclothes only on the first of each month, so as to become a prey to vermin; he shall be allowed to wash on that day only.

For rations he shall be entitled to one tin of bully-beef per day, with a quarter of a loaf of bread, and, as an appetizer, some sardines in oil; he shall drink either water or sour wine, half a pint for each meal.

This shall last for 365 days in the year. During the meal hours one might improve his mind by reading aloud to him selected passages from Buobe philosophers, in lieu of the customary reading of the communiqué.

Thus perhaps he might be made to realize the sufferings endured by millions of men who, through his fault, were sent to the slaughter.

BOY SENT TO REFORMATORY FOR SLAYING FRENCH SEAMAN

NEW YORK, Feb. 28.—Edward Sullivan, seventeen years old, pleading guilty to slaying John Le Goef, a French seaman, was sentenced by Judge Nott in General Sessions to Elmira Reformatory, from which for good behaviour he may be released in thirteen months. Sullivan, indicted for murder in the first degree, pleaded guilty to manslaughter in the second degree. At the time of the murder Sullivan was at liberty on a suspended sentence for carrying a revolver.

George Brothers, Assistant District Attorney, who recommended the plea, said that Sullivan's fact, he believed, was in the heat of passion and that it would have been difficult to convict him of murder. On January 1 last Le Goef and another seaman were held up in West sixteenth street by several highwaymen. It was charged that Le Goef grappled with one of the robbers and was beating him when Sullivan stabbed him in the chest.

Judge Nott said that he had written to the authorities at Elmira Reformatory suggesting that Sullivan be detained there as long as possible. Sullivan, who is undersized, looks to be younger than the age he gave, Judge Nott said.

Keep the Bowels Regular and You'll be Healthy

For a Quarter You Can Assist Them Wonderfully With Dr. Hamilton's Pills.

You'll never have health if the bowels are inactive. By keeping them right you ensure a clean, wholesome body. Why wait for constipation to clog up and sicken the whole system—use Dr. Hamilton's Pills—they are the purest, mildest laxative known: put no strength into the muscles of the stomach and never injure the delicate lining of the bowels. Dr. Hamilton's Pills are best because they help nature help herself, and thereby keep the stomach strong, digestion good, blood pure, complexion clear, spirits bright and happy. Price 25c.

GERMANS LACK FARM LABOUR.

"City Loafers" Denounced for Refusal to Help Raise Crops.

COBLENZ, Feb. 26.—The Civil Affairs Administration of the American Army of Occupation has a problem to adjust which arises out of the hostility of the farmers in this region toward the "city loafers" while we have several thousand farmers in our territory unable to get labour to attend to the spring planting.

The "city loafers" who are paid 10 marks a day by the German authorities while idle, refuse to go to work on the farms where their pay probably would be less. In return the farmers say they will decrease their acreage unless they get help from the city, refusing to work long hours to feed those who will not work.

Not only this, but the farmers in our sector are very much at odds with the disturbers in the industrial centres. They regard the disturbances as largely responsible for many of Germany's troubles to-day.

An official American statement on this point says:

"The farmers complain of the inadequacy of labour for spring planting. Individual farmers are considering primarily their own needs in regard to planting, and so far as information is obtainable are quite deaf to the national needs in regard to the wheat and rye crops. The opinion is freely expressed, 'We do not propose to feed the town and city loafers.' This is a reference to the industrial cities which have been guilty of various forms of excesses."

Another complication has arisen in that the Grain Bureau in Berlin refuses permission to the local Grain Bureaus in the occupied territory to buy seed grain in the interior of Germany. The farmers hereabout say that if the usual source of the seed grain supply is closed thousands of acres along the Rhine will be unplanted this spring.

OPERATION FOR APPENDICITIS.

Mrs. J. A. [illegible], Sturgeon Falls, Ont., writes: "My husband was treated for appendicitis and the doctors ordered an operation. But he would not consent to an operation and began the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. Since doing so he has had no need of an operation or even of a doctor as the trouble has completely left him. I cannot find words to speak our gratitude for his cure."

THE CANOPIC TO LEAVE FOR ITALY.

NEW YORK.— Announcement was made by the White Star line that its steamship, the Canopic, will resume passenger and freight traffic between New York and the Mediterranean, via the Azores and Gibraltar, this afternoon with more than one thousand passengers. Most of these are Italians returning to their native country.

With Other Councils

Brantford and Hamilton are planning a joint effort to secure the discontinuance of the provincial war tax of one mill.

Want Civic 8-Hour Day.

Chatham Council has laid over for two weeks the consideration of a proposal from the Workingmen's Monday Morning Bulletins:

PARIS, March 3.—A committee from Vienna who came to Paris pleading for food have returned home without gaining any results.

Board of Trade that civic employees granted the eight-hour day.

Investigating Prices.

GUELPH, Feb. 27.— fair-price Committee, appointed by the City Council, is out to ascertain the reasonableness of some prices that Guelph people are paying.

Ald. Westoby stated that he was securing figures regarding the buying and selling of coal by the local merchants, in getting the freight rates from the mines to Guelph, what it costs to handle the coal after it gets here and other data in connection with this matter, and will then try to reach some conclusion as to what margin of profit the coal dealers are making. He is also securing from other cities in Ontario the prices being paid by consumers for milk, and this question will be gone into thoroughly.

Galt Revises Assessment.

GALT, Feb. 27.—After a couple of months, during which 28 sessions were held, the court of revision on assessment has completed its work, and the final figures now show an increase in the 1918 assessment over that of 1917 of $1,6[illegible],341. The court made alterations in the figures of the assessor which amount to a decrease of $593,955, while the increase made, which was in the business assessment, was only $2,430.

The new rooms of the Independent Labour party on Ainslie Street, to be known as the Labour Temple, have been opened. Mayor MacBride, of Brantford, was to have formally opened the rooms, but he failed to appear.

A Refund to Soldiers.

WINDSOR, Feb. 28.—At a meeting of the Civic Patriotic Committee a decision was reached to refund to all local soldiers who served overseas any taxes they may have paid last year for patriotic purposes. The exemption will apply, however, only to those owning homes or a lot or two, as it was pointed out some officers hold much property for speculative purposes.

No further financial aid will be extended by the Windsor Civic Patriotic Committee to outside municipalities that are unable to take care of their own soldiers' dependents. This decision was arrived at at a special meeting of the committee. It was pointed out that Windsor has already contributed $200,000 to the Canadian Patriotic Fund, besides caring for her own soldiers' dependents.

A Saving in Debentures.

ST. THOMAS, Feb. 28.—Since the commencement of the war City Treasurer S. O. Perry saved $7,550 in handling city debentures by selling them over the counter. Mr. Perry stated to the meeting of the Finance Committee that in 1915 he sold $114,000. He was offered 97 for these in Toronto, but sold them at par over the counter, effecting a saving of $2,850.66. In 1918 he sold $85,000, saving $1,672. In 1918 the amount sold at a higher rate of interest was $74,707.26, making a total saving in the entire four years of $7,550.

A Street Railway Leak.

ST. THOMAS, Feb. 28.—According to Chairman Walker of the Street Railway Committee, the conductors of the city street railway are attempting to knock the road instead of assisting it. He read a report made out by the conductors, and, according to this, their figures on the number of passengers carried each day are in all cases several hundred less than the figures shown by the cash fares collected and checked by the secretary. He charged them with being negligent and thought them worthy of a vote of censure. The committee also heard a report of the trip to Cornwall, but the report of the Citizens' Committee was laid over for a later date.

Harmless Means of Reducing Fat

Many people fear ordinary means for reducing their weight. Here is an extraordinary method. Extraordinary because while perfectly harmless no dieting or exercising are necessary. Marmola Prescription Tablets are made exactly in accordance with the famous Marmola Prescription. A reduction of two, three or more pounds a week is possible. Procure them from any druggist or if you prefer send 75 cents to the Marmola Co., 932 Woodward Ave., Detroit, Mich., for a large case.

Back at You!

An elderly married couple, each of weighty proportions, were about to take an automobile ride. As the husband made no attempt to assist his wife into the car, she turned to him and said: "You are not nearly so gallant as you were when you were a boy."

"And you, my dear," he returned, "are not nearly so buoyant as when you were a gal."

Hunger and Cold Devastate Moscow

WARSAW, Feb 28.—Forty pounds of wheat flour are being sold at Moscow for 800 rubles, and sugar is 50 rubles a pound, with both commodities virtually unobtainable. Straving horses which fall in the streets are stripped of their flesh before they are cold. Money is of little value, and pearls, diamonds, jewels, fine bronze clocks, and paintings bring little when traded. Thefts in these lines are, therefore, infrequent.

In order to get food a trader must offer clothes. Women refugees from Moscow were recently held up at Smolenak, it is said, and their clothing was stolen, but the soldiers disdained to take a beautiful pearl necklace, so that its owner was able to sell the necklace here.

Intense cold prevails in Moscow, and fuel is so scarce that wooden houses in the suburbs of the city have been torn down for fuel. Fine furniture has also been used for the same purpose. Stores have been closed by merchants, but the Soviet Government has taken over some of the larger places, where only Bolsheviki are served.

Flower shops and hairdressers do a fine business, about thirty of these places being open. Leon Trotsky, the Bolshevik Minister of War and Marine, who is fastidious about his personal appearance, has a special lady manicure, patronizes them.

Nikolai Lenine, the Bolshevist Premier, who is considered quite mad by some of his colleagues, is the only prominent Bolshevik left who appears to live an austere life. It is related that his automobile got stalled in a snow drift, and at this moment footpads appeared and appropriated the driver's fur coat. They also demanded Lenine's, and the latter explained. "I am Lenine," but the thieves retorted: "That is all right. We know you don't object, so long as we are comrades," and then they made off.

Russia is beset by all kinds of diseases, typhus being particularly prevalent. Vodka substitutes are being used, and have a weakening effect upon the people. Kerosene and benzine are reported to be common drinks. The first thing that marauding soldiers on the Polish frontier demand is liquor. They appear never to be sober. The large number of deaths in Moscow has led to a decree making the undertaking business a State monopoly.

"KAMERAD' PISTOL CAUSED ARREST OF Y.M.C.A. MAN.

NEW YORK, March 1, — "Ever see a Kamerad pistol?" asked Alexander P. Watson, of Knoxville, Tenn., a Y.M.C.A. secretary, just returned from a year's service in France, in the course of a conversation with Policeman Thomas Duane. Duane said he had not had the pleasure, and Watson thereupon produced a small German pistol capable of concealment in the palm of the hand. Duane arrested Watson, charging a violation of the Sullivan law.

Watson explained to Magistrate Gray in the Jefferson Market Court, that no cartridges small enough to fit the weapon could be found this side of Germany, and the charge against him was dismissed.

The Y.M.C.A. Secretary said that he saw active service with the ninth Infantry at Chateau-Thierry, St. Mihiel, Soissons and in the Argonne and had been wounded three and gassed once.

PARIS, March 3.—The Supreme War Council to-day takes up the terms of the preliminary peace to be imposed on Germany. At the same time it discusses conditions under which the economic blockade of that country will be partially raised.

Conditions under which the blockade is to be modified will, it is understood, be ready to put into effect immediately after the return to Paris of President Wilson, Premier Lloyd George and Premier Orlando. The separate peace terms probably will be completed by the first of next month, after which details of the treaties with Austria, Bulgaria and Turkey will be discussed.

War Material.

The military and naval terms to be included in the preliminary peace pact will render Germany absolutely powerless to make war, it was learned from authoritative sources. Marshal Foch's report, submitted Saturday, was said to include destruction of all German war material with the exception of arms for a few divisions which will be left for police duty. The Allies will also be given supervision over all German munition factories.

The naval conditions were said to include the surrender to the Allies of practically all that remains of the German navy. The units to be turned over will be the battleships Oldenburg, Thuringen, Ostfriesland, Helgoland, Posen, Westfallen, Rheinland and Nassau; the light cruisers Pillau, Graudenz, Regensburg, Stralsund, Strassburg, Augsburg, Kilburg and Stuttgart; forty-two modern destroyers and fifty modern torpedo boats.

WILL BE BROKEN UP.

Warships under construction will be broken up. All German submarines, submarine docks and the famous Kiel tubular dock must be surrendered or destroyed within two weeks after the treaty is signed. Similar work in the process of construction must be broken up within three months after peace is concluded, though the materials may be used for peaceful purposes.

The German naval craft already interned in Allied harbours will be seized. They may be destroyed, although French objection may result in the modification of this plant.

The fortifications of Heligoland will be destroyed. All Baltic defences will be razed and the Kiel Canal will be opened to vessels of all nations.

CABLE LINES.

Merchant cruisers and auxiliaries, which can easily be converted into merchantmen, will be treated as such. German cables will not be returned, and German wireless will be limited to commercial uses.

When peace is concluded with Austria, her fleet of thirteen battleships, two cruisers, ten light cruisers, 19 destroyers, 51 torpedo boats, 33 submarines and 12 Danube monitors will be handed over. The Turkish and Bulgarian navies will likewise be seized.

In an interview with correspondents yesterday Foreign Minister Pichon said that no official information had been received regarding the reported resignation of Chancellor Scheidermann. If it proved to be true, he said, it would materially affect the possibilities of concluding a peace with Germany. He said the National Assembly appears to be the representative of the German people, making it the government with which the Allies will have to deal.

Threatened To Throw Their Officers Overboard

(Canadian Press.)

St. John, N. B., March 3. — While some returning soldiers from the Transport Scotian, called it a "tempest in a teapot," others declared that there were really serious troubles on that vessel. They complained bitterly of overcrowding and close confinement on the vessel, and when they made a rumpus, and the officers threatened to take drastic measures, the soldiers say they threatened to throw any officer overboard who took such action. A report has been forwarded to Ottawa.

THE GERMAN GOVERNMENT HAS PARTIALLY RECOGNIZED SOVIETS

Riots Continue in Several Parts of the Country - Effort to Prevent Strikes From Becoming a Nation-wide Revolution

(By Frank J. Taylor—United Press.)

BERLIN, March 3. — The German government has partially recognized the Soviets.

In a frantic effort to prevent general strikes from becoming a nation-wide revolution, the cabinet issued a proclamation, admitting social and economic control of industries by workmen's councils, but promising stringent punishment for further disorders.

The workers, dissatisfied with this "half-way measure," and insisting on full political recognition, threatened an uprising within a week that will be of sufficient power to overthrow the government.

A general strike in Berlin appeared imminent to-day. The bourgeoisie councils threatened a retaliation strike. Patrols here have been doubled.

Riots are reported to be continuing in Leipzig and Halle. In Munich a number of casualties resulted when troops ousted the Spartacans from several industrial plants.

Hundreds of Criminals Will Be Brought To Justice For Crimes Committed During War

Commission Investigating the Responsibility for Crimes May Be Ready to Submit Its Report by Saturday—Tribunal May Have to Sit For Several Years—Turkish Officers Already Waiting Trial.

(By Lowell Mellett, Copyright 1919, by the United Press.)

PARIS, March 3. — The greatest Grand Jury indictment the world has ever seen will soon be returned.

The commission investigating the responsibility for crimes committed during the war was expected to-day to submit its report by Saturday. The true bill will contain hundreds of names,.. ranging from lieutenants to officers of the highest rank. Against each will be charged in detail the crimes he is alleged to have committed against humanity.

If the present purpose of the commission remains unchanged the name of Wilhelm Hohenzollern will lead all the rest. But, at the same time, the United Press was authoritatively advised that it has been practically concluded that it will be impossible to visit direct punishment on the former Kaiser. Men like General Ludendorff and Field Marshal Von Hindenburg are likely to escape for the same reason—although it is possible to establish their responsibility as the men higher up, if it is impossible to disregard the fact that all their acts can be defended on the ground that they were carrying out the policies of the state.

CAN BE PUNISHED.

The highest ranking officials deemed certain of being punished are the former military governors of various cities and districts who had arbitrary authority over the lives of enemy citizens, and who abused their power or allowed subordinates to do so. These, of whom there are hundreds, will be tried before an international tribunal which the commission will recommend to be formed under sanction of the League of Nations. This tribunal is expected to sit for the next several years, hearing evidence in individual cases, passing judgment, and fixing penalties as each case is completed.

A permanent prosecuting committee is also planned... In just what manner warrants will be served and arrests made, has not been determined, however. When the commission's list is turned over to the Peace Conference, it is expected it will be kept secret until as many as possible are arrested. Later, the names and pictures of those not found will be furnished to the rogues galleries in all countries... The commissioners are confident that practically all of the accused will be rounded up eventually and be compelled to face the tribunal... Some arrests have already been made, notably a number of Turkish officers, who are being held until the court is set up and ready to hear their cases.

..."We had some knowledge of the atrocities that had been committed, but the detailed evidence placed before us made our blood run cold," one member of the commission said.

"One is inclined to say at first that men of that kind should be boiled in oil, but it is better for the world that they be given fair trials and the most impartial justice. That is our purpose."

THE HOUSING SCHEME WILL BE RUSHED THROUGH HOUSE TO-DAY

Department of Labour Will Be Created—Few Drastic Changes

(Special to Examiner.)

Parliament Buildings, Toronto, March 3. — With a few minor changes made in committee, following the second reading, the Ontario Government's big housing scheme will probably be rushed through the Legislature this afternoon. The bill as presented to the House on the opening day is practically intact, and both parties, realizing the need of expediting the measure, are dispensing with controversy as far as practicable.

The bill is still in committee but it is expected it will be the first matter brought to the attention of the House when it assembles this afternoon. As soon as it is dispensed with the bill to establish a Department of Labour, which was given its first reading on Wednesday, will be taken up. This bill constitutes to-day's programme, as continuation of the debate on the Speech from the Throne will not likely be taken up by Premier Hearst until Tuesday afternoon.

Housing Bill.

An extended discussion of the Housing Bill is in order, however, and while the government is not disposed to agree to any drastic changes, any amendments will be welcomed. The amendments are forthcoming from William Proudfoot, the Opposition leader, and Sam Carter. These include a method of standardization in the purchase of materials, and recommendations as to effecting economy in construction of houses.

The Liberal leader and his followers strongly support the bill creating a Department of Labour and a deputy Minister, and there will be no discussion on this measure. The bill provides that the trades and labor branch shall be a separate department of the public service, to be known as the Department of Labour, under the direction and control of a member of the Executive Council to be designated by the Lieutenant-Governor in Council.

The Superintendent of the Trades and Labour Branch (Mr. W. A. Riddell) is to be known as the Deputy Minister of Labour, and where in any act duties are imposed or authority or powers are conferred upon the Superintendent, such duties shall be performed and authority and powers may be exercised by the Deputy Minister.

A Few Changes were made in the Committee Stage.

(Canadian Press.)

TORONTO, March 3. — With a few changes made in the Committee stage the Ontario government's big Housing Scheme Bill will probably be rushed through the Legislature this afternoon. Both parties realize the urgency of the bill.

William Proudfoot, the opposition leader, and Sam Carter, the member for Wellington, have some amendments before the House, and these will be discussed to-day.

A bill creating a Department of Labour with Mr. W. A. Riddel as the Deputy Minister, will probably

WILL HAVE A SHORT WEEK

The Senate Has Adjourned Until March 17th—Debate Will Continue All Week

THE OTTAWA HOUSE

Special to the Examiner:

OTTAWA, March 3.—It is another short, four-day week that opens in Parliament this afternoon. Ash Wednesday is a full Government holiday.

The House of Commons will have the field entirely to themselves both this week and the next. The Senate has adjourned until the seventeenth of March. Before leaving, it passed the Railway Act Consolidation Bill, which is likely to be one of the first measures debated by the Commons.

In the meantime, the debate on the address continues and may last all the week. There are sure to be arid patches, interspersed with more interesting points, including those of Michael Clark, Sir Sam Hughes, Lapointe, probably Murphy and likely two or three Cabinet Ministers.

NO DECISION.

The opposition office still says that no decision has been reached on possible amendments to the address, but the general opinion that at least one or two will be offered, on the affair, if one comes it will go further than any projected government action which is almost sure to be in the nature of a compromise, if for the present moment it is even that. As for the predicted amendment, the Government's answer will probably be that this is not the time to decide the tariff, that the House should wait for the budget and that full opportunity for the debate will then be given.

The Western members will be content with this explanation, and there is no sign of serious embarassment for the Government at this stage of the session.

SOCIAL WAS A GREAT SUCCESS

A successful social was held at the W.O.W. Hall on Friday evening in aid of the St. Albans Church. During the evening the audience were delighted with Mr. Thompson (the Peterborough Harry Lauder), whose impersonations are always such a success; also Mr. Andrews, whose musical novelty was quite a treat. Mr. W. Parker with his Irish song was also loudly applauded. Mr. Parkins and Mr. Alfie Parkins played several melodies on their guitar and banjo, and were the hit of the evening. The following artists took part in the concert and were all well received:

Song—My Ain Ain Folk, Mrs. McKinley.
Violin Solo—Miss Winnie Evans.
Vocal Solo—Master Dick Evans.
Song — Bonnie Scotland, Mrs. Thompson.
Musical Selection—Mr. Andrews.
Song—Danny, Miss Laura Thomas.
Song—Danny and its Nice to Get Up in the Morning, Mr. Thompson.
Musical Selection—Banjo and guitar, Mr. Parkins and Mr. Alfie Parkins.
Song — Irishman in France and Blighty, Mr. W. Parker.
Song—Scotch, Mr. Inch.
Song—Boys of the King, Mrs. Wagstaff.

Mr. Parkins made an ideal chairman, and Mrs. T. Poole was pianist. After the concert refreshments were served by Mrs. Blake, Mrs. Steele and a few more ladies. A short dance then took place. The music was supplied by Mr. Parkins and Mr. Alfie Parkins and Mr. Whalley.

Skating To-night At Brock St. Rink

Ice is Good and It May Be the Last Week of the Season

There is good skating at Brock street rink for to-night and it is hoped it will continue all week. The rink usually closes about the 10th of March, and it is just possible this week will see the end of it.

There will be a good band to-night and every night this week.

GERMANY OBJECTS TO DISPOSITION OF GERMAN COLONIES.

Several Peterborough Men Have Arrived At St. John

The Remains of Bandsman Preston Grange, Son of Fire Chief Grange, Reached St. John on the "Melita"

A LONG LIST

ST. JOHN, N.B., March 3. — Two C.P.O.S. liners, the Scotia and the Melita, arrived here over the week-end, bringing almost 2500 returning officers and men of the C. E. F. There were some reports of complaints especially by the men of the Scotian, who claimed that their quarters were cramped. There were 2200 passengers to come on this boat alone. The civilians on both steamers were very large. The women and children, who numbered several thousand, were perhaps the best looking lot that has arrived here this season from the other side. There were no passengers on board the Melita for Peterboro. The Scotian has the fololwing Peterboro men:

Pte. R. G. Dorrell, J. McBride, Gunner A. E. Dryland, Ptes. H. Godfrey, A. E. Sims, T. H. Skinner, G. Armstrong, A. J. Buckley and B. F. Casson, A. Noakes, T. H. Curtin, A. Bartley, J. C. Harrison, A. Hockins.

The Melita brought the remains of Bandsman Preston Grange, which is being shipped through to Peterboro.

HALIFAX, March 3. — The following are the Peterboro men who arrived at Halifax on the Transport "Belgic:"

3067781 Sapper James Daley.
195887 Sapper J. McMurray, 93rd Battalion.

The Spartacans Are Still Active

Guards Opened Fire on Train Carrying Spartacan Crew

Canadian Press:

BERLIN, March 3.—Spartacan leaders in the strike district of Central Germany are sending out propaganda by trains and automobiles into districts not as yet affected by the strike. An unscheduled train, of which the Spartacans had obtained control, attempted to pass the station at Kothen, but was stopped by station guards, who opened fire on it with rifles and machine guns. One woman was killed and eight civilian passengers were severely wounded. The Spartacan's train crew, including the station master at Halle, a youth of 18 years of age, were arrested. The Spartacans had distributed incendiary literature from Halle to Kothen. At Edderitz the authorities halted an automobile occupied by Spartacans, who were heading for the Anhalt mining region for the alleged purpose of inciting a strike there. The Spartacans were arrested.

Life or Death.

Special to The Examiner:

COPENHAGEN, March 3.— Life or death of the present German government is expected to be determined this week on the question of political recognition of the Soviets, according to despatches received from Berlin to-day. The Spartacans were said to be gaining ground, even among the Majority Socialists.

Will Discuss Good Roads

Conference Will Last Three Days — Highway Laws

Special to the Examiner:

TORONTO (Parliament Buildings), March 3.—"Owing to the close relationship which exists between the country and the township road superintendents and the engineers of the Highway Department in connection with the administration of the highway laws of the province, such meetings prove invaluable in carrying out the general scheme of road improvement," said W. A. McLean, Deputy Minister of Highways in connection with the fifth annual conference of county road superintendents and engineers which opens in the Mining Building at Queen's Park this afternoon. The conference will last three days and will be given over to discussion on technical questions in connection with road construction and maintenance. Uniformity of method and organization, through the province, is desirable, Mr. McLean points out, and to this end it is advisable that the engineers of the Department should be familiar with conditions in the various counties and that the superintendents and engineers should know the views of the Department.

INVESTIGATING THE COAL SITUATION

Outstanding War Contracts Will Be Adjusted by United States

Canadian Press:

WASHINGTON, March 3.— A bill validating and authorizing the adjustment of more than two and a half billion dollars of war contracts and thirty-three million dollars rivers and harbours appropriation bill were signed to-day by President Wilson. Senator Vardoman, of Mississippi, chairman of the Senate Manufactures Committee, to-day inserted in the Congressional record, a statement on the committee's investigation of the anthracite coal situation, charging that the production of anthracite coal in the United States is controlled by eight large transportation companies, which, through an almost complete monopoly, were able to fix prices and determine the rate of production.

Sir Robert Borden May Return Home

Some of the Big Questions Will Be Delayed Until the Premier's Return.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

OTTAWA, March 3.—In view of statements from overseas it is believed here that Sir Robert Borden will be back in his place in the Commons about the first week in April. Until the later date it is believed that a serious discussion of the fiscal policies will be postponed. It is expected that heavy estimates to be laid before the House will include expenditures of seventy or eighty millions for National Railways and 30 millions for shipbuilding as well as substantial votes for pensions, repatriation, etc. Many motions by private members are awaiting discussion such as titles, minimum wage boards, the Guelph's Noviate, and so on.

The Toronto Markets

Canadian Press:

TORONTO, March 3. — Receipts quite heavy, trade dull at opening, but prices ruled fairly steady. Choice export cattle, $15 to $16. Choice butchers cattle, $10.50 to $12.50. Medium butcher cows, $8.50 to $10. Ewes, $10 to $10.50. Lambs, $16.50 to $17.25. Hogs, fed and watered, $18. Hogs, f.o.b., $17.25. Calves, $16.75 to $17.25.

LABOURMEN IN SESSION

Attempt to Settle British Labour Troubles by Constitutional Action Rather Than Strikes

JOINT MEETINGS

(Special to The Examiner.)

LONDON, March 3.—The attempt to settle British labour troubles by constitutional action rather than strikes began to-day. The newly created coal industry commission, which will investigate the mining situation held its initial meeting. Upon the report of this body, to be submitted March 20, probably will depend whether a nation-wide miners' strike will go into effect March 22 as planned.

The join national industrial commission will begin a series of meetings to-morrow in an effort to ascertain what is necessary to allay industrial unrest. These meetings are expected to continue through the month.

Pending reports of these two committees, there appears to be little likelihood of any big strikes, although the Railway Clerks' Association at a conference in Birmingham has passed a resolution, declaring that unless their demands are granted by March 11 "drastic action will be taken."

COMING TO THE ROYAL

"Boy Scout to the Rescue" Picture

"Boy Scout to the Rescue" film, brought by Mr. Pappas and the Local Council to induce the mothers and fathers of boys to see what a Boy Scout learns.

The only film with real Boy Scout all through it, under the personal supervision of Baden-Powell himself, who is seen in the pictures.

1. What is the Boy Scout film?
2. A great 5-part picture of patriotism and Scout knowledge.
3. The only picture of its kind in the world.
4. Produced under Lieut.-General Sir Robert S. S. Baden-Powell, hero of Mafeking, founder and Chief Scout of the British and Canadian Boy Scouts.
5. Supported by the officials and members of the British Boy Scouts.
6. Packed full of clean but dangerous adventure, and enormously educative.

Fifty per cent. of the old Peterborough Boy Scouts volunteered for service. Two won Military Medals, 10 promoted, 1 gave his life, and all for the glory of Peterborough and Canada.

This film will be shown every Wednesday and Thursday for five weeks, starting March 5 and 6, till April 2 and 3.

Series tickets for the five weeks can be had from the Boy Scouts. Buy your ticket from the Scouts. Attend the picture and boost the Scout movement in Peterborough.

City's 1,500 Tons of Coal Will Be Sold At Reduced Prices

City Treasurer Adams reported to the Fire, Water and Light Committee on Saturday night that from April 1st to December 31st, 67 cars containing 2,466 tons of coal, were received at the municipal fuel yard. There remain 1,500 tons at present, which the committee decided to sell at a discount. The coal consists largely of nut and pea sizes, with some mine run.

Ald. Garside moved, seconded by Mayor Duncan, that authority be given to sell the coal in the municipal fuel yard at the following prices: Buckwheat nut $9.00 a ton, pea and mine run at $10.00 a ton, and pea and nut mixed at $11.00 a ton, and that the coal be advertised at these prices.

Ald. Taylor moved, seconded by Ald. Garside, that Ald. Morrison and Mayor Duncan be authorized to purchase uniforms and outfits needed for the four new firemen.

MONDAY, MARCH 3RD, 1919.

THE NEW LISTS.

During the terrible days of the war when those at home waited in momentary dread of bad news from overseas, it was the sad duty of the Examiner to bulletin the list of casualties among the Peterborough members of the Canadian Expeditionary Force. People whose dear friends were in the thick of the fighting used to approach the bulletin boards in breathless anxiety, and turn away at the name of some loved one among those who had fallen in the fight for democracy.

Now, Providence be thanked, the Examiner is able to bulletin new lists—not of casualties, but of those who have been spared to come home. The bulletin are telling of the safe arrival of loved ones, and while they are as sorrowfully read as before, it is a happy, hopeful throng that gathers around a new list of home-coming soldiers. People no longer tremble when they read a list of names, because they realize that if they come across a familiar name it only means that some good friend has been spared to come home from the turmoil.

Incidentally it may be mentioned that the Examiner, realizing the tremendous interest there is in the arrival of Peterborough soldiers from overseas, has been successful in completing arrangements by which this paper is able to secure the names of Peterborough men within a few hours of the arrival of their transports at St. John or Halifax. The Examiner is in receipt of this news before any body else in Peterborough is able to get the information. Over the week end the names of local soldiers who arrived on the Lapland and the Belgic were telephoned for the benefit of their friends, and the news conveyed in this way was a welcome service to hundreds of citizens.

THE ICE SUPPLY.

The absence of cold weather during the greater part of the winter has interfered to some extent with the ice supply for next summer, and the people who cut and store ice for use during the warm weather have been forced, in some cases, to procure ice from unusual sources. For instance, a number of individuals have been for some time cutting ice in the old sewer at the foot of London Street, where the stagnant condition of the water has produced thicker ice than on Little Lake or other points. It is presumed that the city's health authorities are aware that ice cutting has been going on at this point, and have taken precautions to see that the ice harvested is of this doubtful source is to be used only for refrigerators. While there would be no harm in using it in that way, there would be a decided element of danger in allowing such ice to be employed in making ice-water or cooling other beverages. Any one who has seen the condition of the water in the raceway would certainly hesitate before drinking any of it, and care should be taken to see that none of the ice from this apparently polluted stream is permitted to be used in a manner that would be a menace to the public health.

JUST A REMINDER.

In providing bathing places should be discussed by the City Council at its regular meeting to-night, and there will be disappointment among many citizens if the aldermen who pledged themselves to supporting this movement do not see that the matter is brought before the Council to-night and some action taken. Admittedly the bathing question is a ... one alongside of the Hunter Street bridge presents ... problem and other matters ... which this year's Council ... but there is nothing ... little expenditure could ... so much amusement and recreation for as many people as proper ... swimming places. And for that ... the Examiner is justified in returning again and again to this matter. For a number of years we have been urging the City Council to do something to take advantage of the facilities offered by the beautiful ... stream through our city. Deputations were organized and monster petitions were signed and forwarded to the Council. The efforts were unsuccessful. The city's rulers admitted the desirability of the scheme, but the curtailment of public expense that was made necessary by the war furnished them with a reason for not taking any action. The validity of the excuse was admitted by those who had pressed the claims of the young people of the city for proper bathing places, and the refusal was accepted philosophically. Now, however, the hundreds of citizens who signed the petitions have a right to expect that their request will be listened to, and that the Council will deal with the matter promptly and wisely.

Just how much should be done this year may be left to the judgment of the Council. At all events, if it is not considered possible to provide other swimming places, the aldermen should at least see that enough funds are provided to improve the conditions at Inverlea Park. Much could be done, at small expense, in making that popular amusement place more comfortable, and the estimates should contain an appropriation for that work.

WAR MEMORIALS.

In towns all over the country there are now under consideration various proposals to perform the admirable and pious task of erecting some sort of a memorial to the men of the vicinage who fought and more especially to those who died, for their country and the world in the great war which as yet is without a name. Everywhere there is a discussion, not infrequently shrilling to rather passionate controversy, as to the form which such a memorial should take.

Practically all of the suggestions made can be divided into two classes—those aiming at the construction of something distinctly and exclusively monumental in character, and of no other than of memorial utility, and those that will serve, long or forever, the living as well as the dead, the people who did not participate in the war directly and personally as ... as those who did. The upholders of the one idea talk of arches and statues, while the desire of their antagonists is to avoid what they do not hesitate to call "a waste of money," and to derive from whatever expenditures are made continuing advantages of a material or social sort. Their minds run ... such things as bridges, hospitals, and, oftenest of all, perhaps, to a carefully vague and undefined institution usually described as a "community house."

The two groups speak quite different languages, and though they argue endlessly they never come to an agreement. Their dispute can be settled only by a vote, and to a vote the submission of the defeated party is likely to be reluctant and a little bitter.

Both the advocates of a ... memorial ... monumental in nature and those who want what they call "something useful" are well-intentioned folk, and it is a pity that they fail to see that the ... is not about how a certain thing ... be done. On the one hand, too, less than enough attention is paid to the possibility — which experience has shown to be the probability — that monuments erected under municipal auspices will be viewed with sadness by the aesthetically enlightened. From them, as a rule, but little of inspiration can be expected.

On the other hand the seekers after the element of utility in a memorial forget that while this is easily and properly attained when a man founds a public institution with his own money, to be spent either while he is alive or after he is dead, it is far from the same thing when a town makes by public subscription something it needs or wants and merely calls it a memorial. Calling it one doesn't make it so—it remains a hospital, a library, a bridge, a park, or whatever, just the same.

Least hopeful of all these "useful" undertakings, from the memorial point of view, is the so-called community house. Not only would such a house have no conceivable relation to the war or to those who fought in it, but only in a few very exceptional towns would such an institution be long in becoming merely a club-house for whatever social group or faction happened to gain possession of it.

Much could be said in support of the contention that a "useful" memorial — anything, that is, of use otherwise than as a memorial—cannot be a memorial in more than name, if it be a product of public generosity.—New York Times.

WANTS $829,827,200 TO MAINTAIN ARMY OVERSEAS.

WASHINGTON, D. C. — Congress was asked by Mr. Baker, Secretary of War, for a deficiency appropriation of $829,827,200 to pay for the subsistence of the army overseas during the remainder of the present fiscal year. The law recently passed by Congress repealing $15,000,000,000 of war appropriations cancelled $2,995,400,000 of the $5,451,000,000 appropriation carried for the Quartermaster's Corps, and the Secretary explained that this large reduction caused the deficit.

A Group of Pierrettes and Pierrot in the Famous Musical Novelty Sensation, "The Pierrot Players," at the Grand next Wednesday, March 5th. Bargain Matinee: Lower Floor, 50c; Entire Balcony, 25c. No Reserve. Evenings: 50c, 75c, $1.00. Gallery 25c.

Refreshing and brilliant are the many musical numbers which the Pierrot Players will present at the Grand next Wednesday. The Pierrot Players are a company of star artists presenting the brightest and most brilliant English comedies, picturesque costumes, mirthful pantomime, graceful dancing, and singing, assisted by an augmented orchestra of ladies, makes this a some-what different attraction and the greatest novelty of the present season.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

Dates Arranged For O.H.A. Finals

St. Patrick's and Hamilton Play Home-and-home Games This Week

The O.H.A. championship season in all three series—senior, intermediate and junior—has reached the stage where the finalists are in sight, and dates have been arranged by the sub-committee for the play-offs for the J. Ross Robertson Cups and the championship of the association.

In the senior series the Hamilton team have qualified for the finals and will meet St. Patrick's on Wednesday and Saturday nights of this week.

Wednesday, March 5—St. Patrick's at Hamilton.

Saturday, March 8—Hamilton vs. St. Patrick's, at Toronto Arena.

In the intermediate series there are three clubs left in the running, viz., Collingwood, Seaforth and Kingston. Seaforth played at Collingwood last night and the return game will be played at Seaforth Monday night. The winner will meet Kingston in the final. Dates have been arranged as follows:

Thursday, March 6—Kingston at winner Seaforth-Collingwood.

Monday, March 10—Winner Seaforth-Collingwood at Kingston.

The junior series is down to four clubs, viz., Woodstock, Sudbury, University Schools (Toronto), and Cornwall. In the semi-finals Woodstock has a five-goal lead on Sudbury for the return game in Woodstock on Monday night. U. T. S. will go to Cornwall on Monday, and play the return game in Toronto on Thursday, March 6.

The dates for the finals have been arranged as follows:—

Wednesday, March 12—Winner U. T. S.-Cornwall at Woodstock-Sudbury winner.

Saturday, March 15—Woodstock-Sudbury winner at winner U.T.S.-Cornwall.

The dates for the Allan Cup games and the two matches for the junior championship of Canada will be announced later. They will all be played in Toronto.

It's "All Off" With Ottawa

Canadiens Win Third Consecutive Playoff Game by 6 to 3

MONTREAL, March 3.—By defeating Ottawa in the third game of the play-offs for the N.H.L. championship by 6 to 3 at the Jubilee Ring on Saturday night, Canadiens practically won the title and earned the right to travel to Vancouver to play for the historic Stanley Cup. Canadiens have defeated the Senators decisively in three matches within a week, and on past form should win at the Capital to-day when the fourth game will be played.

Lalonde by himself beat Ottawa, scoring five of his team's six tallies. His work in directing his team practically accounted for the victory, and so appreciated was his work that immediately after the game he was presented with a bouquet of flowers as he stepped off the ice. The other Canadien goal was scored by Pitre on one of his bullet shots.

Ottawa was again minus Frank Nighbor, who was expected back in time for the game, but who failed to put in an appearance. The teams:—

Canadiens—Goal, Vezina; points, Hall and Corbeau; centre, Lalonde; wings, Pitre and Berlinquette.

Ottawa—Goals Benedict; points, Cameron and S. Cleghorn; centre, Darragh; wings, Broadbent and Gerard.

Substitutes—Canadians: Malone, O. Cleghorn, McDonald and Couture. Ottawa: Boucher and Cy Denmenay.

Referee—Harry Hyland. Judge of play—Jack Marshall. Umpires—W. Gathercole and Art. Ross. Scorers—E. W. Ferguson and C. Hart. Timer—A. Leburge.

ST. PAT'S WIN GROUP TITLE

Kitchener Are Outplayed by Green Shirts and Lose 3-1

Showing a marked reversal of form, a splendid defence, and a systematic attack that would not be denied, St. Patricks on Saturday night defeated Kitchener 3 to 1 and qualified to meet Hamilton in the O.H.A. senior finals. The result which, for the most part, was totally unexpected, came like a shot from the blue, but even the most partisan supporters of the dethroned Allan Cup holders admitted that the better team won. St. Patricks will play Tigers in Hamilton on Wednesday night, with the return game here on Saturday.

The game, which was described by many old-timers as among the best ever seen here, was lightning fast throughout and the crowd of 7,000 fans fairly shook the rafters with their cheering. The beaten team went into the contest brimful of confidence and forced the play from the face-off, but they could make no impression on the Cain-Hefferman-Crook defence. Parkes and Hiller came in time and time again, but only spent their strength in efforts and failed to gain results.

Hefferman's Great Play.

The spectators, surprised at the good showing of the Green Shirts, cheered them boisterously, but when Frank Hefferman relieved a dangerous attack, broke away fast, went by Merrick, drew Hainsworth out of the net, and scored the first goal of the match, the din and noise was terrific. Hats were thrown high in air and out on to the ice, grown men hugged each other and women screamed in sheer delight. Hefferman's feat, for generalship and coolness in execution, has never been surpassed, and he fully merited the applause accorded him.

St. Patrick's then opened up some fierce attacks, but although Muston, Breen and Cain got right in on Hainsworth they were unable to tally. Kitchener, at bay and battling for all that they knew how, hung on grimly, but against the telling back-checking and great defence work of the new group champions could make little impression.

From the face-off in the second period the Irish drive home the attack and practically swept the visitors off their feet. After two minutes Cain made a dash from end to end, passed perfectly to Dye and the latter, with a bullet-like shot, beat Hainsworth from thirty feet out. The applause had hardly died down when Dye came in again, outguessed Trushinski and notched the locals' third and final counter. These two goals, coming in quick succession, sounded the death-knell to the hopes of the gallant Kitchener team, and thereafter their struggle was waged against hopeless odds. The tricky Irish centre player was given a great hand by the crowd, and he deserved it. Dye has never been seen to better advantage, and his grand playing proved a thorn in the side of the visitors.

Waddell Trophy Games Begin To-day

The Waddell trophy games postponed from the open bonspiel were begun at the Curling rink this afternoon at 1:30, although for the convenience of the committee one of the contests was begun in the morning, George Benor and Percy Fitzgerald disposing of their games in order that seven ices might be available for the remaining four on rinks.

The draw was as follows:

Davidson vs. Giroux.
Best vs. Pennefather.
Brightman vs. Hicks.
Fitzgerald vs. Bonor.
J. E. A. Fitzgerald vs. Morrow.
McDermid vs. Wrightman.
Stevenson vs. Long.
Oke vs. Taylor.

Some of the rinks were scurrying around this morning collecting themselves. In one case a skip was missing. George Stevenson was out of town and his rink were in the air. Skip Hicks found himself alone in the world. All his rink were either absentees or under the weather. And so it went. The ice was fair, but the spirit of Spring was in the air.

Never boil a soup bone in an iron vessel.

HOCKEY

The Fire Hall team beat the North-enders last Friday night by a score of 6 goals to 1. At the end of the first half the score was 3-1, and it looked to be anybody's game, but in the second half the North-enders were winded and the Fire Hall team had an easy time of it. This is the third victory for the Fire Hall team.

BOWLING NEWS.

The prize winners at the George Street Alleys last week were:

N. Charos, first in ten pins.
P. Gettas, first in five pins.
Don. Sharpe carried off the B-class prize.

Good prizes will be given this week on the different alleys.

Ample Hospital Services For The Returned Soldiers

Major-General Newburn Makes Optimistic Remarks at Opening of the Christie Street Institution

TORONTO, March 3.— "There are 16,000 men overseas in hospitals who will be brought back as soon as it is possible. It has been thought unwise to move some of these patients until their condition is sufficiently recovered for them to stand ocean travel," said Major-General S. C. Mewburn on Saturday at the Christie Street Orthopedic Hospital, where he was the principal speaker at the formal opening ceremonies.

General Mewburn said that the hospital was to be a special hospital for the treatment of orthopedic cases in the Dominion. He was confident that it would supply the demands made upon it. In reviewing the work of the Military Medical Corps General Mewburn said that about 700,000 cases had been handled in hospitals overseas and in Canada, which figures were advanced to testify to the sacrifices of the medical profession during the war.

He pointed out that at the time of the signing of the armistice, the Government was fairly able to estimate the bed accommodation in Canada, and he thought that there was now ample hospital services in Canada to take care of returning soldiers. He estimated that several millions of dollars had been saved through the careful policy of the Government, and in closing paid a tribute to the generosity of Toronto during the war, which had been made manifest on many occasions.

Sir William Hearst made a brief address declared the hospital formally open. Brigadier-General John Gunn was chairman. The gymnasium was filled with those who accepted the invitation of the hospital staff to attend the function and inspect the institution.

INVITED TO TYRONE.

COBOURG, March 3.— Rev. W. T. Wickett, of Bethany, has accepted an invitation to Tyrone, Ont., Methodist Circuit for the next conference year.

Fighting Has Been Resumed

Ukrainians Will Re-open Hostilities at Six O'clock To-morrow Morning

(United Press.)

WARSAW, March 3.—The Ukrainian commander was reported to-day to have denounced the armistice effected with the Poles and to have announced that hostilities will be resumed at six o'clock to-morrow morning.

The Allied commission at Lemberg declared it will consider the re-opening of hostilities as an affront to all Entente powers and said that unless the denunciation of the armistice was withdrawn by midnight, the commission would leave Lemberg, holding the Ukrainians responsible for the consequences.

Premier Paderewski is greatly concerned at the turn in events and is conferring with the Polish Chief of Staff.

ON EVERYBODY'S LIPS AND IN THEIR HEARTS

Everybody was talking about it this morning. At home, in the factories, and shops, in the streets, where ever you went conversation touched upon one subject with which young and old were glowingly effusive. The delight that gleamed in the smiling faces of friends and strangers was simply the reflection of the inward ecstasy that responded with a quickening of the pulse to the spirit that was abroad. "Wonderful", "lovely" and similar superlatives were commonplace, but here and there the native gloom of the "kill joys" broke in with such suggestions as "How long will it last?" and "we're not out of the woods yet."

Atop a tall maple a lone Whiskey Jack warbled a sweet almost forgotten melody, and a flock of Pine Grosbeaks added their music to the prose chorus that rose up from the streets. March had certainly turned into the season's role a lion but with the caprice that is characteristic of Spring, had changed overnight to a sporting, it seemed, the sparkling atmosphere, and sight of Bermuda or Palm Beach to the sometimes snow belt. In the crisp, brilliant sunshine old winter seemed but a memory, "sunken without a trace," and hearts and faces were turned to the whims of April, the newborn life of May, and the returning normalities that are the hope and the need of the world of nature and men.

Testifies Woman Admitted Part In Making False Will

NEW YORK, March 1.—Charles Lockwood, of Stamford, Conn., formerly a Judge of the Probate Court of that State, a one-time Assistant District Attorney in this county, testified at the trial of Miss Edith F. Ranger, Richard H. G. Cunningham and Carl W. Myer that Miss Ranger admitted to him her part in the preparation of an alleged false will to get possession of her brother's estate of $300,000.

Henry Ward Ranger, artist, left the estate to the National Academy of Design by a will made in 1914. Miss Ranger contended that her brother left a subsequent will, naming her sole beneficiary, but that the instrument had disappeared. With the co-defendants on trial before Justice Vernon M. Davis in Supreme Court, Miss Ranger is accused of attempting to substitute a carbon copy of a false will to substantiate her claim.

"At a conference in my office on January 31, 1918," Judge Lockwood testified, "Miss Ranger said that her brother had made at least two wills of later date than the one in 1914; that Charles Phelps, one of the executors had done away with the later wills and that she had framed a will which Charles N. Wexler had typewritten, and which contained in substance what Mr. Ranger's later will contained. Miss Ranger said that she had obtained affidavits in New York State concerning the two later wills and that she would produce them at the proper time. She also said that it was her intention to use the will which was framed, merely to revoke the 1914 will."

Judge Lockwood said that during the conference in his office he asked Cunningham why he got Wexler into "this terrible scrape." Cunningham according to the witness, replied:—

"It is all my fault. These people played on my sympathy and I got Wexler into it, and I would rather cut off my right hand than have anything happen to him. If any one is to go to jail, I am the one to go."

Questioned by Theodore L. Waugh Assistant District Attorney, regarding his conversation with Miss Ranger, Judge Lockwood said that she told him of her anxiety to have Wexler proceed in the matter. The witness declared that he advised those at the conference to drop the whole matter as speedily as possible.

Indemnity Which Allies Will Demand

Payments will be Spread over 25 to 35 Years.

(Canadian Press.)

PARIS, March 3.—The Peace Committee on Reparation has estimated the amount which the enemy countries should pay the allies at 190 billion dollars, to be spread over a period of from 25 to 35 years. Of this amount France demands the immediate payment of five billion dollars in gold.

Three Inspiring And Instructive Addresses By Well Known Speakers Here For Conference

Rev. T. A. Halpenny, Rev. P.K. Dayfoot and Rev. C. A. Meyers Occupied Local Pulpits Yesterday.

Rev. T. A. Halpenny B.A., who is at present in the city attending the Sunday School Convention which opened this morning at George Street Methodist Church occupied two of the city pulpits yesterday. He preached at George Street Methodist Church at the morning service and in the evening the congregation of Bethany Tabernacle listened to Mr. Halpenny, who spoke on the importance of religious education as regards the child.

It was equally important with other education he said, because it is as important to train the heart as well as the head. So-called secular education may produce merely an expert but with selfishness and all other vices.

Mr. Halpenny referred to the four fold standard that has been taken up by the Y.M.C.A.

'And Jesus increased in wisdom and stature and in favour with God and man.'

Unless a boy has this four fold standard he is defective in some way. Men who belittle the Church of God are defective.

A Big Task.

The biggest task in Peterboro laying the foundation of life, and the first twenty-one years is the time to lay it. The speaker compared the building of the foundation of a human life with the building of a large edifice which must be built on the bed rock to withstand the advance of years. Although day school may be monotonous it is a necessary part of the foundation. A human being is not ready until he is twenty one years of age. A bird and some of the animals are able to move around after three days of life, but man prepares 21 years. Mr. Halpenny mentioned the different periods in a person's life and the sort of education that is required for each period. There is a specific period for heroes and heroines and in this period the hero side of religious training should be taught. There is the "teen" age, the age when the choice of life is made and when so many decide for Jesus Christ. The French motto at Verdun "They shall not pass." was improved upon by the speaker when speaking of the teen aged boy." They shall not pass without giving their life consciously. Everybody whom the child comes in contact with pours something in the foundation. Some pour in good and some pour in bad but which ever is poured in, the most must stand the test. There are innumerable tests. One is temptation and Mr. Halpenny was authority for the statement that only one per cent. of those boys that left Christian homes for the war went morally wrong, a wonderful record and one that speaks well of the foundations that are being laid by the religious institutions and Sunday Schools of this country. Another test is the money test. The boy to-day is taught to succeed monetarily even if he tramps on somebody else. It's only a short time since we fairly worshipped the millionaire.

"Which would we notice the most if they came into this building now, the munition millionaire or a soldier mutilated from service overseas", asked the speaker.

"The challenge to-day to the young people is to make sacrifices."

Speaking of the work of the Sunday School Mr. Halpenny said that 85 per cent. of the Church membership to-day is out of the Sunday School.

If the building is to be magnificent be sure of the foundation. Lloyd George, Beatty and Foch, those who led us through the late titanic struggle were laying their foundation for such leadership from one to twenty-one. The foundation though not conspicuous is very important.

Rev. P. K. Dayfoot

At the evening service at Murray Street Baptist Church, Reverand P. K. Dayfoot gave an interesting and helpful address on "What the Sunday School should expect from the Church". "We have often heard," he said, "the other side of the question or 'What should the Church expect from the Sunday School,' and are constantly reminded of things expected of the church." In considering the new phase there are three reasons the Sunday School should expect anything from the church. In the first place the Sunday School is part of the church. To many this is an old fact and to some a forgotten one. In the second place the Sunday School is the source of growth of the church At an executive meeting of the International Sunday School Association of America held recently in Toronto, Mr. Lawrence, the General Secretary of the Association said that 85 per cent. of the additional membership of the churches in North America came from the Sunday School. In the Baptist Church alone in Ontario during the past year of an increased membership of 2419, 1920 or 65 per cent. were from the Sunday Schools. These figures represent a slight decrease from the previous year when 70 per cent. came into the church while the average has risen as high as 75 per cent. The third reason for the Sunday School to expect anything from the church lies in the fact that the Sunday School is the largest field of operation of Jesus. There is no better field for working out the ideas of the church than in the Sunday School.

Certain Rights.

The Sunday School claims to have the right to ask certain things of the church. There are some outstanding obligations of the church. The first of these is provision or a building. While there is nothing to take exception to in the provision the church has made for the School here in many dation for grown-ups for church while the opening church members in the school are practically neglected as far as proper building goes. Secondly the Sunday School expects support from the church. My Dayfoot thought that the Sunday School should be trained in the responsibility of paying something to the church When the annual meeting is held in the budget of the church there should be a place for the Sunday School. In the big churches in Toronto there is always in the budget provision for the School.

In the question of the selection of staff which forms one of the obligations of the Church to the School the appointment of the Superintendent is a matter which should be settled between the Church and School.

In every church there should be a Board of Religious education. While there is in every churches four or five institutions for religious education, there is no connection between them though all are doing same work The Methodist and Presbyterian churches have already their Board of Religious Education and the Northern and Southern Baptists. The day is coming when the Canadian Baptists must also have theirs, consisting of the Superintendent of the Sunday School and the presidents of the different religious organizations so that all working for the same end together greater efficiency may be attained.

Practical Results.

In conclusion Mr. Dayfoot enumerated some of the practical results of organization as shown by testimonies written by some of the boys who attended a recent boys conference in the East. In these signed testimonies which came from boys of all ages they stated that they had consecrated themselves to Jesus. The Sunday School run by careful organization is the greatest factor for leading young men and women into church membership and church service.

Rev. C. A. Meyers.
